Somebody has discovered that PADEREWSKI could not qualify as an amateur in golf because he is a professional pianist. This is intentionally to reduce the argument to absurdity. Yet the Philadelphia Association sees nothing absurd in the matter. The settlement of the dispute seems a long way off, though the disqualified player has undisputed standing as an amateur among marksmen and tennis players. Football coaches, to be sure, are worthy of their hire. To the skillful coach the success of a match is often credited. That a man who coaches at football must call himself a professional on the golf field is a rash assertion. Any such case must be decided on its own individual merits, but this, according to the opposers of the ruling, has no merits. Of course, it only further befogs the matter to point out that a certain prizefighter has taken up golf and cannot play a round in fewer strokes than 100; prizefighters have not hitherto been listed as either amateur or professional golfers. When they play golf they are in a class by themselves.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Must Have Been a Superman.

That inclination or determination to believe which so often creates as well as confirms faith is required, and in considerable quantities, if one is to accept as true the tale from Berlin about the last voyage of the presumably good ship Pass of Balmaha. We are told that she was taken into Cuxhaven under the compulsion of a single non-commissioned officer who had been put aboard of her—whether from a submarine or not remains unrevealed, but no other source whence he could have been obtained is easily imagined—as a prize crew to do just that.

He must have been of more than ordinary efficiency, even for a German, if the story as told is veracious, for it is related that at least once, when he woke from a nap, he discovered that the Captain of the ship had disobeyed the prize crew's orders and turned her head toward a British port. Why a whole ship's company should have allowed one man to control her destinies and select her destination, particularly as he shared the common human need for occasional sleep—that is the first weak point in the narrative. Next, credulity is assailed by the statement that after the vessel reached Cuxhaven there was discovered, hidden away in her hold—away from the one non-commissioned German, of course—another prize crew, British, put aboard before he was and consisting of an officer and four men.

To the mystery why the regular crew submitted to the domination of a single German there is added, therefore, the second "mystery, at least as great, why the five Britons found that his presence made it expedient for them to hunt holes below and stay therein.

But destructive criticism of this kind does not overthrow the fact that the Pass of Balmaha is at Cuxhaven, though her owners had ordered her to Archangel. Those owners are Boston men, and not only have they a ship named the Pass of Balmaha, but they do business as the Pass of Balmaha Company. Why that pass should be so honored must be left for explanation by somebody who knows or can discover where the pass is—information which the present commentator confesses he does not possess and cannot find in the books accessible to him. It must be somewhere, however, and it hath an Irish sound—and a Boston ship, nowadays, naturally would have an Irish name. Later, one hopes, more details as to this remarkable voyage may be secured. Also the name of the non-commissioned German and light on how he worked his wonders.

Suggesting Return to Armor.

Sir ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE is one of several literary men who have for some time been advising that at least a part of the armor formerly worn by the higher grades of soldiers be given to the fighters of today, and now the military surgeons have been convinced by their hospital experiences that even from modern weapons an amount of protection well worth getting could be obtained from helmets and breastplates.

Nobody contends that any armor a man could carry would save him from death if hit squarely over a vital spot by any of the projectiles now in use while going at anything like full speed. The only claim is that metallic coverings, though not very thick, would prevent many of the slighter wounds inflicted by spent balls and small fragments of shells—wounds that are numerous in all the armies, often disabling, and, in war conditions, not infrequently fatal in their effects, in spite of the fact that if proper treatment could be promptly given they would be considered trivial.

So nearly immediate and complete was the abandonment of armor after gunpowder came into general military use that there must have been reasons for it that seemed conclusive to men who knew much more about the protection thus to be secured than does anybody now alive. Presumably the knights wore their accustomed and honored "harness," until the sternest sort of experience convinced them that they were better off without it. They were not a very ingenious lot, however, those knights, and it is at least possible—indeed, it seems probable—that something can still be done with a modified revival of their one important contribution to the utensils of war.

Modern soldiers do comparatively little marching, and the weight of armor would not be of much consequence or inconvenience in the trench fighting which has come to be the chief part of every campaign. To be saved from slight wounds—and their subsequent infection—would certainly be desirable, and it may easily be that the army that first puts on armor will have a decided advantage over its slower-thinking antagonists. If one does it the others will follow the example, and the time may come when an unarmored soldier will be as nearly unknown as a wooden warship.

A Specialist Earns a Reproof.

Whether or not Dr. H. A. SURFACE, Pennsylvania's State Geologist, is a descendant of the late and well-known, but much trusted, Charles Surface, we do not pretend to know. It is not impossible, however, and at any rate he is as rash as if he were, for he has made public announcement that there is no such snake as a hoop snake.

Such a statement by a State official causes both grief and anger. In the first place, it is a universal negative, and by all the laws of logic its accuracy is undemonstrable. Dr. SURFACE doesn't and cannot know that the hoop snake is a myth. The mere fact that he never saw a hoop snake gives him excuse—if he has looked for hoop snakes in a large fraction of all the places where they might possibly be—for doubt, but it really proves only one thing, which is, that he never saw a hoop snake. Other people have; at least others, and many others, have told their friends and acquaintances so, and not a few have written detailed accounts of the creature's appearance and habits.

We have ourselves seen such narratives in print, and read with simple faith that the hoop snake, instead of progressing by sinuous wrigglings, puts his tail in his mouth and rolls rapidly along the road until his selected victim is overtaken. Thereupon he unhoops with a brisk and graceful motion and utilizes the momentum previously acquired for making efficient a thrust or hook with the horn provided for him by generous nature. Some say the horn is at one end, and some at the other, of the hoop snake, but that is a small matter and hints that the snake has a horn at both ends rather than that there are no hoop snakes.

Dr. SURFACE has gone too far. Why should he, a geologist, be talking about any except fossil snakes? He and the other specialists who try to extend beyond their own domains the authority they have earned in them strain both their rights and their privileges. For all Dr. SURFACE knows, he may meet a hoop snake the very next time he strolls along a country road. Then he will be sorry, as has many another skeptic, for having put himself on record.

Franz Abt and Miss White.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

R. M. Tyrrell is moved to sarcasm because, in the Sunday Magazine of THE TIMES of July 18, there is mention of the song "When the Swallows Homeward Fly," composed by Maude Valerie White. R. M. Tyrrell says that the song was composed by Franz Abt. There can be no doubt of that. Famous music to Heine's "Die Loreley" was composed by Friedrich Silcher. The fact remains that some forty other composers also set it to music. One wonders whether R. M. Tyrrell would be moved to sarcasm by mention of Rossini's "Otello" and Bellini's "Romeo and Juliet" because there are more famous operas on those themes by Verdi and Gounod respectively. And does Puccini's "Boheme" automatically exclude Leoncavallo's "Boheme" from existence?

Incidentally, R. M. Tyrrell says that Franz Abt not only was the composer of "When the Swallows Homeward Fly," but the author. Was he?

A PROPAGANDA OF THRIFT.

How Banks Might Co-operate to Teach the Importance of Saving.

New York, Aug. 1, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on "The War's Lesson in Thrift" interested me very much. The editor left the "lesson" unstated, but to be inferred, namely, the importance to the United States of thrift on the part of its citizens, particularly at the present time.

With this same thought in mind, Mr. Elmer H. Youngman of the Bankers Magazine recently wrote:

> It must not be forgotten that we shall require a large amount of funds to finance our own enterprises which have been accustomed to go abroad for loans. To meet this demand, to take back our securities from Europe, and to provide for the international financing already coming to us as a result of the war, and which is bound to come in an ever-increasing volume, we must bring about a prompt and material addition to the saving capacity of our population.
> How is this to be done? The banker should lead in the work, for he best comprehends its importance. But the interest of the home, the school, the Church and of the Government must be enlisted.

To Mr. Youngman's words I wish to add the opinion that it would be well for bankers to unite by communities in order effectively to take the lead in "a thrift campaign." Let co-operation prevail among the banking institutions of each community, and local campaigns of information and education be carried on by the banks acting jointly, with the object of fostering thrift and accumulating capital for legitimate business purposes. Bankers owe it to their towns and cities, to the legitimate business of this country and to the commerce of the world to encourage the people to invest their money in legitimate enterprises, and to keep it away from fraudulent schemers. Bankers owe it to themselves, as well as to the business world, to encourage a wider exercise of thrift on the part of Americans than they have been accustomed to in the past.

It seems to me to be a duty of bankers to protect the public, by publicity of the right sort, against the insidious appeals of unscrupulous promoters of brass-edged securities, to try to divert into legitimate channels of trade hundreds of millions of dollars which annually flow into the treasure chests of the pirates of finance, who prey on widows and orphans, and sometimes on those who ought to know better than be caught by offers of 70 per cent. dividends. It is my firm conviction that a thorough, intelligent and prolonged campaign of publicity in almost any community, carried on by the banks acting jointly, would result in increased business for all the banks; that is, increased deposits which would be converted into working capital for carrying on business and increasing the prosperity of the business community.

First—To educate the people to a higher standard of thrift and thus actually increase the working capital of the community. America has a long way to go before it can approach the record of France, for instance, for widespread thrift and consequent widespread ability to invest in high-class securities.

Second—To educate the public to the economic usefulness of banking institutions. Too many people look upon a bank as "merely a place to put your money," losing sight entirely of the important part which the bank plays in maintaining the prosperity of the business world.

Third—To increase the stream of small contributions of capital into channels of legitimate business, and diminish the stream which flows into the illegitimate channels where the money is finally lost in the "slough of despond."

The public ought to be taught that the banks of deposit are like reservoirs which collect capital from many small sources for use when and where most needed for carrying on the business life of the community.

Two Men.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the frenzied panic on board the Grand Republic on Sunday night I consider it only proper to mention through your columns the coolness and calm activity of two young men on the forepart of the second deck. They, more than anything else, pacified and quieted the people in that part of the boat. A moment after the first mad wave of panic each climbed on a stool and called on everybody: "Sit down; everything is all right." I shall not forget those reassuring words as their loud voices swept over the tumult and in their faces one only read perfect composure and calmness, which alone helped many frantic ones to regain their senses. A rush for the upper deck was quickly observed by one of them, who, with remarkable agility, threw himself in the stairway and ordered all to stay on the lower decks. They helped many women and children who had fainted or fallen and forced many, even big men, to sit down. I was in a position to see all these actions, as I was standing near by with my wife and three young children. These two men remained on the boat after assisting others off at Coney, and it was then that I learned that these two modest chaps who had been so wonderfully cool were doctors, and am sorry to say I did not learn their names.

A Privilege of Genius.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The harm which men of achievement do when they preach success and how to attain it by burning the midnight Mazda lies in the effect of their words on ambitious young men. The latter are proverbially careless of their health, and are all so eager to follow distinguished advice that they disregard the generally accepted, age-old laws of moderate living when fame and success are dangled before their eyes. The loss to the community of those who, spurred in this way to efforts beyond normal human strength, break under the strain, and thereafter are so much dead timber, must be very large. It is the failure to recognize this which leads Mr. Folsey and others of exceptional endurance to say, in effect: "Edison can work in this way, and so can I; why not any one else?"

Pro-Germanism in Norway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Born and brought up in the home town of Johan Anker of Bergen, Norway, whom you quote in today's TIMES to the effect that Norway has many grievances against Germany, allow me to say that the people of Bergen, as well as Norway as a whole, are decidedly pro-German.

How does Mr. Anker know that it was a German submarine? Did Germany intend to sink the Iris for the mere pleasure of paying for it? Norway is pro-German and proud of it.

What Is a Woman?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a woman passenger of the railroads I was interested in Seth Low's suggestion that passenger fares should be reduced and freight rates increased because passengers vote and freight does not. I am wondering if his idea should become a law under which rate women passengers would be charged.

THE PACIFIST.

There stood a scarecrow in the field
On guard amid the golden yield.

Firm stood he under heaven's arch;
He was not fixed so he could march.

He had no weapon to resist—
In fact he was a pacifist.

'Twas also noticeable that
He had no brains inside his hat.

Because some crows restrained their greed
He cried, "Behold, how I succeed!"

Nor did he dream they learned to shun
Because the farmer kept a gun.

THE WORLD WOULD DESTROY A PHANTOM.

It Is Called German Militarism and Has No Existence Except in the Imagination of Its Enemies—Whence These Delusions?

By PROFESSOR RUDOLF LEONHARD,
University of Breslau.

Breslau, Germany, July 11, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among many things read today with astonishment the most astonishing for the German public is the often declared purpose of our adversaries to continue the war until German militarism should be destroyed. The acquaintances of mine regard these utterances as a very riddle. They do not understand what such words mean, because we have no other militarism than the Continental States of Europe, which struggle against our country.

Such a weapon is absolutely unavoidable for every commonwealth, which must protect the people against the hostile desires of the neighbors. The care for such a weapon would naturally not be diminished, but increased in the case of a defeat. But there are also other opinions about the sense of the mysterious opposition against Germany's so-called militarism. Many foreign people believe that there exists a German military caste to whom the Emperor himself belongs, having the tendency to begin as many wars as possible in order to enlarge the German territory and to bring other nations into a dependence upon Germany. But we know our Emperor's love for peace from daily experiences and cannot be mistaken about it.

However, it seems that the opposite feeling abroad is the result of a wrong interpretation concerning some former utterances of the Emperor made in order to deter those who would disturb the peace. The form of them seemed sometimes to be a little rough. But this was the natural consequence of the good conscience of the speaker and of his peace-loving heart. People who did not understand that were very bad psychologists.

Nowadays the "militarism" is more and more regarded as a dangerous quality of the whole German people, to begin bloody quarrels in order to conquer a dominion over the world. We all know here that nothing is further from the German mind than such desires. Therefore, it is difficult to conceive how such a misrepresentation about our tendencies could arise.

Asking for the reasons, we must confess that, indeed, there have been among us some enthusiastic persons, the so-called Pan-Germanists, a little party without any influence, who uttered from time to time rather fantastic ideas about the splendid future of our country. Their opinions were usually not even mentioned in the most widely spread German newspapers. The less they were respected in Germany the more they have been quoted abroad by the political enemies of our country in order to spread the illusion that such incautious aspirations were the very expression of the German desires. If that be true, we would observe now, after the victories a development of such tendencies in Germany. But they cannot be discovered here. I cannot deny that there are some patriots who dream of leading German thought toward the education of the world, but such hopes do no harm and have no political consequence.

If our foes really have made up their mind to destroy German desires of conquest under the name of militarism they cannot have any success. It is impossible to destroy a thing which does not exist. Therefore, if the war really will last until such a goal is reached, it will never end.

I do not say it in the interest of my people. I say it in the interest of the foreigners who are deceived by their rulers in order to sacrifice them for an impossible thing. Certainly the very goals of the deceivers are other ones, which they carefully hide, because their poor victims would not like to give their blood for the real wishes of their rulers. So I regret less my brethren than the brave soldiers of our enemies, among whom I had many very good friends before the war. It is worth while to die for his people, but it is not worth while to die for the destruction of a phantom.

Although I do not overrate the influence of my words, I think it is my duty to say my opinion openly. I cannot help them who do not wish to learn the truth.

Dr. RUDOLF LEONHARD.

A DOG'S LOVE DISCUSSED.

Instances of Fidelity and Some Facts Which Influenced Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apparently Dog Lover thinks that no instance can be found where a dog has sacrificed himself for a woman. Possibly he bases his conclusion with masculine self-appreciation on the assumption that only man's life is worthy of a dog's sacrifice. Personally I do not think that either man or woman is worth a second thought from most dogs.

As to a dog who died of a broken heart, has any such thing ever happened outside the field of fiction? However, I do know of a case where a dog is most decidedly unhappy when his mistress goes away on a visit, and will not be comforted until she returns. He is indifferent to the comings and goings of other members of the family, but his mistress he loves as no other person.

Why a dog fancies some people and not others, not even the dog can explain. Can any one tell why some people like dogs and others do not? Or why anybody likes anything or anybody rather than some other person or thing?

G. H.

Chatham, N. J., July 26, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to say, in answer to "Dog Lover," that I know of two instances in my own experience which would seem to show the affection of dogs for a mistress. When I was a child I owned a dachshund, my constant companion and friend. One day my parents saw the dog spring against me where I sat upon the grass, knock me violently aside and begin a furious attack which they thought was upon me. They flew to the rescue to find the little fellow struggling with a large copperhead snake, badly bitten, and fighting desperately, to save me, his little mistress of ten years.

Some years ago it was found necessary, because of going to France for an indefinite time, for my friend and myself to give away a St. Bernard we had raised from puppyhood. We found for him a luxurious home where he had every comfort and attention and love. He refused food or water, and died in three days. He had always been a perfectly healthy dog, was nearly three years old, and in splendid condition when he was taken to his new home. Every time he saw a woman in the distance he would run to see if it was my friend or me, and when he learned it was not, would throw himself on the ground moaning.

Surely these two dogs loved their mistresses.

D. WOODWARD.

Shady, N. Y., July 26, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In answer to "Dog Lover's" letter, I defy any man to show greater devotion from his dog than I have from my airedale, Patsy. He has not yet been put to the required test of "dying of a broken heart," but he neither eats nor sleeps if I leave him, and is sad and dejected until I return. He is kind and affectionate to others when I am near, but notices no one when I am away. A man feeds him and a boy takes him out, but his devotion is wholly to me. A lady visitor, finding him so melancholy once, asked what was the matter. When told it was because his mistress was out, she said: "Cheer up, Patsy, be a man. No man would mourn one woman like that!"

A WOMAN DOG LOVER.

New York, July 28, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A dog always shows most devotion to the person who takes him out in the open and exercises him. As this happens in most cases to be a man, some people get the idea that a dog always prefers his master to his mistress. Let the man feed the dog and the woman exercise him and you will quickly find out whom he prefers.

JOHN MOONEY.

Port Richmond, S. I., July 26, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Who ever heard of St. Bernard dogs, except as accompanying monks who "go them one better" in their avoidance of the fair sex? One of the most sympathetic and charming dog epics was "The Dog of Flanders," written by a woman hater. And the dogs of Flanders of today, do they remain supinely at home where the good wife remains, sheltered, within her four walls? Nay, not so. He rushes into the battle after his master.

Cruelty to Poultry.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The New York Women's League for Animals is doing all that can possibly be done to relieve the bad conditions in regard to the transportation of poultry, which are complained of in a letter to your paper signed "Eugene." We have a very active and efficient "Bird Committee," which regularly inspects the places where live poultry is exposed for sale, and has effected many improvements in the transportation methods and in the crates used, as well as in feeding, &c. Like all humane societies we are limited by lack of funds and lack of public interest in such work, and would welcome suggestions and recruits.

A WORD FOR THE BAYONET.

Many Soldiers Prefer Cold Steel to the Horror of Shrapnel.

Following the ridiculously absurd statements made by Jane Addams relative to bayonet charges made by men who had to be "inspired" with dope or made drunk, a great deal has been said and written about the use of the bayonet. The writer was in command of troops on three different occasions when positions were carried by bayonet charges, and his observations have been that there is no more occasion for excitement attending a bayonet charge than in carrying out a number of other tactics of offense and defense. It is not half as trying on a soldier to engage in a bayonet charge as it is to lay in shallow shelter trenches and be sprayed with shrapnel. Wounds from bayonets are generally clean-cut, and unless a man is struck in a vital spot the chances for his recovery are large, while men are often horribly mutilated when subjected to shrapnel fire, and receive such terrible wounds that, even though they are not in a necessarily vital spot, the nature of the wound makes recovery doubtful.

Statistics of the army medical corps show that a very small proportion of the wounds and fatalities in battles result from bayonets. The bayonet has a greater moral effect than it has as a weapon of destruction. A soldier will engage in a bayonet charge as readily as he will in any other manoeuvre he may be called on to perform in the line of duty. It is a well known fact that troops that have stood for hours under a withering rifle fire without flinching have broken badly when called on to stem a bayonet charge, so great is its moral effect. Numerous instances are recorded in military records where different organizations have scorned the use of bullets, preferring to attack with the bayonet. It is also a well known fact that the soldiers of certain nations prefer fighting with cold steel, and it is just as true that soldiers of certain other nations have a decided dislike to facing "cold steel."

MISS PAGE WEDS IN CHAPEL ROYAL

ASQUITH AND GREY PRESENT

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Miss Katherine Alice Page, daughter of the American Ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. Walter Hines Page, was married at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, to Charles Greely Loring, son of General Charles Loring of Boston.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Boyd-Carpenter, Sub-Dean of Westminster Abbey, assisted by the Rev. Edgar D. Sheppard, Sub-Dean of the Chapel Royal. The bride was given away by her father, and her brother, Frank Page, was Mr. Loring's best man.

The wedding was very simple because the Ambassador's family desired to avoid anything resembling a social function while the war is in progress. The floral decorations were beautiful, but not profuse. Members of the Government, representatives of the royal Court, and diplomats present wore morning dress.

The invitations virtually were limited to persons in official life and intimate friends of the family, the guests numbering hardly more than 100 all told. All the Ambassadors to Great Britain were present with their wives, and the British Government was represented by Premier and Mrs. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs. The military and naval attachés of the United States Embassy acted as ushers.

The bride's gown was of white tulle over crêpe de chine, with rows of old Brussels point lace around the underskirt. Her veil was of white tulle edged with pearls, and she carried a small wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaids, Miss Frances Leggett of New York, Miss Katherine Sefton of Auburn, N. Y., and Miss Joan Cavendish-Bentinck of London, wore gowns of écru lace with skirts in three flounces and with little jackets of green taffeta shot with silver. Their hats were of black tulle and velvet, and they carried lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, and the Ambassadors signed the register. Mr. and Mrs. Loring then went to the Page residence in Grosvenor Square, where they said good-bye to a few close friends before departing on their wedding trip. There was no formal reception.

After a brief period spent in England, Mr. and Mrs. Loring will go to the United States, and will be at home after Sept. 8 at their residence in Otis Place, Boston.

Among the gifts received by the bride were a fan of amber and old lace from King George and Queen Mary; two large cut glass vases from the American Society of London, and two silver fruit dishes from the American Luncheon Club.

PIRATE'S BALL AT NEWPORT.

Navy Aid Society's Branch to Entertain Next Wednesday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 4.—Women members of the Jamestown branch of the Naval Aid Society will give a private ball on next Wednesday night at the Jamestown Yacht Club. The Committee of Arrangements comprises Mrs. Thomas G. Ashton, Mrs. Arthur Cook and the Misses Elizabeth Davis, Margaret Levy, Harriett Wickes and Julia Wood.

The patronesses are MMes. Fletcher, wife of Admiral Fletcher; Harry McL. P. Huse, Frederick H. Levy, Charles H. Davis, Hobart A. Hare, J. Bertram Lippincott, Spears, J. Warren Buckler, Howard Benoist, Dunlap Owens, Arthur Baugh, O. R. Jackson, Kenneth F. Castleman, Roger Williams, P. L. Wickes, Charles N. McCloud, August C. Browning, Seaton Schroeder and Thomas G. Wilson.

Madame Catulle Mendes of Paris, who is conducting a sale at the Casino for wounded French troops, today received a check from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt for $2,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bull of New York are here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Pope remain three weeks as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Blair, Washington; Harry Parsons Cross, Providence; Mrs. Charles L. Pattullee, and Mrs. Sturgis Coffin, H. Cary Morgan and Henry C. Phipps, New York, are registered at the Casino.

L. Gordon Hammersley, New York; George F. Thompson, Philadelphia, and G. DeGrasse Catlin, U. S. A., are at Hill Top Inn.

Mrs. Binion Weds in South Africa.

Emanuel Hertz of 400 West Fiftieth Street received a cablegram yesterday telling of the marriage of his sister, Mrs. Sadie Binion, to H. C. Asher in Johannesburg, South Africa, on Monday. The bride is a sister of Dr. Joseph H. Hertz, Chief Rabbi of the United Congregation of the British Empire, formerly of New York. Dr. Hertz was rabbi of the Witwatersrand Congregation in Johannesburg from 1898 to 1911. When he went to South Africa he took his sister with him. She died last year, where she has been head matron of the Kinsington Orphan Asylum at Johannesburg.

Miss Cornelia N. Simons Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewar Simons of Arden, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Cornelia Neilson Simons, to Harry Lee King of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

PIERCE—BENNETT.

Herbert Pierce, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Pierce of Boston and a member of the staff of The New York Tribune, was married yesterday to Miss Mary Elizabeth Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bennett of Brooklyn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas F. Lynch at St. Jerome's Church. Roland Bennett was best man and Miss Eva Pierson was the bride's only attendant.

DINED BY PEMBROKE JONES.

Flag Officers of New York Yacht Club Entertained at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 4.—Pembroke Jones, owner of the sloop yacht Carolina and called the Commodore of the Newport Thirty-Footer Fleet, gave a dinner at his residence this evening complimentary to the flag officers of the New York Yacht Club.

The guests were seated about a large table, which was treated in floral effects in addition to the flags of the Commodore, the Vice Commodore, the New York Yacht Club burgee and the private yachting signal of the host. An orchestra played during the dinner.

The guests were Commodore George F. Baker, Jr., Rear Commodore Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, Fleet Captain Grenville Kane, Governor R. Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island, ex-Commodore Frederick G. Bourne, ex-Commodore Dallas Bache Pratt, ex-Commodore Henry Walters, Captain W. Butler Duncan, Chairman of the Membership Committee; George A. Gormack, Secretary of the New York Yacht Club; Frederic O. Spedder of the Race Committee, Ralph N. Ellis, Robert W. Emmons, 2d; Royal Phelps Carroll, Robert Perkins, Alexander S. Cochran, Eugene Thayer, John Rasseli Pope, and Pembroke Jones, Jr.

Mrs. Richard Stevens of Bernardsville, N. J., and her daughter, Miss Elsie Stevens, entertained a large dinner company at Hill Top Inn this evening, using one large table arranged in green effects, including a pretty arrangement of a forest with miniature lakes and about its borders tiny animals. Fejer's Orchestra played for the dinner and for the informal dancing which followed, with a number of other guests coming in.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, Mrs. Pembroke Jones, the Spanish Ambassador, and Mme. Riano, Mrs. Hamilton McKay Twombly, Mrs. Richard T. Townsend, Mrs. Richard Gambrill, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. Oelrichs, Mrs. James B. Duke, Mrs. Robert K. Cassatt, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Mrs. J. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Post, the Misses Mimi Scott, Gabrielle Warren, Barbara Rutherfurd, Rose B. Dolan, Mildred Rives, and Harriette A. Post, Jr. W. Riddle, George B. Post, 3d; Henry F. Eldridge, William A. Sands, Joseph Lorin Melikoff, Secretary of the Russian Embassy; Charles A. Sands, Preston Gibson, W. Hude Neilson, Maurice Roche, Francis Roche, George W. Widener, Jr.; Dr. Hamilton Rice, H. Perrin, Richard Gambrill, and George Henry Warren, Jr.

FLOWER FETE FOR CHARITY.

Society Women in Pittsfield Sell Blossoms for Hospitals.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4.—A flower fete was held in Pittsfield today for the benefit of the Pittsfield anti-tuberculosis hospitals, prominent cottagers contributing flowers from their gardens and a corps of young women acting as salespersons. Mrs. Walter Foxcroft Hawkins and Miss Dorothy Oakman arranged the fete, and among the patronesses were Mrs. William Pollock, Mrs. Elisha P. Whitehead, Mrs. Frederick Crane, Mrs. McWilliams, Mrs. Albert A. Sprague, Mrs. Frederick S. Coolidge, Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury, Mrs. Edwards Spencer, Mrs. Henry A. Francis, Mrs. Zenas Crane, the Misses Edith and Mary Bryce, Mrs. W. Murray Crane, Mrs. Max R. Butler, Miss Gertrude Watson, Mrs. Carlos M. Deheredi, and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane.

Among the corps of saleswomen were the Misses Gladys Pollock, Frances Plumb, Dorothy Insull, Mary Bradley, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Katherine Chesney, Frederika Brackin, Elizabeth Dutton, Virginia Whitehead, Eleanor West, Francis Colt, Elizabeth and Ernestine Wood, Gladys Pearson, Elizabeth West, Mrs. Stephen D. Keeler, and Mrs. Wade Botelier.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Cobb Coleman entertained at dinner tonight at Hillcroft, in Pittsfield, for Captain and Mrs. William Brackett and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Taylor of Chicago.

Marshall C. Kernochan has arrived at Holmesdale. He will play in the Berkshire tennis tournament, which will open Monday.

John P. Hegeman and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rogers, who have been staying at Curtis Field, have gone to Vermont.

Miss Adele Kneeland gave a reception and tea this afternoon at Fairlawn, in honor of Mrs. Henry Munroe Whitney of Tuxedo.

Charles C. Paulding, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew at Hotel Aspinwall, has gone to New York.

Miss Carolyn Deutsch of New York, who was stopping at the Maplewood Hotel in Pittsfield with her sister, Miss Mara Deutsch, was knocked down by a bicycle while crossing a street in Pittsfield this morning and her right hip was fractured. She will be taken to New York on Friday.

Arrivals at Hotel Aspinwall today were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Rothschild, Mr. Charles H. Isham, George Davoll, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Jones, Mrs. Clara J. Gordon, and C. W. Moller of New York.

HAILS THE E. B. McLEANS.

Bar Harbor Hears They Are to Return from Newport.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 4.—The news that Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean are to reopen their cottage here for the remainder of the Summer is hailed with general pleasure, for in past Summers the McLeans have taken the leadership in social affairs. They have been identified with the Newport colony for the last three years. Their cottage has been ordered put in readiness for their arrival on Saturday.

Charles Warren, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bliss at Devilstone.

Mrs. Henry T. Dortic has issued cards for a tea at the St. Sauveur parlors on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Rogers gave a dinner last night at their Summer home, Balance Rock.

A benefit for the Building of Arts is announced for Tuesday, Aug. 17. The program will include tableaux, followed by a costume ball. Among those who are to pose are Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Miss Bell Gurnee, Miss Katherine Steward, Mrs. Ernesto Fabbri, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schelling, Henry T. Leggett, Miss Matilda Bigelow, Mrs. John T. Linzee, Miss Alexandra Emmet, Miss Jeannie Emmet, Howard Sturges, Miss Mary Canfield, Albert E. Gallatin, and Maurice Fremont Smith.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Burns Parker of 562 Riverside Drive have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edna Vera Parker, to Arthur E. Stanger of this city. Miss Parker is with her parents at their Summer home at Point Pleasant, N. J. She is a sister of Mrs. Alfred MacCloud of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Brace of this city have joined Mrs. Brace's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus L. Hyde, at Saranac Inn, Upper Saranac, N. Y.

Mrs. E. H. Harriman and her daughter, Miss Carol Harriman, have left on their private car for San Francisco, where they will join Roland Harriman, who took a party of friends to the Panama-Pacific Exposition some time ago.

Miss Anne Morgan, who was to sail for Europe this month, has postponed her trip indefinitely.

A masquerade and fancy dress ball is to be given at the Allenhurst Club, Allenhurst, N. J., on Wednesday night, Aug. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Heth Lorton, who have been at Matoa, their country place at Garden City, L. I., are leaving on a trip to the Pacific Coast, and will be absent several months.

JEWELS OF THE IDOLS OF TIBET ARE HERE

Metropolitan Museum Has the Rare Collection Made by Lockwood de Forest.

ALSO RICH GEMS OF INDIA

There are many beautiful things to be shown among the accessions to the Metropolitan Art Museum this month. In the wall cases in the Gold Room on the second floor is a collection of Indian and Tibetan jewelry and metal work, the latter massed in a barbaric manner with precious and semi-precious stones. There are textiles and a fine door and cashing from an old-time mansion near the Tower of London shown in the Recent Accessions Room. Upstairs, in one of the lace rooms, is an adorable collection of dolls.

The Gold Room exhibit is a purchase made from the Kennedy fund and brought together by Lockwood de Forest, the artist, who recently visited the East largely in the interest of the Museum. The Tibetan jewel work is novel. Few of these pieces have ever been brought out of the country, and not a museum in India can show such a large number of finely jeweled examples as are now to be seen in New York.

Among these pieces is a plaque, the elaborate design set almost solidly with jewels, with little human figures carved from coral and turquoise. The latter stone is used largely in all the pieces, as it is considered a charm against the evil eye. There are ecclesiastical ornaments—two plates, the cover of a libation bowl, the gold box used to keep the jewels of the idols. There is also a full-sized head of the patron saint of Tibet, Avalokita, adorned with jeweled ornaments. The head is of copper repoussé, overlaid with gold, and wears a five-pointed tiara. The long-lobed ears, signs of wisdom, are pierced for the great jeweled earrings. The wonder of all these pieces is the massed setting of the jewels and the great numbers and variety—diamonds, pearls, rubies, emeralds, and the semi-precious stones.

Beautiful in design is the Indian jewelry in both gold and silver, the latter worn by the lower and the former by the higher castes. There are armlets and anklets, necklaces, headpieces, and belts for human wear, with offerings to the gods, and trappings for horses and elephants. There are many ornaments with little bells which tinkled as the Indian beauties moved. Nature is copied in many pieces. Seed pods are strung together in thick clusters, but light in weight, for both the silver and gold are beaten out to miraculous thinness. The gold is of the richest deep yellow, the metal almost unalloyed. In several of the necklaces seed pearls are used in great profusion with other jewels.

Two Tibetan statues of "Droima, Goddess of Mercy," are in the Recent Accessions Room. Among the textiles are many Saris, the scarf worn as an outer garment by the Indian women, gauzy things, beautiful in color and design.

The English door came from the London house known as 25 Crutched Friars, in a district once occupied by wealthy merchants, the houses being demolished in 1913 to make way for new buildings. The door, if not actually done by Sir Christopher Wren, is similar to one by the architect in the South Kensington Museum. It is entirely of pine, with daylight glazed with the old glass. The carving is intact. It has the original bell pull and lock. The door is undressed, as it now stands, in the original wood, some fourteen coats of paint having been scraped from it.

There are thirty dolls in the collection in the lace room, and they are so altogether charming that they would make a small girl dream dreams, and even grown women find them irresistible. They are dolls with mature faces and are not playthings, but a part of the study outfit of the museum. They are in costume dating from the end of the fourteenth century to 1874. They were dressed and coiffeured by Mrs. T. A. Lightfoot, and the designs are copied from illuminated manuscripts, from tapestries and from books and pictures.

Opera singers, actors, designers, and others who have to do with costume, find models such as these of great value. Caruso, when in New York, spends much time in the museum. Mme. Gadski is a frequent visitor. David Warfield goes there for studies, and Ruth St. Denis gets hints from the museum for her Egyptian dances and poses.

A doll representing Mary of Burgundy of 1840, after a Memling portrait, has a long flowing skirt, a short, straight and low-cut white bodice. The hair is worn in tight braids on either side of the face and is carried over a wide, soft, white band which encircles the head. There are two little Nuremberg figures of the Albrecht Dürer period, a maiden with flowing locks and a matron with draped skirt in the front. The Venetian woman of the XVI. century, in blue brocade, pointed bodice and flaring lace collar, has her hair dressed in two standing horns in front. Anne of Clives is in red velvet, and Jane Seymour is in blue. Margaret of Navarre, wife of Henry IV., is picturesque in black, and an early Mary Stuart, with the familiar headdress, is in a pale green gown with rose color sleeves.

In the Louis XIV. period Mme. de Montespan is in gorgeous costume, Marie Antoinette wears a high coiffeur of powdered hair and is magnificent in a gown of pale blue. In this lot are the quaintly gowned women of the nineteenth century, and there is actually a Grecian bend worn by the woman of 1874, in pale green silk trimmed with black lace and black velvet. The skirt of her gown is finished with many ruffles, there is an overskirt, the long basque has a black velvet vest inset, around the flowered hat is a black lace veil, and the figure carries a black lace-covered parasol.

Each little doll is an absolute counterpart of the women of its period in every detail. A few other doll women are to be added to bring more nearly to date what the Museum calls "Une promenade de toilettes."

Belasco Able to be Out Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 4.—David Belasco, who suffered an attack of indigestion in the Monterey Hotel here yesterday, was about the hotel tonight. He will return to New York on Sunday.

"The Messiah" Sung at Columbia.

The Columbia University Summer Session Chorus sang "The Messiah" last night in St. Paul's Chapel, on Morningside Heights. The large hall was filled to its capacity. The chorus was led by Professor Walter Henry Hall, head of the Department of Music at Columbia University and leader during the Winter of the large Columbia University chorus, which sings oratorios at Carnegie Hall. He spent many weeks training the chorus for the concert last night.

Galvin, Miss Stuart Golt, Oliver Hoyt, Miss Isabel Kerr, John T. McCutcheon, Mrs. H. Martin, R. Mayer, Mrs. A. Netter, Miss M. M. Oates, J. M. Patterson, J. D. Smith, Charles Vere, J. D. Smith.

Among those who sailed yesterday for Liverpool on the Adriatic were:

J. Crookston, H. F. Dawson, W. S. Hudson, M. A. Kennedy, Commissioner David C. Lamb, Salvation Army; Miss Sears, Mrs. G. M. Wilmot, and Dr. W. Young.

SOCIETY AT RIFLE TOURNEY.

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., Aug. 4.—At the Crawford Grill following the tennis this evening were Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Currier, Mr. and Mrs. King Smith, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Foster, Dr. Cleveland, Henry S. Schley, Lyle Leverich, Robert Bray, A. E. Kent, and Hollis Wolstenholme.

R. M. Elliott, of the Department of Psychology at Harvard University, is the guest of Frank Dodge at the Mountain View House.

The Rev. Archibald Campbell I. Knowles of Philadelphia with his family is spending a few days at the Mount Washington.

Many of the Sugar Hill colony motored to Lisbon to attend the lecture given by Mrs. Winston Churchill.

Arrivals at the Fabyan House include Mrs. S. D. Adams, who motored from Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Sheppard of Ottawa, Mrs. Samuel J. Harmon of Baltimore, and the Rev. J. J. Johnston of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble McConnell of New York have left Bretton Woods for Bar Harbor, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Stanwood Mencken, who motored up for a few days from New York with Hans Von Briesen, left for the Waumbek at Jefferson.

D. L. Anderson of Philadelphia is at the Mount Washington Hotel. Others there are Miss Maxwell of Rockville, Conn.; J. N. Conyngham, President of the Bretton Woods Company, with Mrs. Conyngham, her mother, Mrs. J. Hood Wright of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Hubbard.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cumnock and the Misses Cumnock, Dr. and Mrs. John W. Farlow, Mrs. Edward L. Adams, Mrs. George J. Putnam and Miss Ruth Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Hart and Mrs. C. A. Fairbanks have joined the colony of Boston people at the Profile House.

Mrs. David L. Bartlett of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Jenkins of Baltimore, accompanied by Mrs. Ral Parr, are at the Profile House for August.

The first rifle tournament at the Maplewood Gun Club began on Monday and continues through the week. A silver trophy goes to the winner of the best total out of any hundred rounds. The high score will stand in competition for the season trophy.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Seaver Willing are entertaining at their cottage in the Waumbek colony P. D. McFadon and Mrs. R. Dean McFadon of Chicago. Mr. McFadon came up from Willing's farm in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Jay of Patchogue and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lyons of Brooklyn have joined the Waumbek colony. Mrs. J. S. Appleby and children have come from Glen Cove and Mrs. E. B. Foster and Miss Foster are there for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bamford and Mrs. T. W. Hoxie of New York, on a motor trip from Southampton, are spending a few days at Jefferson.

Miss Beatrice Smith of New York is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Frenenberg at the Maplewood. L. Wellyn Bixby and family of Long Beach, Cal., are at the Maplewood for August after having motored all the way over the Santa Fé trail.

A terrific gale in the White Mountains that began last evening ended in rain this afternoon, and drove the tennis players and golfers indoors, where bridge and dancing compensated them for giving up their sport. Dansants were given at the Uplands, Bethlehem; the Maplewood Casino; the Foret de Danse, at Bretton Woods, and the Profile House. The Kessarge, Sunset Hill, Waumbek, and Mountain View all followed suit, and at the Balsams many remained at the golf club for tea. The women's golf tournament and the New Hampshire State championship at Crawford Notch suffered most, and large galleries of Summer visitors gathered to watch the play scampered in for tea as the storm broke.

In the swimming pool at the Mount Washington Hotel this afternoon were Egerton Warburton, the Misses Schumacher, Miss Torrey, Miss Oakes, Charles Dinkey, Leonore Dinkey, the Misses Croft, Miss Hamilton, and Miss Gurley.

STORM HITS NARRAGANSETT.

Northeaster Causes a Postponement of Point Judith Sports.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 4.—Narragansett was stormbound today. A tempestuous northeaster caused a heavy sea to roll in along the coast and dashed showers of spray high on the rocks beyond Ocean Road. The surf was the highest of the season and presented a fine spectacle.

On account of the storm, the Point Judith tennis tournament, the women's golf tournament on the Point Judith links, and the polo matches planned for today were postponed.

In a fox-trot contest at the Casino a silver cup was awarded to Miss Kitty Penn Smith of Philadelphia, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brown of Philadelphia, at their Pier villa.

Mrs. Alfred E. Norris of Philadelphia entertained informally at dinner last night at the Lodge for her daughter, Miss Dorothy Norris, who will make her début in Philadelphia next Winter.

Miss Florence Kane of New York entertained at dinner tonight at Ridgelawn and in her party were Miss Kaltenhan Schermerhorn, Miss Mary Comstock, Miss Olivia Gazzan, Edward Rundell, Miss Alice Foster, Philip Prescott, Jr., Joseph Bowen, and Donald Bowen.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brown of Philadelphia gave a dinner last night at the Casino. Among their guests were A. J. Antelo Devereux, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fell, and Mrs. Howard H. Henry.

Mrs. Julian Potter of New York, who arrived here from Newport last night, is at the Arlington.

Mrs. Walter Russell, Miss Marie Russell of Detroit, and M. H. Biddle Paul of Philadelphia are late arrivals at the Imperial.

Mrs. Harry H. Holmes of Great Neck, L. I., is registered at the Gladstone.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Edgar MacGregor has returned from Rochester, where he has been directing the Manhattan Players in a Summer season in stock. He will begin rehearsals soon of Frank Mandel's new farce, "Sherman Was Right," for H. H. Frazee, and a few weeks later will produce a new farce by Max Marcin, entitled "Are You My Wife?"

William Collier will direct the rehearsals of "No. 13 Washington Square," the comedy in which May Irwin will be seen late this month in the Park Theatre.

The first performance of Edgar Selwyn's farce, "Rolling Stones," will be given in the Harris Theatre on Tuesday night, Aug. 17. The cast includes Charles Ruggles, Harrison Ford, Arthur Aylesworth, Frank Kingdon Harry Bradley, James Kearney, and Rae Selwyn.

The Keystone Film Company, a moving-picture concern, must file a detailed accounting of all moneys received on account of "Tillie's Puncture Romance," a picture in which Marie Dressler, the actress appeared, under a ruling made yesterday by Justice Paige. The actress asserts that her appearance in the picture was on a joint ownership basis.

HOW GERMANY RULES A CITY OF CAPTIVES

Holds 10,000 Behind Palisades and Governs Them as in a Municipality.

GUARDS AGAINST DISEASE

A recent issue of the Giessener Auzeiger contains what is probably the fullest account of a German prison camp which has yet reached this country. It describes a camp, or rather a barrack city, near the university town of Giessen, in Upper Hesse, where from ten thousand to twelve thousand prisoners of all nationalities are confined.

"When, about eight months ago," says the German newspaper, "the first residents of the great barrack city, which was erected on the Trieb in the Fall, arrived, windows and doors flew open, the curious rushed out to the street corners, and the cry, "Here come some prisoners," was sufficient to bring the children to their feet. Since then thousands and still more thousands of captured enemies have gone to and fro along the streets leading from the railroad station to the Trieb—representatives of all the races which are in the field against us must go their way—from the husky Scotch Highlander to the puny Belgian civilian who was preserved at the last moment by capture from fruitless military service, from the stupid Tartar who bends down in the street to pick up a cigar butt to the highly cultured French college professor, from the gigantic Sengalese to the thin, turbaned Indian, from the Canadian auxiliary to the gaudily dressed Zouave. But the interest that the populace feels toward the strangers is not yet extinguished, though they give hardly a glance to the little detail of laborers that goes on its way willingly and freely, with its Landsturm escort; curiosity is still rampant when a draft of unusually large size arrives or the arrivals are of a rare sort, such as the crew of the English torpedo boat Destroyer Maori, which arrived recently. On Sundays, too, the interest in the manifold activity on the Trieb shows itself in the strolling of great crowds along the Gruenberger Strasse, which furnishes every hand along its high picket fence, something strange and something worth looking at, and tells so plainly and so impressively that somewhere in the world outside, far away from the Sunday afternoon strollers, there is war, from which our men in field gray send to us living and involuntary witnesses.

There you can hear all sorts of expressions of sympathy or antipathy. The French, who go their way with friendliness and politeness, fare the best. The Russians are regarded with a grateful feeling of superiority—thank God, we are not as they! The English receive something of the regard which is given to wild beasts behind iron bars, but there is not much good-will in the looks which examine their conceited, smooth-shaven faces.

Camp Governed Like a City.

The writer then goes on to tell how he was permitted by the commandant, Major Gen. von Petersdorff, to make a visit to the camp, which consists of fifty barracks, and is described as being operated by a machinery of government no less complicated than that of a moderate-sized city.

The trip around the camp, he says, began promptly at 9 o'clock in the morning. The camp includes, in addition to the administration buildings, lying outside, about fifty barracks, which are each and every one built on a pillar foundation raised about half a meter above the ground. Absolute dryness is thus secured for the rooms. The building material is creosoted wood. The rooms can be heated, and are well ventilated in Summer. They serve various purposes; naturally the most space is given up to living rooms. Around them are ranged the extensive ward barracks, kitchens, bath and wash houses, guard houses, canteens, and church barracks. Between the buildings run at right angles the camp streets, which are kept clean and are above reproach even in the worst weather.

Inside the palisade which surrounds the whole institution lie ten separate company subdivisions, each including five barracks and surrounded by a stout fence. Each company is commanded by an elderly officer, usually a Captain. The streets and open spaces of the camp are all drained and connected with the city sewers. The wires of the electric light plant and the telephones cross them in all directions, and the streets and squares lie in sight of the numerous riflemen's towers on the surrounding wall, and can be brought under fire from outside batteries if a revolt should necessitate such strong measures.

The residential barracks serve in the first instance as resting places for the night and in bad weather. Every prisoner has a clean straw mattress with appurtenances, and wide shelves on the wall above are provided for his property. Large basins and basins filled to the brim with clear water serve for the morning toilet. Air, light, cleanliness and painstaking order prevail here just as in a German barrack which is expecting a visit from the Inspector; windows and floor shine with recent cleanings. Every company possesses in its barracks its own workrooms, where behind big sheets tailor and shoemaker rule in their own domains, and undertake repeat and small repairs on shoes and clothing.

Feeding the Prisoners.

Ten enormous kitchens care for the feeding of the prisoners. In the early morning three or four prisoners, under the supervision of a skilled German cook, are already busy with the preparation of the varied meals of the day. In four huge kettles, almost breast high, there is a constant simmering. On the wall hangs the bill of fare for the week, and from the specimens given below one can see how the question of feeding the prisoners is solved. When it is noted that each prisoner gets a daily ration of 300 grams (about two-thirds of a pound) of bread, one wonders where the men who are interned here enjoy such rich and nutritive fare at home. Here are extracts from the bill of fare for a week:

SUNDAY.	FRIDAY.
MORNING.	MORNING.
Sugar, 50 grams.	Rumford soup, 80 grs.
Coffee, 3 grams.	NOON.
NOON.	Canned peas, 120 grs.
Beef, 125 grams.	Potatoes, 400 grams.
Noodles, 120 grams.	Fat, 40 grams.
Potatoes, 300 grams.	NIGHT.
Fat, 20 grams.	One herring.
NIGHT.	Potatoes, 600 grams.
Barley soup, 100 grams
Potatoes, 200 grams.
Fat, 20 grams.

Next to the shining kitchens, whose exemplary condition and the white-clad cooks would not disgrace a hotel, the writer continues, are the storerooms, where on high shelves bread, fruits, vegetables, and preserves of all sorts wait till they are needed.

Care which could hardly be increased has been given to cleanliness and health, not only in the interest of the prisoners, but in that of the country. Every prisoner who is brought into the camp has his heart and kidneys tested by the camp physicians; he must undergo inoculation against cholera, typhus, and smallpox, is examined as to his general condition of health, receives a haircut and a bath, is disinfected in body and clothing—and as a token of the fact that he is no longer to be disregarded from the hygienic point of view he has a "health button" attached to his uniform. Besides the washing facilities in the living barracks, already described, there are long wooden tables in front of the barracks, on which the population, thanks to the numerous hydrants, can place their clothing for thorough cleaning as often as is needed.

Inside the camp are two barracks for the reception of the sick, and the barracks of the marching gun platoon has been fitted up as a general prisoners' hospital. Within its courtyard are several buildings used as wards for diseases such as tuberculosis. In the lofty, airy rooms reigns the peace of the hospital. German and French sanitary servants hurry to and fro; the doctors in their white mantles go about among the clean beds. The extensive wards, which at present have several hundred patients, are hardly different from a great hospital. All possible care is taken of the sick. Convalescents in hospital clothing, parade about the roomy courtyard.

Although by the measures which have been here adopted the greatest possible care has been taken so that the danger of an epidemic belongs practically to the realm of impossibilities, yet every preparation has been made even for such a contingency. Several isolated barracks are ready, separated from the other buildings, large, dazzlingly bright and clean, but, thank God, unoccupied.

On the side of the camp toward the forest lies a church barrack, which serves the religious needs of the inhabitants of the camp. At present there are in the camp, with surprisingly few exceptions—some Russian Jews—only Catholics—French, Belgian, and English. A special clergyman, who has taken up his residence in Giessen, is assigned to the spiritual care of the French. Divine worship is regularly attended by the prisoners, though no compulsion is used upon them.

So far as is compatible with his orders and with the spirit of a prison camp, the camp commandant, the writer says, meets in a spirit of humane friendliness the demand of every prisoner, no matter how sluggish his spirit may be, for some interruption to the monotony of camp life. So, among other measures, an orchestra has been organized among the prisoners, and many a passerby outside the stockade has insisted on stopping to hear its music. The prisoners amuse themselves with all sorts of games. On Sundays there are carefully organized athletic sports, and on a stroll through the camp one sees on every side the men busy with harmless occupations which sometimes—for the devil will eat flies when he is hungry—have a childish character that is quite overpowering.

The pride of the camp, in its efforts for pastime and variation, are the recently established libraries, which are under the control of prisoners who can speak several languages, and are opened twice a day, with an interval at noon, for several hours at a time.

At the main entrance is a fire patrol organized by Chief Braubach of the City Fire Department, which has at all times six men ready for instant call and in case of necessity can call out twenty-four men of the battalion of guards. The city has furnished the necessary apparatus. In every company inclosure there is a fire alarm which through a simple pressure of the button shows the fire patrol the place where fire has broken out. The city motor fire engine can be brought in seven minutes by telephone. So most of the danger of fire, which in view of the inflammable camp is built of tarred timber might be a dangerous enemy, has been removed.

PUTS BUDGET POWER WITH THE GOVERNOR

Constitutional Convention Committee Favors Drastic Change in State's Financial System.

CHANGES THE FISCAL YEAR

Gives Executive the Power of Initiative in All Appropriations, Reversing Present Procedure.

ALBANY, Aug. 4.—A drastic revision of the State's budget system, transferring the duty of making the budget from the Legislature to the Governor, is recommended in the final report of the Committee on State Finances, which was submitted to the Constitutional Convention today. It will be followed by the presentation of a proposal tomorrow embodying the committee's recommendations. The report and proposed amendment received the indorsement of every member of the committee with the exception of Senator Robert F. Wagner, who will submit a minority report.

The sixfold increase in the running expenses of the State since 1885 is attributed in the report of the committee largely to loose financial methods and the present system of budget making under which appropriations are initiated by the Legislature with the Governor exercising only a limited veto power. The report point out it is essential that the method should be reversed; that the Governor should take the initiative and the Legislative should hold the purse strings, by having the power to cut down but not to increase items in the appropriation bills submitted by the Governor.

The report points out that in this period the population of the State has increased only 32 per cent. and the assessed valuation of real and personal property, subject to taxation from $3,-224,682,343 to $12,070,346,000, due largely, not to real increase in property values, but to new methods of taxation and an increase in the percentages of assessment. In New York City, for instance, the rate of real estate assessment has been raised from about 67 per cent. to about 10 per cent. of the market value.

The per capita cost of government in this State last year was $5.41 as against $2.47 in 1895. The growth of population in the same period was only 53 per cent., and the increase in assessed valuation, including fictitious increase, was 17 per cent. For purposes of comparison the fourfold growth in the cost of the Federal Government compared with an 84 per cent. growth in population in a period of thirty years is set forth in the report.

What the Committee Proposes.

The new budget plan proposed by the committee is set forth as follows in the proposal to be presented to the convention:

On or before the 15th day of November in the year 1916 and in each year thereafter the head of each department of the State Government, except the Legislature and the judiciary, shall submit to the Governor itemized estimates of appropriations to meet the financial needs of such departments, classified according to relative importance and in such form and with such explanation as the Governor may require. The Governor, after public hearing thereon, at which he may require the attendance of heads of departments and their subordinates, shall revise such estimates according to his judgment.

Itemized estimates of the financial needs of the Legislature, certified by the presiding officer of each house, and of the judiciary, certified by the Controller, shall be transmitted to the Governor before the 15th day of January next succeeding for inclusion in the budget, without revision, but with such recommendation as he may think proper.

On or before the 1st day of February next succeeding he shall submit to the Legislature a budget containing a complete plan of proposed expenditures and estimated revenues.

It shall contain all the estimates so revised or certified and shall be accompanied by bills for all proposed appropriations and re-appropriations, clearly itemized. It shall show the estimated revenues for the ensuing fiscal year and the estimated surplus of revenues at the end of the current fiscal year, together with the measures of taxation, if any, which the Governor may propose for the increase of the revenues. It shall be accompanied by a statement of the curren assets, liabilities, reserves and surplus or deficit of the State; statements of the debts and funds of the State; an estimate of its financial condition as of the beginning and end of the ensuing fiscal year; and a statement of revenues and expenditures for the two fiscal years next preceding said years in form suitable for comparison. The Governor may before final action by the legislature thereon, amend or supplement the budget.

A copy of the budget and of any amendments or additions thereto shall be forthwith transmitted by the Governor to the Controller.

Hearings on the Budget.

The Governor, the heads of such departments, and the Controller shall have the right, and it shall be their duty, when requested by either house of the Legislature, to appear and be heard in respect to the budget during the consideration thereof, and to answer inquiries relevant thereto. The procedure for such appearance and inquiries shall be provided by law.

The Legislature may not alter an appropriation bill submitted by the Governor except to strike out or reduce items therein, but this provision shall not apply to items for the Legislature or Judiciary. Such a bill, when passed by both houses, shall be a law immediately, without further action by the Governor, except that appropriations for the Legislature and Judiciary shall be subject to his approval, as provided in Section 9 of Article IV.

Neither house shall consider further appropriations until the appropriation bills proposed by the Governor shall have been finally acted on by both houses; nor shall such further appropriation be then made except by separate bills, each for a single work or object, which bills shall be subject to the Governor's approval, as provided in Section 9 of Article IV. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the Governor from recommending that one or more of his proposed bills be passed in advance of the others to supply the immediate needs of Government.

Other Reforms Proposed.

The committee recommends an amendment to Section 21 of Article III. under which appropriations would lapse three months after the end of the fiscal year for which they have been made. Under the present system appropriations run for two years.

Another amendment to the same section and article would make all appropriations by the Legislature next year available for the period ending June 30, 1917. After that day the amendment provides for a fiscal year beginning July 1 instead of Oct. 1 as at present.

Under the heading "Objections and Answers" the committee thus justifies the radical changes it recommends:

"Critics have assailed the system as novel and un-American. To answer such criticism it is only necessary to remind the convention that this procedure was practiced by the first national Administration of this country under President Washington and his Cabinet officers."

The report also points out that the system has been applied under American rule in Porto Rico and the Philippines, and has recently been established in Minnesota, Iowa, and Illinois.

"The fear that the proposed budget system would deprive the Legislature of power or dignity is, we believe, a complete misconception," the report continues. "On the contrary, the Legislature would be restricted only to the extent of being protected from disrupting influences while considering the budget. It would retain power of initiation thereafter; and, in addition, it would be restored to its lost position of dignified and effective control over appropriations.

"Under present methods, financial legislation has been in danger of degenerating into a scramble for local favors and privilege. The proposed system makes it possible for the Legislature to consider from a State-wide viewpoint the broader financial interests of the State.

"Under present methods the Legislature has been gradually surrendering its most vital power in financial legislation to the Executive veto. The proposed system will restore that power and make it final. Nor is there the slightest force to the claim that the proposed system would give undue power to the Governor. It would add not one iota to the power that he now possesses through the veto of items in the appropriation bills.

"Whereas now that power is subject to no review, and thus may be used as an instrument of reward or punishment after the legislative session is over, the proposed system would deprive him of his veto as to budget items and would thus compel him to use his influence in advance, in the open, under the fire of legislative discussion and the scrutiny of the entire State. It would thus be the Legislature which would have the final word."

HOME RULE ARTICLE WIDENS CITY'S RIGHTS

Confers Authority to Revise Charter and to Control Many County Officials.

ALBANY, Aug. 4.—Charter revision for New York City by an elective commission of sixteen members, subject to ratification by the voters in the city and also to legislative veto, is provided in the proposed new home rule amendments which will be presented to the Constitutional Convention tomorrow by its Committee on Cities, of which ex-Mayor Seth Low is Chairman.

Of the members of the proposed Charter commission, nine would be elected by the voters of the city at large, two by the electors in the Borough of Manhattan, two by the electors in the Borough of Brooklyn, and one each by the electors of the Boroughs of Bronx, Queens, and Richmond, respectively. This allotment follows the line of voting strength in the Board of Estimate of the elective officials of the city and of the boroughs.

The city through the proposed amendments will have the power to fix salaries, duties, and terms of office of all non-elective officials of the counties entering into the make-up of New York City, with the exception of officers and employes of the courts of record and the District Attorneys' offices. These places have been political prizes for years through the Legislature's exclusive power of regulation. It has been estimated that $7,000,000 has been added to the New York City payroll through mandatory legislation affecting the administration of the counties within the city boundaries.

New Powers for Cities.

Here are the new powers granted to cities under the proposed amendments:

Exclusive power to manage, regulate and control its own property, business and local affairs, subject to the Constitution and to the general laws of the State, applying to all the inhabitants, or applying to all the cities or counties of the State without classification or distinction.

The power to organize and manage all departments, bureaus, or other divisions of the City Government and to regulate the powers, duties, qualifications, mode of selection, number, term of office, compensation, and method of removal of all city officers and employes, and of all police and health officers and employes, and of all non-judicial officers and employes attached to courts not of record, and to regulate the compensation of all officers not chosen by the electors and of all employes of counties situated wholly within a city, except assistants and employes of District Attorneys and except officers and employes of courts of record.

The power to amend its charter or any local or special law relating to its property, business, or local affairs, subject to ratification b ythe voters of such city and to legislative annulment.

Under the proposed amendments the legislative authorities of a city would have power to amend the charter of their city or any special laws affecting the property, business, or local affairs of the city with the provision that any such amendment shall aply to one subject anly and shall be subject to the approval of the Mayor and the Board of Estimate if such a board enters into the city administration. Any such amendment, which does not change the framework of the city government or regulate bond issues or remove restrictions regarding taxation, shall take effect upon approval by the Mayor and the Board of Estimate. Other laws must be submitted to the Legislature in the first week of the next succeeding regular session and shall take effect within sixty days unless disapproved by the Legislature.

The method to be followed in regard to general revisions of the Charter are defined in the proposed amendments. Next year and every eight years thereafter the question, "Shall there be a Commission to revise the Charter of the city?" must be submitted to the voters. If answered in the affirmative, the Commission must be elected either at the next general election or ta a special election. In all cities except New York, the Commission will be composed of seven members elected at large. The revised Charter must be submitted for ratification either at the next general election or at a special election called for the purpose. If ratified it will be sent to the legislature in the first week of its session in January, and if not annulled within sixty days becomes effective

Ex-Mayor Low Explains.

Ex-Mayor Low, in a statement made public tonight, said regarding the new plan:

"The bill gives home rule to cities as to their own local affairs; State rule to the State as to State affairs, and where the city acts as the agent of the State in matters of Government, the present system with the local suspensory veto is retained.

"Any one wishing to get a pretty accurate understanding of the powers granted to cities by the grant to them of exclusive power to manage and regulate their own property, business or local affairs, may do so by reading the grant of specific powers contained in Section 20 of Chapter 247 of the laws of 1913, popularly known as the Home Rule law.

"As to the ½eld thus broadly indicated it is as though one were to say: 'Keep o% the grass.' This Home Rule law of 1913 has been thus far ine%ective for two reasons. (1) Because there has been a doubt whether, under the existing Constitution, the Legislature had the authority to delegate so much legislative power to cities; and (2) because the law provides that all of these powers must be exercised by the precise agencies which have been created by existing city charters, and by the special and generals laws which relate to the government of one city or another throughout the State. It is my belief that the proposed Constitutional amendment would cure both of these defects, so that, in case of its adoption, this abortive measure would stand 'upright on its feet.'"

CHARITY PLANS CLASH.

One Committee Rejects Central Control Proposal.

ALBANY, Aug. 4.—A sharp division in the Constitutional Cevention over the administration of State institutions was indicated today when the Committee on Charities, of which James W. Wadsworth, Sr., is Chairman, made a favorable report on the Steinbrink proposal. This continues the present State Hospital Commission as a constitutional body in control of the operation of the hospitals for the insane. The committee rejected proposals for a central board of control for all State institutions.

The Tanner plan, differing radically from the Steinbrink proposal, is still under consideration in the Committee on Governor and State Officers. This plan creates a State Department of Charities and Corrections, the head of which would supervise the work of the Superintendent of Prisons, the Fiscal Supervisors, and the control of the expenditures of the hospitals and reformatories. The present State Hospital Commission, Prison Commission, and State Board of Charities would be continued only for purposes of supervision and inspection.

MAY SELL CANAL LANDS.

Committee Favors Disposal of Abandoned Property.

ALBANY, Aug. 4.—A proposed amendment to permit the leasing by the State of surplus waters of the Barge Canal for power purposes was reported favorably today by the Constitutional Convention Committee on Canals. The restriction is made, however, that the leases shall not be made in perpetuity, and that they may be terminated by State authority whenever the use of the water interferes with the operation of the canal.

The proposal also provides that abandoned canal lands may be sold by the State only after authorization by general laws State-wide in their application. In addition, it would include in the canal lands which shall not be leased or sold certain feeders and portions of the canal in Utica and Buffalo.

IS NOT PURSUING WHITMAN.

Mrs. Becker Repudiates Detroit Plan to Sue the Governor.

A report from Detroit last night said that James H. Pound, who was counsel for Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in the ex-President's libel suit against George H. Newetts, editor of The Iron Ore, in 1913, had advised Mrs. Charles Becker to move to New Jersey and institute malfeasance in office proceedings against Governor Whitman because of the execution of her husband for the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

Martin T. Manton of counsel for Becker said last night that he had received a number of letters from a James H. Pound of Detroit containing various suggestions as to what should have been done to save Becker. Mr. Manton took none of the letters seriously.

"I do not think Mr. Pound knows much about the case," said Mr. Manton last night. "His letters to me didn't show that he did. I do not believe Mrs. Becker consulted him. He has probably written to her a letter similar to those he wrote to me. I do not recall that the New Jersey suggestion was contained in any of the letters I received."

Mrs. Becker said last night that she had never heard of a man named Pound, and certainly had not consulted with a lawyer of that name nor with any other since the death of her husband. She did not contemplate any proceeding against Governor Whitman such as was said to have been suggested to her by Mr. Pound, she said, and did not intend to move to New Jersey, saying she was well satisfied with her home in University Avenue.

KIDLESS GOAT ADOPTS BABY

A mother goat whose only kid was stolen from her a week ago by boys undertook yesterday to satisfy her maternal longings by adopting a month-old foundling, a pretty blue-eyed boy, dressed in linen and laces, left by someone in the rear hallway of a tenement house at Christopher and Fitkin Avenues, East New York. The animal, standing guard beside the cooing little one, angrily resented with its horns the efforts of anybody to take her new baby away from her.

Children at play on the sidewalk saw an attractive-looking young woman enter the hallway. A few minutes later she reappeared and hurried away. They heard an infant's cry and entered the hallway to see the mother-goat, which had been in the year yard, nosing and licking the baby's face. Baby and goat were plainly delighted with each other.

The animal refused to be coaxed from her charge by offerings of vegetables and wrestled with two boys who grasped her by the horns. Mrs. Annie Grossman, who lives next door, slipped in to the hallway, snatched up the infant and turned it over to the police of the Brownsville Station. The baby was sent to the King's County Hospital, and detectives started a search for the mother.

850,000 LOANS IN A YEAR.

Forty Societies Gave Public Sum of $5,000,000 in Interest.

The National Federation of Remedial Loan Associations, with which the Russell Sage Foundation co-operates, has issued its annual report showing that that there now forty societies operating in thirty-five cities, employing nearly $17,000,000 in making small loans at reasonable rates on security of personal property pledged or mortgaged.

During the year 850,000 loans were made, amounting to more than $28,000,-000. The report says that these loans saved $5,000,000 to the public, the moderate interest collected by the federated societies on the loans of $28,000,-000 being $5,000,000 less than would have been charged by usurers.

The average loan made on pledged security was $29, and on chattel security, $62. Capital increases on the part of member socities during the year amounted to $2,964,607. Five new societies with a combined capital of $350,-000 were admitted during the year, and are doing business in Portland, Ore.; Dallas, Philadelphia, Lynn, and Toronto.

The federation reports that legislation and judicial decisions in New York and several other States have greatly curbed the operations of usurers during the past year.

BLACKED FACE AS HE SLEPT.

Joseph Curley, a Long Beach policeman, has resigned.

Curley was before the Village Board under charges. Chief of Police Hewlett and Michael Mangin, engineer of a local hotel, testified that Curley, while supposed to be pounding the sands of Long Beach, had gone to sleep in the engine room of the hotel and that hotel employes got some burnt cork and blackened his face. Then, Chief Hewlett said, he took Curley's badge from his coat while he still slept.

When the village officials asked Curley what he had to say he replied that he guessed he would resign—he had a better job in prospect in a neighboring village, anyway. The resignation was accepted.

Banker's Wife Held for Assault.

Mrs. Mary Barardini of 139 Hope Avenue, Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, wife of a New York banker, was held in $300 bail for Special Sessions in the North Brighton Police Court yesterday afternoon on the charge of assaulting Josephine Siroc, a maid at the Barardini residence. The maid said Mrs. Barardini had struck her several times, and Mrs. Barardini admitted that a quarrel had occured. She said she had overheard slanderous remarks made about her by the maid to the cook.

EASTLAND INQUIRY AROUSES GOMPERS

Says Idea of Having Inspection Officials Conduct Investigation Is a Travesty on Justice.

APPEALS TO THE PRESIDENT

Asserts That Labor Leaders Have Often Complained of Inspection—Redfield Continues Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The complications that beset the Eastland disaster inquiry at Chicago were added to today by the entry of the American Federation of Labor through its President, Samuel Gompers, as a critic of the Steamboat Inspection Service on the Great Lakes. Mr. Gompers has sent President Wilson a letter in which he declares that the idea of having the Eastland affair investigated by the inspection officials themselves is a travesty on justice. He says labor leaders have many times called attention to the lax methods of the lake inspection service and refers to the emphasis that the Eastland disaster places on the value of the seamen's act, against which shipping companies are now making sucvh a bitter fight.

The burden of the letter is an appeal to the President to bring about an investigation of the Eastland horror by a commission of disinterested and fair-minded citizens.

Acting Secretary of Commerce Sweet, commenting on the Gompers letter, denied tonight that the labor leaders had ever made specific complaints to the Department of Commerce in regard to the laxity of the Steamboat Inspection Service on the lakes. He called attention to the fact that the Inspectors are under the Civil Service, and that they retain their offices so long as they perform their duties satisfactorily.

During the last few months, he said, there had been eleven removels from the service for cause, which indicated that there was not that laxity throughout the service that might be complained of. He denied that there was any political element in the service.

The Aacting Secretary said that he had no information that Secretary Redfield would return to Washington from Chicago and no longer give his personal attention to the investigation. He said the Secretary would do as he announced a week ago, pursue the investigation, no matter where it led to or on what individuals the ultimate responsibility might be placed for the disaster.

"About a year ago," said Mr. Sweet, "Secretary Nockles of the Chicago Federation of Labor sent in a general complaint, alleging overcrowding of lake steamers, but mentioning no negligent Inspectors. Mr. Olander of the Seamen's Union also had some correspondence with the department, but neither was specific, either as to Inspectors or boats. The only boat mentioned, as I recall, was the Christopher Columbus, which hasn't sunk."

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Secretary Redfield resumed his inquiry into the Eastland disaster today by questioning James Case Adkerson, a Government naval constructor.

The witness said, in the navy water ballast was used only on certain colliers and auxiliary vessels.

"Water ballast is safe if the compartment holding it is filled. If the tank is partly empty the water shifts and the center of gravity changes, and consequently the stability of the boat is reduced and its safety is lessened," said the witness.

Ackerson said he believed the Eastland's water ballast system was safe if properly handled.

William P. Eels of Philadelphia, Supervising Inspector of the Travelers' Insurance Company, was next called, and testified he was engineer of the Eastland in 1904 and 1905.

He said that the Eastland listed badly on one occasion while leaving the South Haven (Mich.) Harbor, but he considered her a safe boat if her water ballast was properly handled.

Finds Muenter Died of Fall.

No one was blamed for the suicide of Erich Muenter, alias Frank Holt, would-be assassin of J. P. Morgan, in the Nassau County Jail at Mineola, L. I., according to the findings of Coroner Walter R. Jones of Hempstead, L. I. Coroner Jones simply found death to have resulted from a fall from a high place, which caused a fractured skull and apoplexy.

PLANS MESSAGE ON DEFENSE

President Will Discuss Its Importance in Recommendations to Congress.

CORNISH, Aug. 4.—President Wilson is planning to make national defense one of the principal subjects in his next message to Congress. While he will not decide finally on the policy he will ask Congress to approve until after he has received the reports he has requested from Secretaries Garrison and Daniels, it became known today that he already has given much preliminary thought to the question.

The President received letters today from both Mr. Garrison and Mr. Daniels, but nothing was given out here as their contents. He has planned to receive the formal reports from the two Secretaries when he returns to Washington.

While the President will make recommendations to Congress on other subjects, the discussion of national defense is expected to attract most attention. He is expected to devote even more time to the preparation to this portion of his massage than he usually does to general recommendations.

LOCKED IN VAULT BY BANDIT

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Aug. 4.—The Cedar Rapids National Bank was held up and robbed of $21,300 early today by a lone robber, who at the point of a revolver compelled Leo Perrin, the paying teller, to open the vault and afterward locked him in it. Perrin was discovered about fifteen minutes later, in a state of temporary insanity, as the result of his experience. His condition was said to be serious.

The robber is believed to have been in the building all night.

Perrin was in the bank early this morning to get out currency shipments for the banks of neighboring towns, and had just opened the outer door of the vault when the man stepped before him, held a revolver to his head and ordered him to open the remaining doors. As soon as the currency safe was reached the bandit calmly helped himself to bundles of the money and then backed out, slamming the outer door on the teller.

KILLS SON AND HERSELF.

Mrs. Allen Supposed to Have Gone Insane from Melancholia.

MERIDEN, Conn., Aug. 4.—Mrs. Nellie Breese Allen, wife of James F. Allen, Treasurer of the Meriden Gravure Company, shot and killed her youngest son, Gordon, aged 8 years, as he slept this morning, and then killed herself. Mrs. Allen had been under treatment for melancholia.

The weapon used was a large calibre revolver. The son was shot through the heart, and Mrs. Allen sent a bullet through her brain. Mother and son lay side by side when Mr. Allen found them in response to cries of the governess, who had heard the report of a pistol.

Medical Examiner E. T. Bradstreet decided that Mrs. Allen suddenly had become deranged. While she had been under treatment for several years, recently she appeared to have regained her normal health. Last evening she was in excellent spirits.

Mrs. Allen was 47 years old. Two sons, Parker and Theodore, students, are camping at Kineo, Me.

FINDS DIAMOND RING IN TAXI.

Doorman Discovers Lost Gem, but Owner Can't Be Found.

When the doorman at the Wyoming Apartments, Fifty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue, went to assist a guest to alight from a taxicab last night he was startled to see a woman's diamond ring sparkling on the floor just inside the door of the machine. The passenger declared that the ring did not belong to him. The driver, Edward McLaughlin, of 708 Ninth Avenue, said that he had been driving all day and had not the slightest idea where the ring came from.

In the absence of any claimant Policeman Golden took the ring to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where it was said that it was worth about $150. McLaughlin later remembered that in the afternoon he drove two women from Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street to the Commercial Bank, but unless they lost the ring, he said, he could not account for its presence in his taxi.

Suspend Trade for Pastor's Burial.

All business was suspended in White Plains yesterday afternoon during the funeral of the Rev. Frederic D. Van Kleeck, who was rector for the last forty-five years of Grace Episcopal Church in that city. The services were conducted by the Very Rev. Charles E. Burch, Bishop Suffragan, and the body was carried to the church by the Past Masters of White Plains Lodge, F. and A. M., of which Dr. Van Kleeck was chaplain for many years. Thousands viewed the body which lay in state at the church in the morning.

SCUDDER LISTENS TO GROUT ARGUMENT

Cropsey Tells Justice on the Bench He Is Biased, but Court Denies It.

COUNSEL TO FILE BRIEFS

District Attorney Cropsey's objections to Supreme Court Justice Scudder's hearing the argument on an application for a certificate of reasonable doubt for Edward M. Grout, ex-president of the Union Bank of Brooklyn, were overruled yesterday. Justice Scudder decided that a provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure made it mandatory for him, as the Justice sitting in Special Term of the Supreme Court, to hear the motion.

Since Monday Justice Scudder had tried to prevail on some other Justice in the Second Judicial Department to take his place on the bench in this phase of the Grout case on account of the objection of Mr. Cropsey charging that he was biased in favor of the defendant. The other Justices declined on the ground that they had no jurisdiction, and that the statute providing for the Justice sitting in Special Term of the Supreme Court to hear the motion was mandatory.

Justice Scudder set the hearing for 2 o'clock in the afternoon, but before Stephen C. Baldwin, counsel for Mr. Grout, opened the argument, District Attorney Cropsey reiterated his objections. Mr. Cropsey referred to statements made by the Justice about Grout's good character and the District Attorney's connection with this case.

"Some of these statements were not correct in fact," said Mr. Cropsey. "In view of those statements that were certainly extrajudicial, and of which there is some dispute as to whether they coincide with the facts, it is my view of the matter that your Honor is in a frame of mind that I will have to characterize as biased.

"Later on you made statements about the present District Attorney and his office. You referred to the affidavits filed by him as demagogic, unfair, and unjudicial. Such utterances must be assumed—if the Justice believes them true, or he would not make them—to clearly indicate such a bias as to make it impossible for the Justice to sit."

"There is no bias in this court."

He then looked toward the counsel for Mr. Grout, saying:

"You may proceed with your motion, Mr. Baldwin."

The attorney for Mr. Grout submitted several objections to the jury's verdict of guilty which will be made the basis of the defendant's appeal to the higher courts.

At the end of the hearing Justice Scudder reserved decision and asked counsel to submit briefs by Monday.

Memorial for Moses Schiff.

Memorial services for Moses Schiff will be held at the Educational Alliance Building, East Broadway and Jefferson Street, next Tuesday, at 5:30 P. M. The award of the Moses Schiff prize will be made by Jacob H. Schiff.

CITY BREVITIES.

Frank G. Webb, Chairman of the Street Traffic Committee of the SafetyFirst Society of the City of New York, has written to Mayor Mitchel asking him to veto the proposed ordinance recently adopted by the Aldermen relating to the licensing of motor cycles, holding that the licensing of motor cycles should be a function of the State and not of the municipality.

Policeman Cahill of Traffic Squad E. found a man lying dead with bullets wounds in the right temple and the heart on a bench in Central Park near 115th Street and North Drive yesterday afternoon. A note explained that the dead man was Abe Jacobs of 80 St. Nicholas Avenue and that he committed suicide because of troubles due to borrowing money from friends.

Frank Jones of Roxbury, Mass., who surrendered to the police on Sunday night, saying he was wanted for a murder in Roxbury, was discharged by Magistrate Frothingham in Harlem Court yesterday after the Police Department had been notified by the Roxbury police that they did not want Jones.

A man believed to have been F. E. Brionia was run over and killed yesterday by a truck operated by William Reed of Jersey City. The man, who lived at 2183 Amsterdam Avenue, was crossing West 168th Street at Audubon Avenue when he was struck. Reed was arrested.

OLD LAW PARTNERS IN ROW.

Court Hopes Bar Association Will Investigate Wait & Foster.

After listening to a long discussion yesterday of the methods of closing the business afafirs of the dissolved law firm of Wait & Foster, Supreme Court Justice Weeks said that action in the case might well be taken to the Bar Association, irrespective of the outcome of the court proceedings.

The law firm consisted of George H. D. Foster and John C. Wait. Wait, who is receiver for the firm, several times yesterday attacked the motives of his former partner. Foster replied by producing evidence to show that Wait had collected debts due the old firm which he had not reported as receiver. Wait then said he believed Foster had acted as attorney for a former client of the firm against whom an account was outstanding, and had intimated to his client that the firm charge was an exorbitant one.

"I hope the Gglevance Committtee of the Bar Association may have its attention called to this matter," said Justice Weeks.

"I may take action in line with your Honor's suggestion," said Mr. Foster.

Justice Weeks granted Wait as receiver permission to sell all of the outstanding claims of the firm with the exception of one item of $7,000.

The former partners have not been on friendly terms for several years.

Narcotic Squad Raids Apartment.

After beating a bulldog into insensibility members of Police Commissioner Woods's Narcotic Squad last night entered an apartment on the ground floor of 274 West Fortieth Street and arrested two women and a man on a charge of having narcotics in their possession. At the West Thirtieth Street Station the prisoners said they were Frank Sheehan, his wife, Mary, and Mary McCann. The detectives brought to the police station seven hypodermic needles and a quantity of a substance they said was opium. They said the Sheehans had been selling hypodermic injections of opium for 50 cents each.

CURRENT ERUPTION OF OLD ANTAGONISM

MYSTIC MUSCOVITE GOAL

Once again the old antagonism between Slav and Teuton emerges above the surface. One need not utter the platitude that every sane man in Europe must regret it. Nor need one add up afresh the long account against Serb megalomania — the intrigues against Bosnia, the murders in Sarajevo, the unscrupulous ambitions of a greater Servia at the expense of the Dual Monarchy. Nor, on the other hand, need one hint at megalomania in another direction. It is scarcely worth while to repeat that this blow of 1914 bears no accidental likeness to the shaking of that mailed fist in 1909. Still less is it necessary to point out that if Austria were to strike at all, it were better ror her to strike during the lifetime of the present Emperor, who alone holds in leash that powerful Slav element among her own people, which has perhaps something even more than kinship with the Serb. Such facts and inferences strike at one from the surface. Beneath the surface, however, old and tumultuous forces of antagonism are converging.

Russia's historic rôle against the East in the past has been extended to the protection of the Slavs in the present. In 1909 the Slavs of the Balkan States found Russia paralyzed by the effect of her war with Japan, though the Russian people sympathized with them as heartily as ever. But now not only the sympathy of the Russians, but the right arm of official Russia is answering the renewed appeal. The mailed gauntlet of the Teuton this time has not been passed over by the Slav.

The result is on the knees of the gods, but the origin of this championship of the Serb has its roots in European history. For in one thing, and almost in one thing alone, official Russia and the Russians have been unanimous. And in one thing, and in almost that alone, the little Balkan States, leashed together for one war, only to fly at each other's throats as soon as it was finished, have been at one. The Russians have regarded the minor Slav States as their protégés, and each of the Slav States has regarded Russia and Russia alone as her champion. In any conceivable rearrangement of the chessboard of Europe this natural selection, which obeys no law of commercial enterprise, would have to be taken into account. But deep down, underneath all that, lies the everlasting, unconquerable antagonism between the Teuton and the Slav.

Emphatically, the Teuton stands for that orderliness of the West that has long passed out of the sole keeping of Latin hands. The Teuton with his perpetual yerboten is the enemy of chaos, whether in the world of action or in the world of thought. From him the formulæ of authority are the veritable decrees of Aeschylean necessity. Briefly his national character is crystallized, and it is precisely this crystallization that is lacking to the character of the Slav.

What is the characteristically Slav type that opposes itself to this machine-like product of order and self-control? Russian literature from Gogol to Gorky has been answering this question. Perhaps the quality known as Oblomovism—the word was taken from the name of Goncharov's hero—illustrates best its passive and negative side. This quality implies an atrophy of the will, and its victim sinks into a sluggishness that is almost a state of coma. And yet even in this type there is sometimes to be found a sense of exasperation against every human convention which has been called otchaianie.

Dostoieffsky, whose heroes were permeated by this sense of exasperation, gives an analysis of it: "This is the sensation of a man who, from the summit of a high tower, leans over the yawning abyss and experiences a shudder of pleasure at the idea that he may hurl himself from it headlong. 'Faster, and let us end it!' he says to himself. Sometimes the people who think like this are very peaceable, very ordinary individuals. * * * The man finds a delight in the horror that he inspires in others. * * * He strains his whole soul in frantic hopelessness, and in his desperation calls out for punishment as a solution, as something which will decide for him." It was long ago noticed about the Russians that, in spite of their laziness, they took the field readily, and in the Slav character these opposites are to be found—torpor and exasperation, the one making for a national vis inertia of endurance, and the other making for the accomplishment of any illogical purpose that may fire the soul of Russia through touching the heart.

And through all the barbarous contradictions, windings, contortions of Russia's official policy, there runs a vein of idealism, almost of mysticism. For the Russian neither St. Petersburg nor Moscow is the real capital. That lies beyond the zone of practical politics—though even they may be hurried unceremoniously enough by the bayonet—in a renewed Ryzantium. And this goal of official Russia, indorsed so mystically by the Russian people, is only too intimately associated with the championship of the Slavs, many of whom were so recently the subjects of the common Turkish enemy. Inevitably, pan-Slavism is opposed to the equally expansive ambitions of pan-Germanism. But apart from politics, the Slav's ideals are imaginatively alien from the crystallized and, one may add, commercialized ideals of his Teutonic rival.

The Slavs see in their national aims, rightly or wrongly, a spiritual regeneration of Europe through Russian influence which has nothing whatever to do with any material aggrandizement.

Instinctively, illogically, the Slav, in spite of all his individual sins, shapes this incongruous national idealism which, in spite of the gibes against Russian cupidity, has shown itself capable of rejecting the wholly commercialized instincts of the West. Capable of absorbing all stand-points only too quickly, capable of divesting himself for the time being of all nationality, the Slav, wayward and backward as he is, has in his character a universality that has been denied to more developed races.

Essentially plastic, with no sense of superiority, the Slav has substituted for the love of order and thoroughness of the Teuton a spiritual thirst which has its origin perhaps in this very otchaianie, which is the most dangerous factor of the Russian temperament. In spite of his autocracy, he is the democrat of Europe as opposed to the Teutonic aristocrat, the unconscious Socialist as opposed to the Teutonic individualist.

To arrive at a resultant of the Teutonic soul, one might take, as it were, a composite photograph of a German drill Sergeant, a commercial traveler, and, let us say, Goethe himself. The resultant would be authority working through commonplace alertness up to the loftiest summits of Olympian calm. To obtain a similar estimate of the Slav's soul one might well take a similar composite photograph of that strange and national family the Karamazovs of Dostoieffsky.

Here is the veritable symbol of the Russian people. For all the mud that chokes them, for all the spider memories that dull their vision, they, the Karamazovs, in the very atmosphere of parricide, with the mark of the beast stamped upon their race, stumble in their own manner humbly after the Russian God. Spirituality survives amid the miasma of sensuality, and in this savage family of sinful idealists it is none the less Aliosha, the pure in heart, who is dominant. One feels that even the Karamazovs who kneel in the mire will eventually rise, and one knows that even Smerdiakov leads upward to Aliosha. It is Russia herself who, half submerged as she is in the old cruel Byzantine dreams, can yet peer forward into inscrutable futurity.—T. P.'s Weekly, London.

HOBBIES ARE USEFUL.

They Make Men Enjoy Life and Increase Intelligence.

What is your hobby? If you haven't one, you ought to have. Everyone needs some occupation, something which he enjoys besides his regular employment. Some need a hobby that takes them to fields and open air. Others have more need of something for the quiet of home, of den or library. One man takes a special interest in animals, birds, or flowers. It may be the study of moths or butterflies. We know a man whose occupation was sedentary and kept him to his chair all day, who had a work bench and made beautiful tables, chairs, cabinets, and other furniture for his home.

A club in this city is making a study of fishes, snails, and other live things to be found in the water. Their aquariums furnish hours of delightful observation. They show you fish of the most beautiful colors, others so small one can scarcely see them without a magnifying glass. There are mushroom hunters and students of this table delicacy. Many are out every fine holiday learning about the birds. It is a surprise to the uninitiated to discover how great a variety of winged friends we have. What is more delightful than to make friends of them, so they will come and eat from your hand? There are the collectors of curiosities, old coins, postage stamps, and many other oddities.

A hobby must interest you. It must take your mind from worry and fill it with pleasant thoughts. An hour spent in pursuit of a favorite hobby gives renewed strength for several hours of everyday labor. It gives you that thought while at work that does not take all your attention. There is scarcely any hobby—or fad if you like—well followed but has an elevating influence. It enlarges the mind; and the mind needs its play spell as well as the body. The trite adage, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is as applicable to the grown-up boy as to the one young in years. In fact, as age comes on one needs more and more of play, of something to interest. So if you have not a fad, a hobby, get one. Put your heart into it, and you will find it will well repay you.—Milwaukee Journal.

IT'S GOT TO CHICAGO.

The Story of the Twins, the Grasshoppers, and the Editor.

Two correspondents wrote to a busy editor of a country newspaper desiring to know, respectively, "the best way of assisting twins through the teething" and "how to rid an orchard of grasshoppers."

The editor answered both questions faithfully, but, unfortunately, got the initials mixed, so that the fond father of the teething twins was thunderstruck by the following advice:

"If you are unfortunate enough to be plagued by these unwelcome little pests, the quickest way of settling them is to cover them with straw and set the bunch on fire."

The other man, who was bothered with grasshoppers, was equally amazed to read: "The best method of treatment is to give each a warm bath twice a day, and rub their gums with india rubber."—Chicago Herald.

Now He Knows.

A Howard woman with a protruding chin is quoted as saying: "It took me a good while to convince my husband that a man and wife should not be everlastingly arguing and disputing, but I finally got it through his head."—Kansas City Star.

Inconsistency.

Another interesting illustration of the inconsistency of human nature is the way a man will use up a dollar in gasoline and depreciation to get to the place where they sell two bunches of pipe cleaners for a nickel.—Ohio State Journal.

When Ma Takes Up Oratory.

When a lady finds out she can make a speech, the husband may as well put the children in a boarding school, strangle the canary bird, and renew his acquaintance with the fellows at the club.—Houston Post.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...3¼@3½ per cent. for the best names
Tuesday...3½@3½
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Felt Hat Trade Rather Dull.

The initial business being done in felt hats for Fall is of a rather dull character. Buyers are inclined to hold off their purchases until later in the season. The style tendency is along staple lines, and there is a lack of the usual freakish effects. The sizes desired now are 5¾ and 6-inch crowns and 2¼-inch brims. Dark gray seems to be the most popular color, and the bands are either of this shade or black. Other colors in demand are blues, browns, and greens.

Russian Trade Restrictions.

The branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Custom House has received a summary of all the Russian decrees relating to embargoes and restrictions on exports from the empire. The revised list contains the names of all articles prohibited from being sent out of Russia, and covers a very wide variety of products used in manufacturing industries of the United States. It is apparent that the Russian Government is determined that all of that country's resources must be conserved for the use of the nation. The complete list may be inspected by merchants interested by applying to E. C. Porter, agent in charge of the branch office.

Feather Demand Runs to Wings.

A very fair business is being done by flower and feather manufacturers and importers in novelty wings. These are desired in odd shapes. Black and white are the best sellers, with the demand centering on white. Navy is also considered very good, with everything in its favor for a successful run throughout the Fall season. Sable and soldat are other shades in meeting with the buyer's favor. Imitation ghoura, in natural color and black, has been well taken up. Tinsel flowers are desired in silver and antique. Whip effects, combined with wings, are proving very marketable. Quite a few buyers are in town, and the trade in general anticipates a brisk business, which should be in evidence around the middle of this month.

Cloth Hat and Cap Trade Improving.

After a period of unusual dullness, the cloth hat and cap trade is showing signs of an improved demand. Manufacturers are satisfied with the initial business for Fall that has been booked up to the present time. An effort has been made to produce lighter weight hats and progress made along this line has been rewarded with larger sales. One firm, for instance, has sold quite a quantity of featherweight motor hats, made of a lightweight tweed. This hat is lined with pongee silk, and stitched throughout, so as to make it practically indestructible. In caps, the style tendency is toward a smaller, narrower design. In these goods shepherd checks are selling well, in black and white and colors. Neat grays are also in fair demand, the same holding true for glen plaids.

Heavy Exports of Domestics.

Shipments of domestics out of this port were unusually high in the week ended July 31, according to the Custom House report issued yesterday. The week's total ran up to $905,635, while cotton duck exports had a value of $91,365. Domestics sent to the Philippines during the week reached the high total of $450,455, while Aden came next with consignments worth $155,808. Cuba's purchases of domestics were manifested at $16,238, while British possessions in Africa took goods valued at $31,272. Colombia led the South American countries with shipments worth $33,753. No shipments of domestics were recorded to China. In some manner, domestics totalling $16,561 were shipped to Germany's African possessions. The biggest single shipment of duck was to the French War Office, which took goods to the value of $36,454.

Women's Fall Underwear Styles.

About the most popular article in the Fall lines of women's underwear that are now being shown here is the "combination." The new goods do not differ materially from models of other seasons, aside from the straight and somewhat narrower leg to the drawer styles, varied with a knickerbocker on similar lines. The envelope is also well thought of. One-piece effects are in high favor, both with buyers and customers, many of the new models making use of a waist line which tends toward better fitting. One of the season's novelties shows the whole usual outfit of lingerie in a single garment in the form of a combination. Pink still leads in the color demand, which runs chiefly to solid colors. The favored materials include crêpes, taffetas, allover lace, nainsook, and cambric, while the trimmings run to wide lace insertions, ribbons, and narrow embroidered edgings.

The Petticoat Situation.

Reports from makers of petticoats indicate that the vogue for novelty goods of this kind—black and white stripes, checks, &c.—is over, at least so far as the better petticoats are concerned. The Fall demand is running to solid colors, and blues, greens, and browns lead, as in the outer garments. The most popular models are cut to fit fairly close about as far as the knees, in order to avoid bulkiness at the hips, but they flare sharply below that point. For trimmings there is no small use of ruchings and colored embroidered flouncings, the latter running up to twenty-four inches in width. Some tendency toward fringes is seen in the higher-priced goods, but doubt is expressed as to their general popularity. Taffetas and the heavier constructions of mercerized cotton goods seem to be the favored materials for Fall. An excellent season is looked for.

Gray Goods Were "Dead."

There was no life to the local gray goods market yesterday, at least so far as staple goods were concerned. There was some business done on 5.50 and five-yard sheetings at 3½ and 3¼ cents, respectively, but drills were quiet. Printcloths reflected the condition of drills. Some small spot business was done, but none of the individual sales was worthy of comment. Buyers added "insult to injury" by bidding 3⅝ cents for contract deliveries of 39-inch 80-squares, when these goods were held, nominally, at 5¼ cents for spot shipment. Immediate delivery business has been done on them, however, at 5⅝ cents, which is doubtless responsible for the contract bidding at that figure. Fancies had a pretty good day. Staple printcloth prices were almost entirely nominal. They were:

Fall Dress Demand Is Good.

A nice business is being done in this market at the moment, on dresses suitable for early Fall wear. More than the usual number of combinations of fabrics are seen in this season's dresses, especially in the so-called semi-tailored effects, the idea apparently being to make them available for the longest possible period of wear, or, in other words, to make them as wearable during the late Summer season as in the early Fall. This is as true of silk dresses as it is of woolen ones, quite a number of combinations of charmeuse and chiffon, and other materials of this kind being seen. Such combinations as serge and taffeta and gabardine and a satin-faced silk, are shown rather profusely. Both the princess and redingote types of garments are being taken. The leaning in colors is all toward the darker shades, such as browns, blues, greens, and of course, black. Men who ought to know say that, proportionately, a better Fall business in dresses is in prospect than was done this Spring.

Burlaps Vs. Cottons.

While reports of a little firmer feeling in the burlap market have somewhat revived hopes of securing the good business on cotton sheetings from the bag trade that was anticipated when burlaps were high, the fact remains that a substantial check has been put on the buying of cotton bagging materials by the recent decline at Calcutta and in this city. This is said to be particularly true of the buying of osnaburgs. Where a few weeks ago the bagmakers, especially in the Middle West, did not seem able to get enough 40-yard osnaburgs to satisfy their needs, they are now wondering why they didn't wait for a decline in burlaps. As a result, the call for osnaburgs has declined appreciably, and several of the commission houses are rejoicing because they did not advise their mills to devote looms—or more looms, as the case may be—to the manufacture of these goods. The call for such goods as 4.25-yard sheetings has also dropped off, from all accounts, but on the other hand a fair business seems to be passing on lightweight sheetings, such as 5, 5.50 and 6-yard goods. The last named are now firmly held at 3 cents, in certain quarters of the market.

ELECT THEIR OFFICERS.

Display Men Make A. J. Edgell President—McAneny Speaks.

The election of officers, an address by George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen and Acting Mayor of the City, and the discussion of trade subjects were the chief features of yesterday's sessions of the convention of the International Association of Display Men at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. McAneny paid a tribute to the profession of which his hearers were members, and thanked the members for what they had done to improve the appearance of the city's streets. Mr. McAneny recalled that he conducted a vigorous campaign for the removal of incumbrances on the sidewalks. The elimination of the incumbrances, he claimed, had been a real aid to the display men.

A. J. Edgell, Manager of the Display Service Bureau of the Society for Electrical Development, was elected President for the ensuing year. The balance of the ticket chosen was as follows: First Vice-President, E. D. Pierce of the Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Company, Rochester; Second Vice-President, L. A. Rogers of the L. M. Kahn Company, Dallas, Texas; Third Vice President, Harry W. Holie of Loveman, Joseph & Loeb, Birmingham, Ala.; Treasurer, Edward O'Malley, Kankakee, Ill., and Secretary, P. W. Hunsicker, Grand Rapids.

The Association Cup, the grand prize for window displays, was awarded to the A. Elfand, Penn.) Association, which received 85 points to 75 points made by the Rochester local. Awards were also made for photographs of displays in thirty-two different classes, the prizes being watch fob medals. At the conclusion of the morning session, W. F. Allert, Display Manager of R. H. Macy & Co., entertained the delegates at luncheon in the Macy restaurant.

Among the speakers on trade subjects at the afternoon session were Samuel Friedman of S. Bloch & Co., Birmingham, Ala.; L. A. Rogers of the E. M. Kahn Company, Dallas, Texas; Dr. William H. Tolman, Director of the American Museum of Safety, and others. The day's proceedings ended with a banquet in the Grand Ball Room of the hotel, presided over as toastmaster by C. C. Potter, the retiring President. The convention will conclude today.

Widow with Live Husband.

When an otherwise industrious, God-fearing and considerate head of a family makes up his mind to go in for politics, his wife would just as well make up her mind that she is going to have a touch of the experience of being a widow with a live husband.—Houston Post.

Overworked Runabout.

A writer for a farm magazine says an ordinary runabout can be made to run a circular saw, pump water, haul freight, drive dairy machinery, fill the silo, shred the fodder and crush the grain feed. Possibly, but it would have little time in which to runabout.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GOOD WOOLS ARE SCARCE.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Good wools are becoming rather scarce. Domestic wools are now more in demand than the foreign wools. There is more call for territorial wools than for fleeces or scoured wools. It is estimated that about 1,000,000 pounds of territorials were sold during the week. Further indication of increased activity in the goods market is reflected here.

"In the woolen and worsted goods market the main feature in the situation is the satisfactory trade in staples. It is believed that rather radical advances will be made in worsteds, some less radical than on woolen goods. A great deal of trouble is anticipated owing to the dyestuffs situation.

"The dress goods market is gradually improving, but is yet dull. The tendency is toward piece-dyed fabrics for Spring. Staples will be relatively strong. Velours, gabardines, whipcords, and poplins are spoken of very favorably.

"The cotton goods market remains steady and there has been considerable purchasing of sheeting fabrics and material for use in making bags. There is a good business in the duck market, inquiries coming from the West Indies and South America, particularly from Argentina and Uruguay. Australia and China are also buying."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The thing which stood out most prominently in yesterday's stock market was the strength of the steel shares and notably of United States Steel, which showed what was for that stock the very unusual gain of more than two points. Some of the war stocks rose sharply, notably Bethlehem Steel, which advanced no less than 22 points, but the interest taken in those stocks was slight compared with that aroused by the great strength of the steel shares. Their strength was no doubt borrowed in part from the speculative optimism which has recently been displayed very freely and even recklessly in some of the war stocks, but it had behind it also the very excellent news from the trade.

Important additions to this good news was made in the weekly reviews yesterday, which recorded further advances in steel and dwelt particularly upon a notable change for the better in the market for iron. The Iron Age's record of iron production showed an increase of 3,360 tons a day in July, compared with June. Production is now running at the rate of 32,000,000 tons a year, which is in excess of the actual output in any year in the past. On Jan. 1 last the output of iron was at the rate of only 18,000,000 tons a year. More striking proof of the great change which has come about in this important industry could not be had. Good news from the steel trade is good news in many more ways than one, for it is recognized that the steel trade is the best single indication of the drift of business in general. Good news from that trade can nearly always be accepted as a forerunner of good news from many other lines of trade.

Such was the news at the bottom of yesterday's further show of strength in the stock market, strength which carried the general level of prices to a new high figure for the year, and which gave much more encouragement than could be derived from strength in the war stocks alone, while other issues held back or declined. The railroads held their position, but did little more than that. Speculation for a variety of reasons has not run to the railroad stocks except in a very few issues, and left practically to themselves most of the railroads have not lately figured very actively in Stock Exchange dealings. Yet they have improved owing to the belief that hereafter for a time at least regulation will lie less heavily against them than in recent years.

The imagination has less room to roam in the case of a common carrier subject to public regulation than it has in the case of an enterprise subject to only private direction. Moreover, the special factor contributing much of the speculative enthusiasm in the market, war orders, benefit industrial companies much more of course than they do the railroads. It is true that war orders have played an important part in stimulating the steel trade, but they by no means solely account for the very noteworthy change for the better in that industry, a change which holds promise of corresponding changes for the better in other lines.

LONDON MARKET DULL.

Members Observe Conclusion of the First Year of the War.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Business was temporarily suspended on the Stock Exchange at noon today while the members sang "God Save the King," in observance of the conclusion of the first year of the war.

The feature of the trading was Canadian Car, which advanced four points. There were also large dealings in the new war loan at steady prices.

Money and discount rates were steady.

In 1913 this stock sold up to $83 per share. Net earnings in that year were $2,000,000. This corporation now has war contracts aggregating $100,000,000, on which net profits will be about $10,000,000, or five times its 1913 earnings. With these facts in mind, we believe $150 per share is a very conservative estimate of this stock's actual value. Present market $103-$105. We advise immediate purchase. Orders executed for one share upwards.

STEEL RISE LIFTS PIG IRON.

Prices Advance in All Districts and Big Movement is Expected.

Increased activity of the furnaces and higher prices for pig iron this week reflect the great present demand for steel. The Iron Age says:

Pig iron, after being in a rut for months, while steel has been active at advancing prices, has started in the past week on what promises to be an important movement. Prices in all districts are up 25 cents to 50 cents, and the sudden appearance of inquiry from many sources indicates an effort of consumers to forestall a long delayed rise.

The Southern Ohio market has been particularly active. Sales of basic iron at Cincinnati were above 100,000 tons in July, including 40,000 tons to a large sheet interest, and two inquiries are pending, one for 18,000 and the other for 10,000 tons.

The country's July pig iron production was 2,563,420 tons, or 82,691 tons a day, against 2,380,827 tons in June, or 79,361 tons a day. The steel companies are now close to their maximum pig iron capacity. They made 62,895 tons a day in July, or 3,900 tons more than the daily average in June. In only four previous months—January, February, April, and May, 1913—was the production of steel works furnaces greater than last month's.

In steel products the week has been quieter. Most domestic consumers are apparently covered for several months and there is little or no protective buying. But the action of the billet market, particularly in the East, is not viewed with equanimity.

The Iron Trade Review says:

In the face of continued operations of the steel works bordering on full capacity, deliveries on finished products are receding steadily and the problems of obtaining material promptly has become one of first importance to buyers. This situation is being met with more difficulty by the latter because of the fact that they had been favored with quick shipments so long that they are unaccustomed to delays, and have not been carrying normal stocks. The question of shipments gradually is being subordinated to that of prices, and the latter are further advancing.

The demand for steel rounds for shell manufacture continues on a stupendous scale, and many makers are so heavily filled with this business that they can accept no further large tonnages for shipment this year.

COTTON MOVES UP ON LIVERPOOL SALES

Failure of Rain to Relieve Texas Drought and Bullish Weather Report Help.

SPOT DEMAND INCREASES

Big Liverpool spot sales, the failure of adequate rains to relieve the Texas drought, in addition to a rather bullish weekly weather report, caused an advance of a dozen points or so in the cotton market yesterday. The advance occurred in spite of the fact that the drought in the Eastern Belt is pretty thoroughly relieved, especially in the Carolinas and Georgia, where rainfall ranged from one-half an inch to more than five inches. Temperatures were considerably lower, and maximum thermometer readings, except in Alabama, were below 100 degrees. In Texas, however, the rainfall was very light, and at only a few points, with the exception of Galveston, on the coast, where no cotton is raised. The weekly weather report has said that conditions have been generally relieved, although the plant in the Eastern Belt appeared to be standing the drought fairly well, although shedding is very generally reported. This, however, is likely to be checked as a result of the rain mentioned above. In Oklahoma and Texas, it was said that local rains were beneficial, but drought in the latter State continued very general and was becoming severe over a large area.

It is possible that increased spot demand has had something to do with the buying. Memphis advices say: "Spot sales at the eight leading Southern markets have been 18,274 bales the past week against only 3,799 a year ago. Some cotton is being bought every day to fill engagements entered into several months ago and mills are finding it necessary to take a certain amount against their needs. Inquiry from England has been noted recently, and a fair business done with that country. It is apparent, however, that neither spinners nor importers on the other side are disposed to anticipate requirements. It is equally apparent that American mills are sufficiently stocked to relieve them of the necessity of anything beyond moderate purchases. While demand is not aggresive, holders still refuse to make concessions. A large part of the stock is not for sale around current prices in the leading Southern centres. A slight advance in spot quotations is noted, in sympathy with the improvement in contract values."

The buying yesterday was largely in the nature of short covering. The important speculative interest does not appear to be opposed to a temporary advance, although they are believed to be bearish on the market for a long pull. There certainly has not been a time within the last ten years when forward sales were as limited as they are now. It is believed that when the new crop comes to market the clogging of the export outlet will result in sending a great deal of cotton to New York for delivery on contract.

There has been a good deal of talk about Great Britain buying the equivalent of the Austro-German consumption, but this appears to be a concession which the Allies are hardly called upon to make.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

The American Express Company, Boston, lost yesterday before the Board of General Appraisers in claims affecting the classification of shee buckles or slides composed of cut steel, and valued at more than 20 cents per dozen pieces. Duty was taken at 60 per cent. under the tariff as jewelry, whereas the importer claimed 20 per cent. as manufactures of metal. The board decided that in view of the value of the merchandise, it fell properly within the paragraph under which assessment was made.

The Attleboro Manufacturing Company entered at Boston chain said to be made from German silver, used to string beads or make into neck chains, imported in reels of 100 meters. The Appraiser reported that it consisted of brass chain, duty being assessed at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for metal articles plated with gold or silver. It was contended by the importing concern that the duty should be 20 per cent. ad valorem as metal goods not plated with any of the precious metals. The board held that the evidence failed to show error on the part of the Collector.

Philip Wirth imported bottle washing machines and accompanying brushes. The Collector took duty at 20 per cent. ad valorem on the machines, but imposed a separate duty on the brushes. The Appraiser's report was insufficient, the protest was overruled without affirming the correctness of the Collector's return.

H. N. Hirschberg, H. Reisinger and F. L. Kraemer & Co. were overruled in claims relating to electric light carbons imported under the present act. The Collector classified the goods as carbons for flaming arc lamps, not specially provided for in Paragraph 82, while the importers claimed lower rates under the other provisions of the same paragraph, or under Paragraph 81. As the testimony was not such as to give any definite idea of the merchandise, the protests were overruled, although the Collector was not affirmed in taking duty at 30 per cent. ad valorem.

In overruling a protest by C. H. Wyman & Co., St. Louis, the board held that importers cannot throw the burden of conducting their cases before the tribunal on the board. The case before Judge Waite had to do with the liquidation of entries and the exchange rate of Mexican currency. The firm in its protest suggested that the board summon the New York appraiser and certain other witnesses to support the contentions of the firm. The General Appraiser said that this request attempts to throw upon the board the responsibility of conducting the case and producing the evidence necessary. The board refused to do this, and on the evidence upheld the Collector.

COMMODITIES MARKET.

WHEAT.

The belief is gaining ground in the wheat market that there has been more damage done to the Winter wheat crop by the prolonged rains during harvest than had generally been conceded, and during yesterday's operations shorts became anxious and bid the market up rapidly, closing prices being 1⅝ to 2¾c net higher. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.19 and No. 2 hard at $1.24½, cost, insurance and freight, New York; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.14½, cost, insurance and freight, Buffalo.

OATS.

The delayed harvest and small movement caused an active covering movement in September oats, which closed at an advance of 3½c, while the later months were firm in sympathy, showing net gains of 2⅛ to 2½c. The local cash market was firm. Standard quoted at 64½ to 65c; No. 2 white, 65 to 65½c; No. 3 white, 64 to 64½c; No. 4 white, 63½ to 64c; fancy clipped white, 67½ to 68½c; ordinary clipped white, 66 to 67c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was weak most of the day, under heavy selling prompted by the British note, which was thought to have a direct bearing on packers' claims, and on the very large stocks and slow cash demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 28,000; estimated for Thursday, 20,000. Kansas City received 4,500 and Omaha 11,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market again declined to new low records under heavy selling, prompted by the weakness in lard and what was believed to be hedge selling against offers of new-crop oil from the South. The spot position showed some steadiness, however, which was believed to indicate a better spot demand either for domestic consumption or for export. Closing prices were 4 to 8 points net lower.

COFFEE.

Underlying conditions in the coffee market presented a rather more bearish outlook inasmuch as receipts continued heavy and Brazil was willing to sell options at 20 to 30 points lower than Tuesday's offers; but the fact that prices here are already below a parity with Brazil had a tendency to check selling to some extent, although closing prices were 1 to 9 points net lower. Sales for the day were 14,250 bags. The local spot market was dull and easy, with Rio 7s quoted at 7¼c.

FINDS BUSINESS MEN MILDLY OPTIMISTIC

Due Largely to War Trade and Crop Prospects, Reserve Board Reports.

NEW YORK IMPROVEMENT

Retail Trade Better Since June—Labor More Fully Employed, Though Some Lines Lag.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—A general note of mild optimism as compared with the depression of a month ago marks the Federal Reserve Board's summary of conditions in the twelve Federal Reserve districts. Banking conditions remain dull, with large excess reserves on hand and low rates, at which the banks seem reluctant to lend on the eve of the movement of crops. But even the banks expect an improvement in the near future, and this seems to be true in most of the districts.

Crops of all sorts and in all communities are reported as excellent, and this seems to be at the bottom of the general feeling that business conditions must improve. Already in particular businesses conditions are above normal, particularly those affected by the demand in Europe for military supplies, and the number of businesses affected in this way seems to be constantly increasing.

Manufacturers of the finer grades of cotton in New England are more than holding their own, but from Fall River reports are not so good. Southern mills are finding some compensating advantages for the ill-effects of the war in the demand for such military stores as khaki, tenting, and blankets. Steel and iron work, owing to foreign and domestic demand, is improving rapidly, and the same is true regarding tin plate, to which a premium has been given by the need of canned foods for European armies. Indirectly, demands for these things have given an impetus to coal and coke.

The New York district reports good crops, except in regard to hay, which the wet weather will keep below the average. Dairying continues good. There have been complaints from the retail trade, where collections are said to be unsatisfactory. Of the New York district, the Reserve Board's bulletin says in part:

"Great activity continues in the production of supplies for shipment to Europe. Building operations are curtailed and depression is still evident in lumber, foundries, implement works, and silk mills. Strikes that were referred to a month ago are still on in Southern and Northern districts. Deposits generally are large, but in most sections the demand for loans is very light.

"During June the usual mid-year inventory time dullness prevailed in New York City. Improvement in retail trade has been reported recently. Wholesale houses state that collections are very satisfactory. More active and firm markets have developed, largely from foreign orders, in such lines as steel, coal, leather and wool. Purchases of cotton goods are restricted by the weakness in the price of raw cotton. Labor is more fully employed. There are strikes in some branches of the clothing trade. Real estate agents report conditions better than a year ago and improved over the preceding month. Renting is more active, especially in the large office buildings.

"A comparison of statistics for June, 1915, with June, 1914, shows the following changes: Exchanges through the New York Clearing House $8,025,481,549, a gain of $181,278,782; building permits, thirty-seven, to cost $3,290,330, an increase of five in number and a decrease of $103,320 in amount; shares sold on the New York Stock Exchange, 10,900,000, an increase of 6,916,000 over a year ago, but a decrease of 1,821,000 from the preceding month; transactions in bonds on the Exchange amounted to $57,824,000, an increase of $4,330,000 over a year ago, but a decrease of $6,900,000 from the preceding month; new incorporations, $80,091,100, an increase of $34,089,000; failures, 241, for $2,018,881, a decrease of fifteen in number, and $13,508,090 in amount; since Jan. 1 exports from the port are $684,407,674 against $483,485,-193; imports, $488,161,854, against $523,-152,001; the latest compilation of railroad earnings shows a gain in May, 1915, over May, 1914, of $1,324,785 gross and $14,619,397 net.

"From June 1 to July 18 the New York Clearing House banks' loans increased $115,941,000, deposits increased $163,881,000, and excess reserves decreased $13,877,000. The market rates for money have remained easy and practically unchanged since the middle of June. Bankers' acceptances command slightly easier rates of 2 1-16 to 2⅜ per cent., and the supply is lighter. Prime commercial paper is in great demand, with light offerings at 3¼ to 4 per cent., with occasional sales at 3 per cent. The large movement of gold practically stopped when the special deposits were moved from Ottawa. Sterling and Continental bills of exchange declined to new low levels. Rates have been stronger and steadier during the last week. The London discount rate has increased and is now 5⅛ per cent., as against 2⅞ per cent. on June 1."

SIGHS FOR GLORIES OF A LOBSTER AGE

Mr. Pippet's Veracious Tale of How the Crustaceans Rang the Church Bells.

MADE GREAT RAT KILLERS

Reformed Drunkards, Defeated Terriers, Fought in Sporting Mains and Made Life Merry.

Percival H. K. M. Pippet of Merrivale, N. S., who attended the recent Lobster Congress at Wood's Hole, Mass., and will sail for Halifax on the Florizel on Saturday, was speaking at his hotel last night of the work done by the congress.

It was urged by the delegates to the congress that the United States Government co-operate with the Canadian Government in adopting more stringent laws for the preservation of the crustaceans, not only by the protection of their eggs, but by preventing the capture of adults when they have reached the reproductive stage.

"The destruction of lobsters goes on apace," said Mr. Pippet last night, sadly shaking his gray head, "but it is only in line with that which I have seen during the past fifty years along the Nova Scotia coast. I shall sail for Halifax on Saturday, and after reaching there it is only a short railway journey to my home in Merrivale. Usually I am anxious to get home, but now that I realize that there is no future for our lobsters it makes me sad to revisit the scenes where they formerly were the most interesting entertaining features of our daily life.

"You can't imagine what a vital factor the lobsters were in our lives when I was a wee laddie in Merrivale, sixty-odd years ago. My father was rector of St. Swithin's-by-the-Sea, our only church, and he used to tell many tales of the early days, when the lobsters used to come ashore during the early morning and swarm about the streets. My father, who was the Rev. Percival Montmorency Killingsworth Pippet and an honor man at Oxford before he came out to Nova Scotia, closely studied the habits of the lobsters and soon grew to be an authority on them.

Lobster Defeats Bull Terrier.

"I can remember very well when he had a strong netting placed about our grounds at the Manse, so that the lobsters could not get into the gardens. They would come up out of the sea in the early morning and ravage the vegetable garden and flower beds. It was not until they destroyed a hawthorn bush that my Governor brought over from home that he decided to keep them out. Then, of course, we were always having trouble with Pompey, our bull terrier. He would insist on dashing madly into the garden and attacking the lobsters, and we always had to patch him up after the battle.

"There was one huge black crustacean of great age that we used to call Caesar. One early morning he shuffled into Pompey's kennel, and we were awakened by the sound of a terrible conflict. When we rescued Pompey he had lost a bit of his tail and a large portion of an ear. In our anxiety to save the terrier, we let the old villain of a lobster escape.

"Caesar did several other extraordinary things. One night Abercrombie Smithers, the beadle, had been indulging too freely in Andy Swenson's 'glug,' brandy mixed with burned sugar and crushed apples, and had gone to sleep in the church, leaving the big door open. In the early dawn Caesar crept in and found him there, and shortly afterward the beadle dashed into the building shrilly and calling for help. Caesar remained fastened to his anatomy until he almost reached the gate. On another occasion the village was amazed to be awakened by a confused jangle from the church bells. When father reached the church he found a number of large black lobsters swinging on the bell ropes and ringing the bells. Caesar was not among them or we would have had him for luncheon.

Sad End for Caesar.

"He came to an untimely end, though. Giles Roper, our aged Sexton, removed him, and that is rather a peculiar tale also. Giles came from England about the same time my father did, and his most treasured possession was a button from the coat of Lord Nelson, which his father gave him. His father cut it off himself, as the great Admiral was leaving the Royal George in Portsmouth to go aboard the Victory when he started on the cruise that ended in the battle of Trafalgar. All his buttons were cut off that day, you remember.

"Well, Giles wore the button on his watch chain, and one hot night forgot himself and fell asleep on the beach. It is true he had been too generous with his potations and ought not to have slept out in the night air, but he awoke in the morning he found hundreds of large lobsters crawling about him and his precious button was gone. He immediately realized that one of the brutes had snipped off the slender chain and eaten it. From then on, he became a foe to all lobsters. He used to hunt the big ones with an axe and split them open, always hoping that he would find the button. One early morning as he walked through the churchyard to ring the bells, Caesar reached out from behind a tombstone and hit him on the leg. Giles did not have his axe, but his blackthorn was sufficient, and that was the end of Caesar. It seemed rather hasty on the part of Giles, because Caesar did not have the button, and a nip in the leg was what every one had every day in the week. However, Giles was very irritable before the lobsters became popular in New York and other cities.

"Andy Swenson, who served long years as skipper of Swedish trading vessels before he became a Canadian and settled in Merrivale, was our leading bon vivant and an open champion of the lobsters. Although he was what might be called a liberal consumer, Andy had a streak of canniness, in which he was aided by a number of large lobsters.

Lobsters Promote Temperance.

"On Saturday nights during the cool weather it was his custom to brew large quantities of 'glug' and invite all his friends to share it with him. You know after a chap has had about three goblets or beakers of 'glug' he becomes quite uncertain; after he passes the sixth he becomes certain of many extraordinary things, and when he consumes the tenth he fancied the world is topsy-turvy and overrun with strange and wondrous animals.

"Now, Andy took advantage of the potency of his favorite beverage, which was always served from a low punch bowl. When he made up his mind that his guests had passed into the second stage, and that they had had quite enough, he would quietly slip out of the room. In a few minutes he'd return, and suddenly his horrified guests would see yellow and red striped lobsters, and others of more diabolic hue, crawling into the room. The party would break up in a panic, when Andy would quietly slip several of these painted beasties on to the table, and they would dive for the punch bowl and try to fish out the bits of apple floating on the surface of the glug. Thus Andy saved himself from the reproaches of the better halves of his guests and also saved quite a few shillings.

"The village feud between Jim Bellows, our sporting farmer, and Sir Marmaduke Plantagenet Featherstonhaugh started and ended in lobsters. Jim had a fast pair of two, as a fighting cocks, a number of bulldogs, and the best roost of fighting lobsters in the parish. He was the first to discover that they would fight, and before long had issued an open challenge to the countryside. Those lobster mains were gala days among our sporting fraternity. The lobsters would be pitted just like fighting cocks, and while their movements were none too fast they would struggle desperately until one or the other was hors de combat.

Lobsters Score as Rat Killers

"After the battles, in which Bellows usually came off winner, there would be a lobster supper at which all the crustaceans taking part in the combats would be eaten. It was at these suppers that the old story that I have recently seen ascribed to a well-known comedian originated. Bellows was served with a lobster minus a claw and he indignantly demanded that he be served with the winner. That was where the phrase, 'Bring me the winner,' originated.

"Sir Marmaduke was a Justice of the Peace and chairman of the Vestry-man of St. Swithin's and he decidedly disapproved of the lobster mains. He went out to Jim Bellows's place and remonstrated with him. Jim smoothed his lordship down, over a few glasses of Scotch, and that night when Sir Marmaduke came home singing in the darkness he drove his trap into the bay and there was a fearful to-do. The lobsters nipped the ponies, the dog-cart overturned, and when Sir Marmaduke was dragged out using language unbecoming a Vestryman, he had a number of lobsters clinging to him. He was frightfully upset and swore he would never speak to Jim Bellows again.

"However, their feud ended a few years later and they became fast friends. Sir Marmaduke's granary was overrun with rats that were so fierce that the cats and terriers would not face them. Bellows heard of the rats and sent over a few large lobsters which were hidden in the granary. In less than two weeks those of the rats that had not been nipped to death had fled, and Sir Marmaduke in his handsome way called on Bellows and thanked him.

"However, it is no use telling you of the past glories of the Nova Scotia lobsters. It makes me said, and it is better to forget. They have been gradually wiped out by the marketmen who supply the big restaurants. As it is now even the school children don't come home with nipped legs, and I expect before long the lobsters of Merrivale will be as extinct as the sweet-singing clams of Duxbury."

Shouldn't Have Spoiled His Supper.

Mr. Moon of Atlanta is suing his wife for a divorce because she beat him over the head with a poker while he was eating supper. We seldom criticise a lady, but it seems to us she ought to have waited until he had finished supper before she swatted him—Houston Post.

FINDS WEEDS EDIBLE.

Commuter Says Despised "Pussley" is Better Than Spinach.

"I am eating weeds this Summer," a man who came in on a New Haven local was heard to say yesterday. "Yes, Sir, and I like them. I haven't turned Nebuchadnezzar, but I am devouring grass —sour grass. Also I have discovered that a certain lowly esteemed but very exuberant variety of vegetation that has menaced my garden in past years is edible. I have eaten it, and I enjoy it. I refer to what is commonly or gardenly known as 'pussley.'

"I have always thought that my place was the original home of pussley. It has grown so thickly there that, next to bugs of many varieties, it has done most to fill a Summer with care. After I had scratched the ground for the first plantings the pussley would be the first thing up, covering the ground in places like a rich carpet. Now, I don't mean parsley—you know the pretty weed, with the thick oval leaves and the pink stalks, that grows flat upon the ground at the start.

"Well, we got a Belgian woman for cook this Summer, and at her first visit to the garden she fell into raptures over a lot of pussley.

"We cultivate it in my country, and it brings a high price,' was the startling information she imparted. So she cooked some of it for us, as she would cook spinach, the result was wonderful. Since then we have eaten up the pussley in the garden as fast as it got big enough to gather. No longer is it despised.

"As for the sour grass, the cook gave us a soup the other night in which that was a main ingredient, and it was delicious. Another thing I have learned is that Swiss chard furnished two delicious dishes, for the cook takes the stalks and chops them up and cooks them with cream. Also, our thrifty Belgian has introduced us to rhubarb served as a vegetable. The stalks of the plepiant, of course, she still gives us in the shape of pies, but the leaves, which our old cook used to throw away, she cooks, and it is better than spinach.

"I am wondering now if she won't discover that hogweed is edible. If she demonstrates that, the family stomach will take the place of a weedpile on our place next Summer."

OPEN LONGFELLOW'S HOME.

Cragie House in Cambridge a Memorial for the Public.

By the will of Mrs. Richard Henry Dana, a daughter of the poet Longfellow, which has just been filed for probate in Massachusetts, the fact is disclosed that the old Cragie house in Brattle Street, Cambridge, facing the Charles River, is to be preserved intact for the public.

The old house is a familiar sight to all visitors to Cambridge, with its broad front and spacious grounds. The surviving heirs agreed to take care of the house to three Trustees, together with a sum of money for its upkeep, for the triple purpose, "(1) as a specimen of the best Colonial architecture of the eighteenth century; (2) as a historical monument of the occupation of the house by George Washington during the siege of Boston in the Revolutionary War, and (3) as a memorial to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow."

It is further stipulated in the will that heirs of the Longfellow family may live in the house by paying rent, but when the time comes that no surviving heirs wish to occupy it the house is to become a memorial "for the benefit of the public."

The deed was signed by Miss Alice Longfellow, a daughter of the poet, who now occupies the house; by Miss Annie Thorp, the "Allegra" of the poem, "The Old Clock on the Stairs," which was written in the Craigie house, and by Ernest W. Longfellow, a son of the poet.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The Florida disturbance has reached Southern New England with decreased intensity and the Western one is central over North Lake Michigan, also in more moderate form.

During the last twenty-four hours the two disturbances have caused general rains from the upper Mississippi Valley, eastward and in the South Atlantic States, and over the greater portion of this large area the rainfall was excessive especially in Southern New England, the Middle Atlantic States, North Carolina, and the Eastern Lake Erie district.

The east storm was also attended by gales along the Middle Atlantic and Southern New England coasts, while the Western one also caused some moderately strong winds over the North Upper Lake region.

Over the Western portion of the country the weather was generally fair only a few scattered thundershowers having occurred. It is considerably cooler in the Ohio Valley, and temperatures are generally below the seasonal average east of the Rocky Mountains except in the Middle Atlantic States, where high temperatures continue, while in the mountains temperatures are above the seasonal average. Except for showers Thursday over the North Upper Lake region and New England, the weather will be generally fair Thursday and Friday east of the Mississippi River, although occasional local thundershowers are probable in the south portion of the South Atlantic district. It will be somewhat warmer Friday in the Upper Lake region and the Ohio Valley.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic coast will be moderate to fresh east to southeast; Middle Atlantic coast, moderate variable; South Atlantic coast, moderate, mostly southwest and south.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND FRIDAY.

New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Partly cloudy Thursday and Friday.

New England—Showers Thursday. Friday, fair and warmer.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermograph at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

PERKINS TO CHECK STAMPEDE IN ERIE

ROOSEVELT SUGGESTS IT

George W. Perkins, one of the most influential Bull Moose leaders left in the party, went to Buffalo last night to address a meeting of the Erie County Progressives called for this afternoon by Chauncey J. Hamlin. Mr. Hamlin, like Theodore Douglas Robinson, believes it is time for the Progressives to get back into the Republican fold. He has sent a letter to Progressives in Erie County asking them to attend today's meeting and give their reasons, if they have any, why the Progressives should not go back to the Republican Party.

Mr. Perkins admitted yesterday that he had not been invited to attend Mr. Hamlin's party, but he said he was going anyway. He admitted that he intended to try his best to show Mr. Hamlin and the other Progressives who share his opinions the error of their ways. Although Mr. Perkins would not admit it, it was stated that he was going on the Buffalo mission at the request of Colonel Roosevelt.

Mr. Perkins saw the Colonel when he arrived from the West a few days ago, and it is known that he shares the views the Colonel expressed in his statement that he intended to remain with the party. Mr. Perkins admitted this much yesterday, and added that his views were the same as those put forth by Progressive Leader William Childs of Brooklyn, who said it was the duty of Progressives to stick together, at least until they saw what kind of a Presidential candidate the Republicans were going to put forward next year.

Asked yesterday for his views regarding the future of the Progressive Party, Mr. Perkins shrugged his shoulders and said:

"I am too hard at work and too busy a man to engage in any controversies."

Mr. Perkins intimated that he had a message of importance to deliver at the Buffalo meeting and that he didn't intend to mince words.

"Were you invited to attend the conference?" he was asked.

"No," replied Mr. Perkins. "I wasn't invited, but I consider it to be my duty to go there as a member of the national organization." Mr. Perkins is chairman of the Executive Committee of the Progressive National Committee.

"Do you think you will have any trouble convincing them as to what you think is the proper thing to do?" Mr. Perkins was next asked.

"I am going to do my best," he replied with a smile.

There is to be a meeting of all the Progressive county chairmen at the Ten Eyck Hotel in Albany on Friday, called by State Chairman Thompson, and when Mr. Perkins was asked if he expected to attend he replied:

"I really don't know. You see, I am so busy that I don't know just what I will be able to do."

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 4.—Tentative assessment of second-class railroad property in New Jersey has been completed by the State Board of Assessment, and shows that for the year 1915 the total is $2,750,640 greater than that of 1914. The total assessment for this year is $107,138,680.

MURDERED IN ITALIAN FEUD.

Man Who Had Caused Author's Arrest Shot Down in Road.

Felecia Roba of 84 Washington Street, Flushing, was murdered yesterday as the result of a feud among Italians. He was found semi-conscious by John Schumacher, a farmer, on the Fresh Meadow Road, about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, shot in the back, arm, and right ear. He died in the Flushing Hospital a few hours later.

Seven men were arrested, and in the hospital Roba identified Camito Nicola of 84 Washington Street, Flushing; Francisco Gru of 35 South Prince Street, Flushing, and Savara Mosso of 84 Washington Street, Flushing, as the men who shot him, the police say. They were arraigned before Magistrate Leach and held without bail for examination on Friday.

The police think Roba was murdered because he caused the arrest of Antonio Palesto of 84 Washington Street, Flushing, for carrying a pistol. Palesto is now in the Queens County Jail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury.

PRYING WIFE FREED AT LAST.

Gets Divorce Fourteen Years After Opening Note That Wrecked Home.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 4.—A letter carrier delivered a letter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Barton of this city fourteen years ago. The letter was addressed to Mr. Barton, and, as he was busy at the office, his wife received it from the postman.

Mrs. Barton, whose husband is one of the leading real estate dealers of Paterson, had only been married for two years. The note was written on perfumed pink paper and the address was in a woman's hand. Following a few moments over the teakettle spout it was an easy matter to ascertain the contents of the epistle. And right there was where the trouble started, for the letter was to othe effect that th writer was unable to meet "Dear Louis" at a certain place and suggested another rendezvous. It was signed, "Lovingly, Sadie." When Mr. Barton returned home there was a quarrel, and in November, 1901, the couple parted. They have both lived in Paterson ever since, but never have been reconciled.

The final chapter was written today when Vice Chancellor Eugene Walker granted Mrs. Barton a final decree of divorce. Mr. Barton did not contest his wife's action.

VETERAN KILLED BY TRAIN.

Thomas Jones Stood on Track Looking at Storm's Work.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 4.—Thomas Jones of 133 Henry Street climbed the Lackawanna Railroad embankment to cross over just east of Centre Street's grade crossing, after making rent collections in Mulligan Place this morning. He stood in the middle of the eastbound track to look at some huge trees that had been blown over in the storm. His head was turned so that he did not see an approaching Lake Hopatcong express, and as he was deaf he did not hear it. The train ran him down and killed him instantly.

Mr. Jones was a retired butcher who owned much real estate. He was 78 years old, and a veteran of the civil war. He was in Sherman's army on the march from Atlanta to the sea. His wife, who was spending the Summer at Belmar, two sons and two daughters survive him.

BET IN SINGER PLANT.

Three Men Arrested for Laying Wagers in Jersey Factory.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 4.—Arrested at the Singer factory, Anthony Devine of 643 Franklin Street and Michael Donahue of 620 East Jersey Street, with William Miller, a saloon keeper of 701 East Jersey Street, were held in bail of $500 each today, which they furnished, to await the action of the Grand Jury for bookmaking and accepting money for bets on horse races.

More than a dozen other men were arrested as witnesses after they had placed bets by means of small paper slips. The betting, according to the police, was carried on in the Singer plant and in saloons near by. Donahue pleaded guilty to the charge against him, while the other two men waived examination.

Appeals Hudson Tube Tax.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 4.—The United States Supreme Court will be called on to pass on the case of the State of New Jersey in its attempt to collect taxes on the tube through which the trains of the Pennsylvania Railroad go under the Hudson River into New York. Notice of appeal has been filed by the Pennsylvania Tunnel and Terminal Company to the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals in upholding the assessment by the State Board of Assessors. The State Board levied tax on a total assessment of $5,624,385 for the years 1908 to 1909. The railroad company claims the assessment ought not to be more than $376,952.

IN NEW JERSEY.

JERSEY CITY.—The trackmen and laborers' strike on the Erie Railroad was settled yesterday morning, some of the strikers returning to work. The places of the others were filled by new men. The strike was for $1.50 a day instead of $1.30.

NEWARK.—Children found the left arm and leg of a one-year-old child at the foot of Passaic Avenue yesterday in the Passaic River. The police are investigating.

MONTCLAIR.—The Equal Suffrage League announced a house-to-house canvass yesterday in the interest of votes for women. A part of the Fourth Ward already canvassed showed 40 per cent. of the men in favor. Circular letters will be sent also.

MONTCLAIR.—James W. Ames of 4 Sunset Avenue, Verona, notified the police yesterday that his home had been robbed of $800 worth of silver.

HACKENSACK.—John Cross, chauffeur for the Gas Department, broke his leg yesterday morning while cranking his auto.

LONG BRANCH.—Anna Bongarvione, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Bongarvione of Morris Avenue, had her leg broken yesterday by the automobile of Benjamin P. Harris, who took her to the Monmouth Hospital, where it was said she would recover.

PATERSON.—The officials of Passaic County and this city will be guests of the Aldermen at their annual clambake and swim this afternoon at Rockaway Beach.

MILLVILLE.—Lehman Jones fell down stairs at the home of his brother at Dennisville, Cape May County, early yesterday morning while walking in his sleep and was injured fatally.

TRENTON.—The State Board of Taxes and Assessments instructed yesterday the Sussex County Board of Assessors to prefer charges against P. W. Henderson, Assessor of Franklin Borough, for failing to levy proper assessment on the New Jersey Zinc Company, which increased it stock from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000 since the beginning of the year. Henderson, who is also an official of the company, fixed its assessment at $2,500,000.

RED BANK, N. J.—Instead of the Monmouth County Fair Association holding the annual fair this season, it the fair grounds in Middlesex Township, near this city, a two days' series of sports will be held on Saturday and Monday, Sept. 4 and 6, consisting of horse racing, motorcycle racing, and firemen's contests.

FORTY PERSONS HURT IN TROLLEY CRASH

ALL PASSENGERS INJURED

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 4.—A trolley car containing forty passengers was upset here this afternoon on the line of the Monmouth County Electric Company, running between Red Bank and Oceanic, and four persons were hurt seriously. The other passengers suffered minor injuries. The accident happened opposite the greenhouses of the late M. C. D. Borden, the Fall River cotton manufacturer.

The car, operated by motorman William Claile, jumped the track at a sharp turn. The passengers were all thrown heavily to the side of the car when it turned over. Ex-Mayor Frank McMahon of Rumson was penned under the front step. Immediately following the crash against a telegraph pole, Chief of Police John McPeak rushed to the scene with several laborers on the Borden estate and pulled Mr. McMahon from underneath the car. An automobile was called, and he was taken to his home, where Dr. James J. Reed found that he had suffered a broken leg and several painful body bruises.

Mrs. Ida Steffens, living near by, was also pulled out of the wreck. Other passengers managed to escape through the roof of the car. A man whose name could not be learned was lifted from under the car after having been dug out with a spade. He only suffered a bruise on the side next to the car. All of the passengers suffered from the shock, and were taken to their homes in automobiles.

Conductor Stephen Woolley of Long Branch said the motorman was driving at a moderate speed, when he felt the car swerve and leave the track just after he had slowed down for the stop at the Oceanic Post Office. He applied the brakes, and the trolley skidded about one hundred feet and then turned quickly on its side against a telegraph pole. The car was badly wrecked, parts of it being strewn along the track. Everybody in the car was thrown far enough from the track to permi ta relief trolley to take several passengers back to Red Bank.

NEED NOT RISK OPERATION.

New Jersey Court Decides a Point in Compensation Law.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 4.—According to an opinion filed in the Supreme Court by Justice Kalisch, a human being is not obliged to take a risk of death, however slight, in order that the pecuniary obligations created by the law in his favor against his employer may be minimized. The court reversed the verdict of the Hudson Common Pleas Court in giving judgment to John McNally against the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company.

Suit was brought under the Workmen's Compensation act to recover for injuries sustained which resulted in loss of motion of the left hip. If McNally were operated upon he would recover in about six months, it was said, and if the operation were unsuccessful he would be left in about the same condition as at present.

Providing the operation was performed, the trial Judge decided the disability is temporary. It was held by Justice Kalisch, however, that the injuries were permament unless relieved by operation, and it was wrong to proceed under the theory that McNally should submit to an operation.

CHARITY AT END OF STRIKE.

Fund for Families of Men Killed in Bayonne Is Proposed.

Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead, whose efforts brought about a settlement of the Standard Oil strike last week in Bayonne, expects to confer next Monday with the Directors of the Standard and Tide Water Oil Companies regarding his plan to have the companies and workmen contribute to a fund for the relief of the families of the five men killed in the riots.

A statement, which in part read as follows, was issued yesterday by the strikers' committee:

"We desire to express our thanks to the Governor of New Jersey for the friendly attitude he assumed in our struggle. We believe that sending the militia would have surely resulted in further bloodshed and embittered the strikers against the company, and would have deferred a settlement for a considerable time.

"Sheriff Kinkead's efforts are greatly appreciated by all of us. We have also found friends in Colonel Vickers and Commissioners Cronin, Mara, and Wilson. We hope this will help people to see our side of the matter, and thank them for their sympathy toward us."

Hoboken Licenses Trolley Cars.

At the meeting of the Commissioners of Hoboken yesterday and ordinance was adopted under which Public Service trolley cars entering Hoboken must have a license, for which it must pay $25. It is estimated that 100 cars are running in Hoboken.

POLICE WINNERS SELECTED.

A police bulletin was issued yesterday announcing awards made to policemen who submitted the best suggestions for improving the service in a competition closing on April 15, in which 102 suggestions were received.

Sergeant Robert H. McGill, who was credited with the best suggestion, receives recognition which is entered upon his record and has the force of a "commendation" when he comes up for promotion. Sergeant Harry A. Taylor and Policemen G. M. Krams and Frederick T. Gleason for their suggestions received marks on their records equal to "excellent police duty."

McGill's winning suggestion was that at each station there should be two blackboards—one on which the complaints and alarms received within the last twenty-four hours should be written according to beats, so that every policeman would know what had been happening on his beat, and another on which important alarms and official orders should be written.

Taylor made two winning suggestions—one that a school for patrolmen be established and another that emergency automobiles with complete first-aid and life-saving outfits and crime-detecting equipment, such as searchlights and photographic apparatus, be stationed at a central spot and kept ready to set out at a second's notice.

Krams suggested that signal boxes be made so that a citizen could open them and send in a message without delay to the nearest station, at the same time ringing a bell to attract the attention of the policeman on the beat. Gleason advised that prisoners, instead of being taken first to stations, should be taken directly to the courts where they would appear for trial and should be detained at the prisons connected with the courts.

OPPOSES 3-CENT LINE PLAN.

Bridge Commissioner Thinks Third Ave. R. R. Proposal Better for City.

Bridge Commissioner Kracke does not like the proposal of the Manhattan Bridge Three-Cent Line to operate a local service over the Williamsburg Bridge. In a letter, sent yesterday to Frederick W. Rowe, President of the line, the commissioner said the offer of the Third Avenue Railway Company was much more satisfactory. The Commissioner wrote:

Considerable expense would attach to the financing of the new line suggested by your company, all of which would have to be borne by the profits under the amortization plan. This, of course, would fall to a certain extent upon the city on the assumption that the city will share substantially in the profits of operation under any new contract that is drawn.

President Rowe's proposal was that his company receive half the profits above the 6 per cent. based on the cost and amortization of the new investment. The offer of the Third Avenue Railway Company is for operation at cost, plus 10 per cent., without any request that the city divide with the company the surplus profits above this amount.

MANHATTAN CLUB'S HISTORY

Henry Watterson to Write Volume for Semi-Centennial.

To celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Manhattan Club in October next, the club will publish its history, which will be written by Colonel Henry Watterson of The Louisville Courier-Journal. The Colonel has been a member since 1866, when he was introduced by the elder August Belmont. The history will be published in one volume at the price of $10, and the edition limited to 1,000 copies. The DeVinne Press will print the volume.

The Anniversary Committee comprises Morgan J. O'Brien, Chairman; Victor J. Dowling, George F. Harriman, William R. Hearst, George L. Ingraham, Alexander Konta, Martin W. Littleton, Manton Marble, William F. McCombs, James O'Gorman, Alton B. Parker, William F. Sheehan, John B. Stanchfield and Thomas F. Vietor.

SEND NURSES TO BAY RIDGE.

Health Officers Increase Precautions to Check Typhoid.

Two new cases of typhoid fever were reported to the Health Department from the Bay Ridge district of Brooklyn yesterday and caused the department to adopt stringent methods to combat the spread of the disease.

Dr. Billings, Director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, in a report states that there are now thirty-eight cases in the affected district. Departmental nurses have been ordered to the area affected, between Thirty-ninth and Forty-fourth Streets and Sixth and Eighth Avenues. Every family in that area will be visited and literature will be distributed. Advice will be given to boil all water and milk, wash all vegetables, screen the windows, and adopt other methods of prevention.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., Aug. 4.—Three weekly newspapers, the Highlands Herald, the Rumson Review and the Red Bank Independent, owned by the Monmouth Press Company of this place, were sold at a chattel mortgage sale this afternoon to John J. Leonard of Atlantic Highlands for $5 each. The Monmouth Press and the Seabright Sentinel, owned by the same company, were bought in by Mr. Leonard for $5 each. The publications will be continued.

TELLS OF ATTACK AT DARDANELLES

Mowing Down of Troops by Machine Fire on Landing Described by British Officer.

WITH DUBLIN FUSILIERS

Details of the landing of allied troops at the Dardanelles and of the fighting on the Gallipoli Peninsula were given to a TIMES reporter yesterday by a British officer who took part in the attack of April 25 and remained there until the beginning of June. He spoke optimistically of the outlook for the Allies capturing Constantinople before the end of the Summer and expressed the opinion that if the troops had been landed on the peninsula when the bombardment by the fleet was begun the Turkish capital would have been captured by now. He asserted that troops were being rushed from England to the Dardanelles at the rate of 20,000 a week, and that from Toulon French troops were being conveyed in thousands. There must be nearly 250,000 troops on the peninsula at the present time, he said.

"There have been all kinds of reports circulated," the officer went on to say, "regarding the sinking of British warships in the Dardanelles and the number of lives lost. In all five ships were torpedoed—the Goliath, Majestic, Ocean, Triumph, and Irresistible. The greatest number of men lost was on the Goliath, which sunk in ten minutes and drowned 600 men. There were some lives lost on the Triumph and the Majestic, but none on the Ocean or the Irresistible. The Ocean was a long time sinking and the Irresistible was towed across to Malta with 2,000 tons of water in her compartments.

"Other warships which took part in the bombardment were the Queen Elizabeth, Cornwall, Implacable, Surprise, Lord Nelson, Agamemnon, Euryalus, and Dublin. There is no truth in the report that the Agamemnon was torpedoed. It was probably the Irresistible the Germans had heard about from the Turks, but they did not get the name right. The Queen Elizabeth went home early in May to have her guns relined, and was replaced by the Warspite.

"The slaughter on the peninsula was terrific, but there was very little sickness among the men. When the first landing was made on Sunday, April 25, the weather was fair, with very little wind. It was cold at morning and night, but very hot at midday.

Landing of the Troops.

"The first expedition, composed of 80,000 English and Australian troops, embarked at Alexandria with stores and ammunition in 100 transports and assembled at Lemnos, where ships of the British and French fleets were awaiting them. From there the transports sailed under convoy for Tenedos, arriving on Saturday evening, April 24. Preparations were made immediately for the attack by land on the fort of Sedd-el Bahr, and 2,000 troops from the transports were transferred with their equipment to the River Clyde, a big collier, which was to take them in shore.

"At 4 o'clock Sunday morning the big guns from the battleships opened fire on the fort and half an hour later the soldiers started to land from the River Clyde, while Australians were landing from the Gulf of Saros and the French troops were attacking the Asiatic side at Kum Kale. I landed with 200 of the Dublin Fusiliers who had been detailed to remain on the collier until the others had gone ashore and then to land and try to capture the village of Sedd-el Bahr.

"The Turks had built barbed wire entanglements twenty yards out from shore. These were so thick that nippers were of no use; the only implement that could be used with success on the wire was an axe. The Dublins were practically wiped out by the enemy's machine guns as soon as they left the River Clyde; they never really got ashore at Sedd-el Bahr.

"There was some delay in landing the Munsters because the commanding officer was averse to sacrificing his men under the deadly fire of the machine guns, but they eventually got ashore; they shared the fate of the Dublins. The sand was soft and hilly, without shelter of any kind, and the only thing a man could do after managing to land was to dig into the sand and make his own dugout.

Started with 200; Back with 27.

"I went with 200 Dublins to make a detour and capture the village, which was easier said than done. The Turks had tunneled through from house to house. They had painted their faces yellow, the color of the bricks, so that it was difficult to observe them when they removed a brick from the wall to peer at us through the aperture. We lost all but twenty-seven of our party and just managed to get back to the shore. By this time it was 5 o'clock Sunday; the troops had got a footing on the shore, and the enemy's firing had ceased.

"Next morning at 4 o'clock the guns opened fire again from the ships. The guns from the fort replied, and the machine guns perched on a cliff near the Village of Sedd-el Bahr fusilladed the beach, where the troops were mowed down by hundreds. This went on until the guns were captured by the East Lancashire Regiment after a heavy loss of men.

"The Turks were afraid of the bayonet, but they fought splendidly and proved themselves to be very good marksmen, especially at sniping. One Turkish Sergeant was killed after he had picked off thirty-four of our men with his rifle. He had dug a pit in the sand behind a small clump of bushes, which hid his head, and had enough rations to last him seven days and a thousand rounds of ammunition.

"The Turkish howitzers are run on trolleys, so that after a round is fired the gun is moved to another position immediately. Excellent work has been done by the aviators in locating the masked guns inshore and also by the captive balloons, which were sent up from the Arkroyal and two other ships detailed for balloon service."

The officer said there was a number of hospital ships in the Dardanelles to take care of the wounded. The cases for major operations were taken to the military and naval hospitals at Malta.

The ships of the British fleet, he said, were attacked by Austrian submarines which had come to the Dardanelles from Pola, the Austrian naval base on the Adriatic. There was a large number of British submarines in the strait, and a flotilla of torpedo boat destroyers, in addition to mine sweepers and trawlers.

One of the steamers used as a hospital ship was formerly well known in the New York transatlantic service. This is the Red Star liner Vaderland, renamed the Southland.

The British officer said that the French had a big fleet of warships at the Dardanelles, with the Jeanne d'Arc as flagship, and that the Russians had one cruiser, the only war vessel with five funnels in the strait.

IDLE ACTOR ROBS MAY IRWIN

Detectives Hooker and Hauser of the Second Branch Bureau yesterday afternoon saw a shabbily dressed man near Ninth Avenue and Forty-sixth Street with a roll of bills in his hand. Suspicious of his appearance, they questioned him, then took him to the Second Branch Bureau. There they learned that May Irwin, the actress, living at 638 Lexington Avenue, had just been in to complain that she had been robbed of $149.

The prisoner said he was Walter Kelly, an actor, of 335 West Forty-fifth Street, and confessed that he had committed the robbery. He said he was out of work and at a theatrical agency had seen Miss Irwin receive the money, which she put in her purse. Some one called her, and she put her purse down, he said, and he grabbed it and ran. He threw the purse into an ash can and was counting the money when the detectives arrested him.

DUKE FORCED TO BAR GATES

Public Abuses Privilege of Using His Immense Park.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 4.—James B. Duke, who did his best to let the general public share the beauties of his immense park here, has found himself forced by destructiveness and insolence on the part of chance visitors to close the gates at all times.

The "last straw" was the advent last week of an automobile party said to be from Richmond, Penn., with 180 cars. The whole party picnicked on the lawn in front of the mansion, disregarding the signs warning them off, and when they left the grass was strewn with empty lunch boxes and bottles. Flowers and shrubs were picked without permission and in violation of signs prohibiting it.

Mr. Duke has spent about $100,000 a year in maintaining the park. He began by admitting the public every day but Sunday. One day an irate autoist threatened to thrash the owner of the park because his carriage happened to block one of the narrow drives. Another time the three-year-old daughter of Mr Duke was nearly run down in her baby carriage. The park was then closed except two days a week. Now the public has forfeited all privileges.

Tennyson's Sister Dies.

Miss Matilda Tennyson, last surviving sister of the late Lord Alfred Tennyson, Poet Laureate of England, died on Tuesday at her home in London in her ninety-ninth year. She was born in 1917 in Somersby, Lincolnshire, and was eight years younger than the poet. Her father was rector of the church in that village for many years, and she was born and lived in the rectory of the church until her father died, when Miss Tennyson removed to London. Her nephew is Lord Hallam Tennyson, son of the former Poet Laureate, and the second of the title.

Rogers Divorce Decree Filed.

Root, Clark, Buckner & Howland, attorneys for Caroline Giddings Rogers, yesterday filed a final decree of divorce in their client's suit against Loriys Elton Rogers, who several days ago married Ida Sniffen Walters. The decree was signed by Justice Ford several days ago. A clause forbidding Rogers to marry again in the life of his former wife made it necessary for him to go to New Jersey with Mrs. Walters to marry.

SIX ENVOYS AGREE TO JOIN LANSING IN MEXICO NOTE

Hear Reports on Conditions That President Would End —Confer Again Today.

CARRANZA FILES OBJECTION

Agent Warns Each Latin-American Representative That First Chief Will Not Step Aside.

AN ULTIMATUM FOR HIM

His Superiority Over Other Factions Offers Difficulties — Envoys Question Future Steps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—As a result of the important conference held at the State Department today, in which representatives of the United States and six Latin-American Governments participated, these six Governments will join the United States in an appeal to the warring factions in Mexico to compose their differences and set up an orderly central authority in their perturbed country.

Beyond that point, however, no progress was made. The conference will be continued tomorrow in the expectation that it will be concluded in one more session.

The first joint step will be a repetition of the efforts that had been made by the United States to have the factions stop fighting and agree on the personnel of a central Government in Mexico City. Should this step fail the United States will be prepared to go further even if it has to act alone. But a hopeful feeling prevails that the nations of South and Central America will join with this Government to the extent of giving their moral support to whatever course is undertaken by the United States.

In today's conference, which lasted nearly two hours, the purposes of the United States with regard to Mexico were made plain. The desire of this Government is that the Mexican factions shall compose their differences and set up a central authority in Mexico City which will have the support of all those now engaged in hostilities. If the United States should be disappointed in this desire through the refusal of one of the factions to agree to the proposal, this Government will be prepared to deal with the other factions and will grant its "active moral support" to any Government that they establish. It seems to have been determined also by this Government that it will go to extremes to keep in power any central authority to which it grants formal recognition, but whether the United States would be prepared to go to the point of armed intervention is something that was not developed as the result of the conference today.

Later Steps to be Considered.

For the present, as a consequence of today's discussion among the representatives of the United States and six Latin-American countries, the only certainty with reference to a new move in the Mexican situation is that President Wilson's appeal to the Mexican factions to compose their differences and establish orderly government will be renewed with the backing of the Governments of Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala. There is a feeling here that on account of General Carranza's attitude this effort will fail. At the second session of the conference, to take place tomorrow, some attempt may be made to outline a program which will take into consideration future action by the Governments concerned if Carranza refuses to join with Villa and Zapata in carrying out the plan of restoring order suggested by the United States.

It was disclosed that President Wilson had been in correspondence with the Executives of the Latin-American nations, who have urged that the United States take the lead in a strong position toward Mexico, and in this informal way have pledged their support to a Pan-American concert of action.

The conferees met in the private office of the Secretary of State shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon. In addition to Secretary Lansing, those present were Domicio da Gama, Ambassador of Brazil; Romulo S. Naon, Ambassador of Argentina; Eduardo Suarez, Ambassador of Chile; Ignacio Calderon, Minister of Bolivia; Carlos Maria de Peña, Minister of Uruguay; Joaquin Mendez, Minister of Guatemala, and Paul Fuller of New York, who twice went to Mexico on special missions for President Wilson.

A considerable portion of the session was taken up in an exposition of the conditions in Mexico. Almost the entire country is stricken, and people are suffering from lack of food and in some cases are actually starving In Mexico City conditions are deplorable, but an improvement is expected through the opening up of railroad communication from Vera Cruz and the consequent shipment of food supplies into the capital. All present seemed to have been well informed as to this situation and to be in perfect accord with the United States in its desire to bring about improvement and relieve Mexico from the chaos that has prevailed almost without interruption for five years.

Envoys Question Methods.

It was gathered after the conference that while they were as anxious as the Government and people of the United

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The trawler Grimbarian, and the steamer Portia, 433 tons, of Liverpool, were sunk today, presumably by a submarine. Six of the crew of the Grimbarian were drowned and four were rescued. The crew of the Portia was saved.

The British steamship Costello, of 891 tons, also was sunk. One sailor was drowned, and the others of the crew were saved.

CAN'T STOP MUNITIONS, OUR REPLY TO VIENNA

Answer to Austria's Appeal for an Embargo Is Drawn Up and Will Be Sent at Once.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The American reply to Austro-Hungary's note suggesting an embargo on war exports to the Allies has practically been finished by the State Department and will be sent to Vienna within the next few days.

The note reiterates the position of the United States, as expressed on a previous occasion to Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, that "the placing of an embargo on the trade in arms at this time would * * * be a direct violation of the neutrality of the United States."

Austria's contention that a "neutral Government is not permitted to allow unhindered trade in contraband of war if this trade assumes such a character or proportions that the neutrality of the country is thereby impaired," is declared in the American reply to be impractical. The United States contends that a limit beyond which the amount of war exports to a belligerent endangers the neutrality of a non-belligerent cannot be arbitrarily set. The further contention in the Austrian note that Congress would be justified in empowering the President to restrict war shipments is met with the statement that the United States feels any change in its own laws during the war would be an unjustifiable departure from its policy of strict neutrality."

FIND NO TREATIES CURB THE CENSORS

Our Government Powerless to Demand Relief, but Will Press Informal Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—State Department officials virtually have decided that they are powerless to obtain relief from the rigid censorship to which American mail and cable messages passing through the belligerent countries of Europe are subjected. American citizens and business firms at home and abroad have filed complaints, but investigation has convinced the department that no treaties can be invoked in protest.

Appeals from business houses which asserted that impairment of the cable service through censorship has been a serious embarrassment financially caused the department to begin informal negotiations for softening the censorship early in the war. Secretary Lansing said today that while these efforts were being continued virtually nothing had come of them.

FRENCH WAR BONDS TOTAL $1,391,600,000

Minister Ribot Forecasts Long-Term Loan to Consolidate Short-Term Obligations.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—In a discussion in the French Senate today on the bill to raise the limit of national defense issues which was passed in the Chamber of Deputies July 29, Alexandre Ribot, the Minister of Finance, reviewed the financial situation.

"On July 31," he said, "there were 6,938,000,000 francs ($1,391,600,000) of defense issues in circulation. In July alone 825,000,000 francs ($165,000,000) net was placed in the short-term bonds and 322,000,000 francs ($64,400,000) in the long-term outstanding.

"Our financial burdens are constantly growing. Arms and ammunition cost a great deal. We shall probably have recourse to a long-term loan whereby we can consolidate all our short-term treasury issues. We still have a great military and financial effort to make to reach a victorious conclusion of the war.

"The public brings in its gold without pressure. It is conscious of the situation and feels that today no man can save himself by thinking solely of himself. It can only be done by the citizens giving the country their lives if necessary and their goods in this world in any case.

"We must conceal nothing from the country. It is worthy to hear everything. Only in dissimulating nothing can we fittingly respond to the country's fine confidence."

The bill increasing the limit of national defense issues was passed.

The total exchanges of gold for paper since May 27 amount to 314,741,475 francs ($62,948,295.) At Troyes two peasants brought in 18,000 francs in louis d'or blackened from long burial. At Romilly an army officers proffered for exchange a splendid collection of ancient coins, and an artist medals he had received from the Salon. The authorities refused to accept these sacrifices.

The temporary issue of paper money of the value of $1 and $4 will be retired and replaced by a better quality of notes.

WILSON TO CONFER ON DEFENSE PLANS

SEEKS TO AVOID FRICTION

Aims to Develop Proposals So Broad and Sane Congress Must Adopt Them.

MESSAGE TO PRESENT THEM

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 5.—With the object of developing a broad and convincing program of national defense, one calculated to meet with the approval of Congress, President Wilson is planning to co-operate with the Chairmen of the Military and Naval Affairs Committees of the Senate and House, as well as with Secretaries Garrison and Daniels of the War and Navy Departments, before finally deciding on the recommendations he will make in his next message to the National Legislature.

The President told friends here tonight that, while he had made no definite plans for consulting with the Chairmen of the committees interested in the question of national defense, he would arrange to see them before Congress convened in order to unite on a single program of action.

When the President sees the Chairmen of the four committees he expects to have before him the reports now being prepared by Mr. Garrison and Mr. Daniels. The heads of the War and Navy Departments are expected to take part in the conference or series of conferences in order to explain personally their recommendations.

The President already has written to Chairman Padgett of the House Naval Affairs Committee inviting him to meet him on Mr. Wilson's return to Washington. While he did not say tonight whether he had written similar letters to the Chairmen of the other committees it was reported that he had done so.

The President believes the time has come for the United States to decide on a definite program of national defense, and is anxious that as little friction as possible should develop over the question when it is presented to the two houses of Congress. He wants to have the entire weight of the Administration behind the policy agreed upon. The President is opposed to a policy of "militarism," but thinks the United States should be adequately defended.

Senate Chairmen Support Plan.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 5.—"I am in thorough sympathy with the President's plan of calling a conference of committee Chairmen and Cabinet officers to consider a program for national defense," said Senator George E. Chamberlain, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, tonight. "I have been in communication with Secretary of War Garrison on this very subject for the last few months, and I held several conferences with him before I left Washington. The proposed conferences should have no difficulty in agreeing on a definite program, and I am sure that Congress will be in almost solid support of it."

Senator Chamberlain said that he would propose that the authorized size of the army be increased from 100,000 to 150,000 men and that the army be recruited up to its full strength. He said he hoped some means of concentrating the military forces of the country would be effected so that they could be mobilized easily.

Senator B. R. Tillman of South Carolina, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, who is spending the Summer in Portland, also indorsed the proposed conference and said he was prepared to attend if called. Senator Tillman said his recent tour of the Pacific Coast had convinced him that it should be better protected.

ERIE FLOOD DEATHS NOW PLACED AT 75

Slow Progress in Searching Mountains of Debris for Bodies—Property Loss $6,000,000.

ERIE, Penn., Aug. 5.—Two additional bodies of victims of the flood of Tuesday night were recovered today, making the number of dead thus far found twenty-six.

Because of the great mass of debris, which stretches for two miles along the Mill Creek valley, the search for bodies is progressing slowly, and city officials believe that it will be at least a week before the work has been completed. Fifteen persons are known to be missing, and Coroner Hanley said he thought the death list might reach seventy-five, being swelled by the probable loss of a number of foreigners, whose houses were swept away on the banks of the creek at Ninth Street.

Another terrific rainstorm struck Erie tonight, retarding the work of the searching parties for a while. No reports of additional damage were received, however.

Gas was turned into the mains this afternoon, but, because of numerous uncapped pipes in the flood district, it was necessary to turn it off again. The electric lighting system is still out of commission, and the city is in almost total darkness tonight.

Louis B. Jones, 45, a prominent lawyer, dropped dead tonight of heart disease, brought on, physicians said, by his strenuous fight in the waters of Mill Creek Tuesday night to rescue his wife and two children after their home had been demolished.

Figures compiled late today showed that the total damage in the city and county would amount to between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. Two millions, it was declared, would not replace the crops destroyed in Erie County.

Every effort is being made to prevent pestilence. In the ruins are many bodies of animals. Two slaughter houses and several livery stables were in the path of the flood, bodies of horses can be seen partially covered with debris, and in one place nearly 100 hogs are under a pile of ruins forty feet high.

Scores of persons have been vaccinated for typhoid and warnings of sanitation have been issued by the health authorities.

OPEN FIGHT ON PLAN FOR CITY HOME RULE

Three-Sided Attack Starts When the Constitutional Convention Gets Committee's Report.

LONG DEBATE IN PROSPECT

ALBANY, Aug. 5.—The fight on the home rule plan reported by the Cities Committee of the Constitutional Convention is on. When the proposal was presented to the convention today, it met attack from three quarters. First came a minority report signed by Senator James A. Foley of New York, Democrat, and Edward E. Franchot of Niagara, Republican. Then came broadsides from the Mayors' Conference and the Citizens' Union. A defense of the plan was made by ex-Mayor Seth Low, Chairman of the committee.

From today's developments it is predicted that the debate on the home rule proposal will occupy a week or more. It is known that half a dozen members of the Cities Committee who signed the favorable report did so with reservations and with the purpose of shifting the fight from the committee room to the floor of the convention. The heaviest attack is likely to come from the large and influential element, made up largely of up-State Republicans, which is hostile to a home rule grant of any discription by constitutional authority. These men will urge that the question or determining what measure of home rule shall be given the municipalities should be left to the Legislature. The only change that they favor would abolish the present prohibition against the Legislature delegating any of its power to the law making bodies of cities.

The enemies of home rule are jubilant because developments indicate that the Low plan is no more welcome to the outspoken advocates of broader liberties for cities than it is to those who contend that cities should be kept under the control of the Legislature.

The right of the Legislature to nullify local action in purely local affairs which is provided in the new home rule plan is severely criticised in the minority report presented by Senator Foley and Mr. Franchot.

"We submit that the cities of the State have justified by experience their ability to administer their local affairs free from legislative check or authority," they assert. "We do not sympathize with a plan putting their citizens in a class with the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. As citizens of the city they have the same capacity for self-government as they possess as citizens of the State."

Messrs. Foley and Franchot assert that in their opinion any home rule proposal should embody the following principles:

A broad grant to cities of power, exclusive in substance as well as in form, to regulate their local affairs, coupled with a prohibition against special legislation by the State with respect thereto.

The preservation of State sovereignty over cities through legislative control, exercised by general laws.

The expression of the grant of power in simple, direct and specific language, so as to avoid confusions and endless litigation in defining State and city powers and the manner in which these should be exercised.

The right of each city at its option to continue as a Legislative charter city or become a home rule city.

The minority report declares that the plan proposed by the Cities Committee which gives the Legislature the right to enact special legislation affecting one or more cities in the same class does not eradicate any of the evils it was designed to cure. The Legislature under this plan would continue to be burdened with local matters in which the State has no concern. Local officers would still be able to avoid responsibility by putting the responsibility on the Legislature. Delay, confusion and inefficiency in municipal government would be continued. City problems would still be settled far from home by legislators not responsible directly and not familiar with local needs and problems.

Further fault is found with the plan on the ground that its phraseology is such as to call for judicial construction and because the powers granted to cities, those reserved to the State, and those neither clearly granted nor reserved, have not been sharply defined. Powers in this last category, the minority assert, should be clearly assigned either to the cities or to the State.

Assails Forced Home Rule.

"Home Rule should not be forced upon a city," the report goes on to say. "There may be a sentiment in some cities against a change in the present system of city government. On the other hand, other cities have expressed desire for a change. Both can be satisfied. To subject the desire of either class to that of the other would be hostile to the very principle for which we contend. The grant therefore should be optional.

Under the Cities Committee plan local legislation enacted by the Board of Aldermen in New York City could be killed by a Mayor's veto, for there is no method defined for overriding it. The minority members of the committee denounce this provision as impracticable. They also denounce the length of time—three years—that would be required for a general revision of the charter before it could become effective. Under the committee's plan cities would have exclusive control over matters relating to the property, business, and local affairs of cities. Matters relating to the government of cities would be subject to legislative annulment.

"If you subtract from the acts relating to its property, business and local affairs, the acts relating to the government of a city," the minority report says, "the result is zero. This seems to us the exact measure of exclusive control granted to cities by the proposed amendment."

W. E. Yauker, Secretary of the Citizens' Union, said:

"It is evident from a hasty examination of the amendment that it does not furnish an adequate measure of home rule. It provides a procedure both difficult and obstructive. It retains the evil control by the Legislature, with the resulting destructive political effects which home rule advocates sought to eliminate. Responsibility for local legislative enactments is split up between the Board of Aldermen, the Board of Estimate, the Mayor, and the Legislature."

AMERICAN MARINES TAKE HAITIAN FORT

GEN. BLOT LEAVES COUNTRY

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Aug. 5.—American forces from the battleship Connecticut have occupied, without striking a blow, the national fort which dominates the town.

The marines, who landed last night, had by this morning completed the occupation of the city. They are in possession of the barracks at Dessalines.

A proclamation has been posted in all quarters, signed by the President of the Revolutionary Committee, protesting against the misuse of force against a friendly people.

The people of Port au Prince are generally of the opinion that this American occupation will be of long duration. The marines are observing a very correct attitude, which is creating a good impression.

There is no change in the local political situation.

Hope for Peace Brighter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Hopes for a peaceful settlement of the disturbances in Haiti were brightened today by receipt of a message from Rear Admiral Caperton, commanding the naval forces at Port au Prince and Cape Haitien, announcing that the troops of General Bobo, leader of the successful revolution, would disarm on their arrival at the capital. General Bobo's men are reported en route from Cape Haitien to Port au Prince and should arrive there in six days.

General Blot left Cape Haitien for Santo Domingo on the morning of the 4th inst. The troops of General Bobo have met with no further resistance in the north of Haiti and are said to be marching to Port au Prince, where they will probably arrive in about six days. General Bobo's representatives have given assurances that those will disarm upon arrival at Port au Prince.

Although Cape Haitien is quiet, outbreaks are reported at Petitgoabe, Miragcave and Jacmel. The Haitian Committee at Port au Prince has telegraphed the authorities at this place, directing them to maintain order, and Admiral Caperton is of the opinion that the order of the committee will be effective.

News dispatches from Port au Prince today said the National Assembly was awaiting word from General Bobo as to whether he desired the office. Assurances that his army will disarm on its arrival at the capital are thought to indicate that there will be no further fighting, and that the revolutionists will establish a Government.

American Attitude Is Firm.

Action taken yesterday by the gunboat Eagle in firing shots near Cape Haitien to warn revolutionary troops away leaves no doubt of the firm intention of the United States Government to keep its hold on Haiti until the island is pacified. Official advices concerning the warning shots fired by the Eagle were received today from Rear Admiral Caperton, who said that General Bobo had endeavored to enter Cape Haitien with some troops. He was warned to retire, and the warning was emphasized by several shots from the Eagle. Then the Boboites retreated. The Commander of the gunboat Nashville sent a warning to Bobo that his forces would be fired upon if they returned to Cape Haitien with unfriendly intentions.

General Bobo based his revolutionary movement on the contention that if the control of Haiti's revenues were given over to the United States, Haiti would be placed in a shameful position, and that new arrangement would be bad generally for the republic and its people. At the time his revolution was begun, the Government, headed by President Guillaume, was negotiating with the United States for a treaty granting the Washington Government the right to collect Haiti's customs revenues and apply part of them to the liquidation of the republic's long overdue foreign debt.

For the time being negotiations to perfect a treaty are at a standstill, but it is expected that as soon as order has been restored they will be renewed. This Government is understood to desire not only control of revenue collections, but also the right to intervene whenever necessary to restore order in Haiti.

RUSSIANS TO QUIT REST OF IVANGOROD

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5, (via London, Aug. 6.)—The forts at Ivangorod, constructed almost entirely of brick, do not answer the requirements of modern warfare, according to an official statement issued by the Russian General Staff in reply to the Austrian claim that a great victory was achieved in Ivangorod's capture.

"Last October," the Russian statement says, "enemy attacks were not repulsed on the line of the fortified circle, but on positions constructed to meet the advance. Because of the impossibility of Ivangorod sustaining a siege all its provisions were methodically removed today.

"On some of our lines west of Ivangorod our rear guards detained the enemy for some days without heavy fighting, but on Wednesday, conformable to our general plan of action, these rearguards blew up the concrete bases supporting the brick casements of the forts, destroyed the bridges and withdrew to the right bank of the Vistula."

GERMAN FORCES ENTER WARSAW, BAVARIAN PRINCE LEADING THE ARMY; RUSSIANS ARE ESCAPING TO NEW LINE

Russians Left Warsaw Without Being Attacked and Blew Up Vistula Bridges, Says Petrograd

In view of conditions and the general situation, our troops west of Warsaw have received orders to fall back on the right bank of the Vistula.

According to reports received, this order was carried out, and the troops which were covering Warsaw retired at 5 o'clock this morning, without being attacked, toward the new front assigned to them.

A previous official communication said:

In the direction of Riga the enemy, after actions on the River Missa, fell back in great haste toward the River Dyu, abandoning in the trenches a large quantity of cartridges and munitions.

On the Narew front the Germans delivered attacks in the direction of Lomza and on the front of Ostrolenka and Rozan. They took the offensive in considerable force also on the roads toward Ostrov.

An extremely desperate battle was in progress yesterday on the sector of the Oje River. Our troops vigorously counter-attacked the enemy, who crossed the stream at several points.

West of Warsaw and south of the Blonie road we successfully repulsed German attacks yesterday. The enemy, who suffered enormous losses, advanced up to our barbed wire defenses, but was stopped by our fire.

Between the Vistula and the Bug, late Tuesday evening, our troops drove back the Germans, inflicting enormous losses on them. At many points these local successes, ending with a short pursuit, enabled our troops to occupy the same night without hindrance a new and more advantageous front on the left bank of the Bug, as well as in the direction of Vladimir-Wolynsk and Kovel.

PROCLAIM FRENCH WILL TO CONQUER

NO PAUSE TILL VICTORY

President Says Soldiers' Devotion Reflects People's Spirit —A Dissentient Silenced.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The first meeting of the Chamber of Deputies after the anniversary of the beginning of the war and following the establishment of the union of all political parties in France to endure so long as the war lasts, was held today, and the session was marked by an extraordinary demonstration of patriotism, which was a strong indication of the unanimity of all Frenchmen of every faith and shade of political belief. Furthermore, today's meeting was the first since the formation of the present coalition Cabinet in France.

Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber, opened the session with an eloquent speech, which was apparently intended to be a following of the example of the address of M. Rodzianko, President of the Russian Duma, at the recent opening of that legislative body, and a reply to the anniversary manifesto of the German Emperor. To this, Premier Viviani made response in the name of the Government.

A Year Full of Glory!

M. Deschanel said a year had passed since the enemy of France, even before declaring war, had violated French territory. "This year has been so full of a glory so pure," he said, "that it will forever illumine the human race. It has been a year in which France, the France of Joan of Arc and Valmy, has risen, if possible, to even greater heights."

Continuing, the President of the Chamber recounted briefly "the breaking of the German military power" and "the forcing back of the enemy of France."

"Be the war of short or long duration, France accepts it," M. Deschanel said. "The country is summoning its genius and changing its methods. Each French soldier, before the enemy, repeats the words of Joan of Arc: 'You can enchain me, but you cannot enchain the fortunes of France.' These touches of human grandeur come from the depth of the muddy trenches."

M. Deschanel then reviewed in a few words the work of Parliament, praising especially the activities of the several committees. "Let us thrust to one side," he said, "both the sowers of panic and the sowers of illusions. Let us be sowers of reasoned confidence, for the reason that the issue of this conflict will not depend solely on material forces. In the final analysis it is to be a matter of will power and constancy."

Fighting for Honor and Life.

In an eloquent passage the President of the chamber then repeated the determination of France to continue the struggle to complete victory. "It is not only a matter of life," he said; "it is a matter of that honor which France always has preferred to life."

A message from President Poincaré was read in the Chamber by Premier Viviani and in the Senate by Aristide Briand, Minister of Justice. It was addressed to the French Parliament and reviewed the first year of the war.

Only one incident threatened the war anniversary celebration in the Chamber of Deputies. Immediately M. Deschanel called the Deputies to order Leon Accambray, member from the Aisne, who frequently of late has viciously attacked the Government in the evident attempt to discredit Alexandre Millerand, the Minister of War, demanded the floor. Murmurs from all sides of the House grew in volume as M. Accambray mounted the tribune. When he began to speak the protestations from his colleagues, exhibiting clearly their impatience and their temper, seemed to frighten the Deputy from the Aisne, who, after hesitating for a moment, asked leave to print his remarks. He then left the tribune at once. Later, during M. Deschanel's address, M. Accambray sought to interrupt the President, but the long and unanimous applause of M. Deschanel's praise of the work of the Chamber drowned out his voice.

The speech of M. Deschanel and the

NEWSPAPERS NOT PREPARED

Count Reventlow Says Now Is the Time for British Fleet to Come Out and Fight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Within an hour after the Wolff Bureau brought the laconic message, "Warsaw has been occupied," all Berlin was beflagged, but as yet there is no excitement, nor have any demonstrations of enthusiasm taken place.

The fall of Warsaw was discounted weeks ago as a foregone conclusion, and the Germans received the news with the stolidity born of confidence, merely celebrating by looking good-natured.

The papers significantly report that Prince Leopold of Bavaria telegraphed King Ludwig of Bavaria of the occupation of Warsaw, whereupon the King conferred upon him the highest Bavarian order, the Grand Cross of Max Joseph.

That the Bavarian prince received the honor of leading an army, said to be composed of Bavarians and Austrians into Warsaw, gains particular significance from the fact that the prince is the brother of the King of Bavaria and the son-in-law of the Emperor of Austria. It is, however, more than a spectacular tribute to the Bavarians and the Austrians in the second line.

Warsaw fell sooner than most Germans expected. Even the editors were caught napping, for the afternoon papers contained no editorials, with the exception of the Tageszeitung. This said:

"The fall of Warsaw does not surprise us. At most it surprises only the French and Italian illusionists, who believed up to the last moment that a miracle would happen. Of course, we know that the fall of Warsaw will be represented as quite negligible, the same as the fall of Antwerp. We will not begrudge this pleasure to our enemies. Meanwhile, with joyful anticipation and proud confidence, we will accompany the victorious march of our glory-crowned army under the incomparable leader von Hindenburg, which is trampling upon and driving everything before it. Our slogan remains, 'Forward!'"

Count von Reventlow writes:

"How the occupation of Warsaw and what will follow may affect public opinion among the Allies and neutrals must be awaited. But we would like to recommend to Great Britain a splendid means for elevating the morale of the Allies, despite all their failures in the East, and to strengthen their confidence in self-sacrificing Albion like a granite structure. Now is the time when Great Britain with her battle fleet intact should fight a Trafalgar in the North Sea. That would give a different aspect to the whole situation and at the same time remove all grounds for the Allies believing or hinting that Great Britain does not want to risk her fleet but desires to preserve it intact until

PERIL IN THEIR RETREAT

Four Teuton Armies Are in Pursuit to Cut Them Off

AND FLANK NEW POSITIONS

Garrison Evacuates Polish Capital Without Being Attacked, According to Petrograd.

DESTROYS VISTULA BRIDGES

PLACE HAD BEEN DENUDED

London Admits Size of German Victory and Wonders What Next Stroke Will Be.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.—The Germans are in possession of Warsaw, capital of Poland and the third largest city in the Russian Empire. Bavarian troops entered the city this morning, having taken successively the Blonie lines and the outer and inner fortresses of the town itself, the Russians only fighting rear guard actions to allow their main army to make good its escape.

According to the meagre official bulletin from Petrograd, the Russian forces withdrew from Warsaw without being attacked and blew up the Vistula bridges behind them.

While to the Bavarians, commanded by Prince Leopold, has fallen the honor of taking over Warsaw in the name of the German Emperor and his consort, who are expected to make a state entry within a few days, the real conquerors are the troops fighting under Field Marshal von Hindenburg, along the Narew River to the northeast; the Austro-Germans, who crossed the Vistula to the south of the city, and the armies of the Austrian Archduke Joseph Ferdinand and the German Field Marshal von Mackensen, which are advancing northward between the Vistula and Bug Rivers.

The Russians are fighting desperately and stubbornly to check the progress of these four armies and have had several successes, inflicting heavy losses on their pursuers, but they are being steadily pressed back, which made the longer occupation of the Warsaw Polish salient a hazardous undertaking.

Russian Army Not Out of Danger.

Even now, although the steadiness of the Russian troops and their fierce counter-attacks have gained much valuable time for them, it is problematical whether the whole Russian Army will succeed in reaching the new positions chosen for it, or whether, if it should get there, it will not find those positions turned by the Austrians, who have crossed the Bug southeast of Chelm, and the Germans under General von Scholz and von Gallwitz, who have crossed the Narew.

At the northeastern end of the line the Russian communications are further threatened by General von Bulow, who is advancing toward Dvinsk on the Vilna-Petrograd railway. Indeed, the Austro-Germans had set three traps to catch and destroy the Russian Army. None of them was sprung, but one was so near to closing that the Grand Duke Nicholas was forced to evacuate Warsaw and now is fighting with all his might to prevent the others from cutting off his retreat.

Thus far he seemingly has been successful, for although the Germans claim the capture of a large number of prisoners the aggregate is small when compared with the immense forces engaged. In addition the Russian guns apparently are well on their way to the rear.

From refugees who left Warsaw some days ago and have arrived at Moscow it has been learned that Warsaw, even at that early date, had been denuded of virtually everything that might be useful to the Teutons. Factories had been stripped of their machinery and all war stores moved into the interior of Russia, and the government of the city left to the Polish population.

the Russians are preparing to evacuate Riga, the port on the gulf of that name in the north.

The arrival of the Germans ten miles south of that city has already caused an exodus of a large part of the civilian population.

Victory Not Belittled in London.

While expressing the fullest confidence in the future, the British military critics make no attempt to belittle the achievements of the Teutons or the effect their success is likely to have in the Near East and the west.

Since early in May, when they started their great counter-offensive in western Galicia against the Russians, who were debouching through the Carpathians on to the plains of Hungary, the troops of the Germanic powers had cleared the Russians out of Galicia, with the exception of a narrow strip of territory in the southwest, have recaptured Przemysl and Lemberg, taken Lublin, Chelm, and Warsaw, and are in military occupation of virtually the whole of Poland.

What their next move will be is a matter of conjecture. Some military observers believe they will continue to attack the Russians in the hope of finally crushing them, a task which it is considered is rendered difficult by the fact that the Russians, in their retreat, lay the country waste, making it necessary for the invaders to bring up every ounce of food required for their army.

Others of the observers think Serbia will be attacked, so as to impress the Balkan States which remain neutral, while still others look for a big offensive against the Franco-British-Belgian line in the west.

All of the observers are of the opinion that wherever the new operation is begun it will be on a big scale.

BERLIN WITHOUT DETAILS.

Fierce Fighting Continues North and South of Captured Capital.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—Official announcement was made at the German Army Headquarters today that Warsaw was taken this morning by German troops.

Yesterday and last night Bavarian troops under the command of Prince Leopold broke through the forts of the outer and inner lines of the city's defenses, where the rear guards of the Russian troops made a tenacious resistance.

Continuing, the report from headquarters says:

The German armies under General von Scholz and General von Gallwitz advanced in the direction of the road between Lomza, Ostrov, and Vyszkov, and fought a number of violent engagements. The brave and desperate resistance of the Russians on both sides of the road between Ostrov and Rozan was without success. Twenty-two Russian officers and 4,840 soldiers were taken prisoners. The Germans also captured seventeen machine guns.

German cavalry yesterday and this day before defeated in Courland detachments of Russian cavalry at points near Genaize, Birshi, and Oniakszhty. A total of 2,225 Russian prisoners were taken.

The situation near and to the north of Ivangorod remains unchanged.

The campaign is being continued between the upper Vistula River and the River Bug. German cavalrymen have entered Vladimir-Volynsk, on the Bug River.

Details of the fall of Warsaw have not yet reached Berlin. The newspaper correspondents before Warsaw have as yet had no opportunity to send dispatches, and the General Staff has no details beyond the brief phrase in the official report.

So sure had the authorities been of the fall of the fortress that preparations for the appointment of a civil Governor and the installation of a civil administration centred at Warsaw are almost complete, and will be announced in a day or two. The Governor will, it is understood, be a prominent German magnate.

Some difficulties over questions of precedence may arise, as the civil Governor necessarily must act under the military commander, but cannot outrank him. These questions, however, may perhaps be settled by the selection of a member of the royal house for the latter post.

VIENNA, Aug. 5.—The following official communication was made public this evening:

The long series of successes of the Germanic allies since the May battle on the Dunajec in Galicia and in Southern and Northern Poland and the Baltic provinces have now been crowned by the occupation of Warsaw. Today the German troops of the army of Prince Leopold of Bavaria marched into the capital of Russian Poland.

Between the Vistula and the Bug both of the Allies are advancing to the north in pursuit of the Russians. The Austro-Hungarian cavalry has reached Usciług (on the right bank of the Bug, to the west of Vladimir-Wolynsk) and the German cavalry Vladimir-Wolynsk. Otherwise the situation is unchanged.

ADMIT POLITICAL EFFECT.

But British Papers See No Strategic Gain in Capture of Warsaw.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.—All the London morning papers today deal editorially at great length with the fall of Warsaw. All admit the tremendous political effect of the occupation of the Polish capital by the Teutons, but a majority of them minimize its strategic results as regards Russia.

"The news will have a far-reaching effect on the world at large," says The Daily Telegraph, "and it would be foolish to underrate its significance. Politically, we can well imagine that the latest news of the retreat of the Russians and the irresistible advance of the enemy may be of extreme utility to the nation anxious to impress the world with its martial qualities, and especially to persuade neutral powers like the Balkans that the God of Battles has given victory into its hands.

"The military and strategic consequence, however, is very different from the political. When Emperor William adds up the net gains and losses he will discover that at much cost of blood and treasure he has only enabled the Russians to fall back to lines more easily defended and to that illimitable space of territory which always has baffled conquerors from the west."

The Daily Graphic says:

"The loss of Warsaw and the year's fighting are an undoubted blow to Russia and her allies. From the military point of view it proves that the Germans are, in comparison to the Russians, stronger than they ever have been during the past twelve months. It would be foolish for us to minimize the importance of the victory.

"It is reasonable to expect that the Russians were able to retreat in good order and save the bulk of their army. Warsaw is not a second Sedan. Nevertheless the military power of Russia must remain impaired for some time to come. That means a greater strain on the western powers. France for a long time has been putting forth practically her full strength, so that whatever more has to be done must be done by us."

The Times says:

"The capture of Warsaw at the end of a year's desperate struggle marks a distinct landmark in the war. Politically Warsaw may present possibilities to the Germans which have still to be revealed. The loss of the city implies that the ability of Russia to resume an offensive which would gravely menace the German security has been indefinitely postponed.

"However, there are reassuring features. We accept the Russian assurances that the Germans will not succeed in destroying the Russian Army. Moreover, the impression created by the fall of Warsaw already has been eclipsed by the admiration for Russia's heroic resistance.

"The further course of German strategy presents some difficulty, for the unbroken Russian legions are still massed behind the Vistula, Russia has made the German advance far more costly than the German leaders believe possible, and the German time-table again has been upset by a series of expensive delays. The triumph of today may prove the serious entanglement of tomorrow and Germany will not be able to undertake any great serious effort elsewhere for some time to come."

KAISER CALLS COUNCIL ON PLAN FOR POLAND

Semi-Autonomous State Under Germano-Austro-Polish Rule Talked of.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at The Hague cables:

"Dispatches received from Germany state that the Kaiser will return to Berlin on Sunday to preside over an important conference, which is to be attended by the leading members of the Cabinet, the heads of all the German States, and two Austrian Archdukes.

"The Nieuwe Courant learns that the object of the conference is to discuss a proposal to issue a proclamation declaring Poland a semi-autonomous State and placing it, together with Galicia, under the joint rule of Germans, Austrians, and Poles.

"The proposal is to be presented to the Reichstag, which meets Aug. 17.55

"In diplomatic circles it is a matter of conjecture that the capture of Warsaw, capital and heart of Poland, will followed by a proclamation of a new kingdom of Poland under Hohenzollern or Hapsburg suzerainty, with Archduke Karl Stephan of Austria as King.

"Such a kingdom would probably comprise the present so-called Kingdom of Poland, Russian Poland, together with the Polish province of Posen, held by Prussia since the Treaty of Vienna in 1815, and a large portion of the Province of Galicia, which the same treaty gave to Austria.

"Archduke Karl Stephen, who is at present the Admiral commanding the Austrian Navy, is well known in Poland. He is a nephew of the aged Emperor Francis Joseph, and is now 55 years of age. Two of his daughters, Archduchesses Eleanora and Renata, are married respectively to Prince Alexander Czartoryski and Prince Radziwill, two of the most prominent members of Polish aristocracy. The Archduke himself has a commendable reputation for tolerance and broadmindedness. He has made his home in Galicia and is notorious for his pro-Polish sentiments.

"It is only to be expected, therefore, in view of the suitable sentiments and personal connections of the prospective candidate for the Kingship that the adroit plan of the Germans to create Karl Stephan, King of a regenerated Poland will be greeted with some enthusiasm among certain sections of the population of Austrian Poland, which has enjoyed on the whole fairly general treatment and a large measure of autonomous government at the hands of Austria.

"Important political developments naturally may be expected to arise out of the German occupation of Warsaw. There is no doubt that the enemy are fully aware of the dramatic value of a triumphal entry into the capital of the ancient kingdom, it suits their purpose temporarily to reconstitute. They will certainly make the most of the political card such a success puts in their hands."

SEES REGENERATION IN RUSSIAN DEFEAT

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Speaking to 10,000 Welshmen at Bangor this afternoon before he heard of the fall of Warsaw, David Lloyd George, the Minister of Munitions, referred to the situation in the East in these terms:

"I view it with anxiety, but not with dread. I can see a ray of hope in the dark horizon—the regeneration of the great people of Russia. Our enemies do not understand what they are doing in the East. Their mighty cannon are shattering the rusty bars that fettered the soul of Russia.

"Look at Warsaw! What is happening behind that? The Russian people are shaking themselves free of stifling debris, their mighty limbs preparing with new spirits and new hope for a new land.

"Austria and Prussia are doing today for Russia what their military ancestors did for France. They are hammering a sword that will destroy them.

"As for us, we must fight on or forever sink as a people into impotent obscurity."

AUSTRIAN RUSE WON THE VISTULA CROSSING

AUSTRIAN HEADQUARTERS, Friday, Aug. 6, (via London.)—It was by an unusual ruse that the Germans and Austrians succeeded in crossing the Vistula to the northwest of Ivangorod. They manoeuvred with the object of leading the Russians to believe that they intended to force a passage near Novo Alexandria, whereas they planned to cross at Comaszev, where the river is divided into a number of branches.

The Russians, puzzled by the complicated manoeuvres of the Austro-Germans, sent aviators to make observations. They reported seeing a large number of wagons loaded with straw moving toward the front. The wagons, however, contained pontoons and other material, topped with straw. The pioneers thus reached the river and began the construction of bridges before their real purpose was discovered. Then the Russians brought forward artillery and opened a terrific fire, but the bridge building was proceeding in four places, and the pioneers proceeded within thirty-six hours in connecting the islands by bridges and reaching the east band.

The Germans immediately crossed in force and captured Domaszev and the adjacent forests.

PRESS RUSSIANS IN SWAMPS.

Austrians Report Foe in Difficulties on the Wieprz.

AUSTRIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 4, (via London, Aug. 5.)—The Russians apparently met with difficulties in conducting their retreat in the region beyond the Wieprz River, where only a few roads intersect the extensive swamp district. The Germans and Austrians are continuing to press them hotly, not giving the Russians time to retreat in an orderly manner.

The resistance of these forces have become visibly weaker and their movements more confused. Many prisoners continue to be taken daily, and it is expected that many more will be captured before the Russians emerge from the swamps, where the roads are quite inadequate for moving heavy baggage and ammunition trains in addition to the troops.

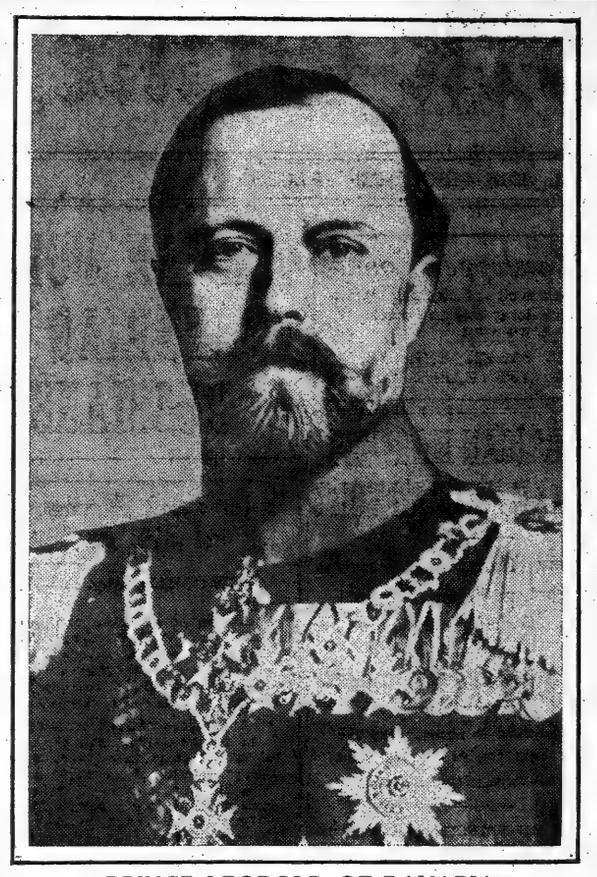
On the front to the west of Ivangorod the Austrians had relatively slight losses in taking the outer forts, although the desperate fighting lasted ten hours.



PRINCE LEOPOLD OF BAVARIA

Who Led the Troops of That Kingdom Into Warsaw Yesterday.

Little had been heard of the aged Prince Leopold of Bavaria in the present war until the news came, a few days ago, that he and his Bavarians were leading in the direct assaults against the outer circle of the Warsaw fort. His nephew, Prince Rupprecht, son and heir of King Ludwig III., has been much more conspicuous, first as the commander of the Sixth German Army, which in August was to invade France from Lorraine through the gap at Epinal, then in command of the "covering" army north of the German salient at St. Mihiel as a protection for Metz, and finally, he commanded the front at Neuve Chapelle in March, when he lost many men under the British concentrated artillery fire. He has also been heard of before the British salient at Ypres.

As Bavaria has suffered so much in the war, has accomplished so little, and is one of the most independent and important states in the German Empire, the German Kaiser may have invited Prince Leopold to represent him in the conquered city and recently called him from Munich for that purpose.

Prince Leopold is 69 years old and married at Vienna in the Spring of 1873 the Archduchess Gisele of Austria. His sister, Princess Theresa, is the famous savante of the University of Munich. He has two sons and two daughters. One of the latter, Princess Augustine, is married to Joseph, Prince Imperial and Archduke of Austria. One son, Prince Conrad, was wounded last Winter while in command of a Uhlan division in Galicia.

At least two Bavarian regiments are named after the aged Prince, who received his military education in the Austro-Hungarian army and in that army fought against Prussia in the brief Austro-Prussian-Italian war of 1866, although he was not like his brother, King Ludwig III., wounded by a Prussian bullet.

BERLIN BEDECKED, BUT KEEPS CALM

peace is made, regardless of the Allies' perilous position.

"Now is the psychological moment for the British fleet to 'lure' the German fleet to fight. Our advice is quite unselfish and purely in the interest of British world prestige."

The frequently inspired Berlin correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung telegraphs with the possession of Warsaw there arise not only military, but quite unusual political problems and technical problems of the Government, for this is the first large city with a purely or preponderatingly Polish population which is divided into various political groups, namely the Russophiles, who are champions of an independent Poland, and the neutrals, all of whom await coming events with a certain anxiety. To occupy such a city, which has the Polish tradition to govern it, and, as it seems probable, to govern from there the entire Russian Poland, is a serious and difficult task for whose solution undoubtedly efforts are being made to find the fittest men."

CONSTANTINOPLE REJOICES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 5, (via London, Friday, Aug. 6.)—The announcement of the capture of Warsaw this morning caused a profound impression here. The news spread over the city like wildfire, and within a few minutes every building was beflagged.

WARSAW RESIDENTS FLED WITHOUT PANIC

MAJORITY WISHED TO STAY

MOSCOW, Aug. 5.—Hundreds of refugees from Warsaw are arriving here daily. Most of them are without money or means of sustenance, and are seeking aid at the American Consulate, where an enlarged staff is attempting to supply temporary assistance pending the organization of a Russian relief commission.

The refugees state that, although the population of the Polish capital was convinced that the Germans ultimately would occupy the city, a majority of the citizens elected to remain, only approximately 15 per cent. to date having departed. This accounts for the comparative order and the absence of panic which accompanied the exodus.

When German occupation seemed imminent the Government issued an order that third-class tickets to any point in the interior of Russia should be given free to all citizens desiring to depart. The only condtion attached by the authorities was that residents so leaving would not be allowed to return without a special permit.

Those choosing the alternative of departure foresaw that Warsaw would be visited with conditions similar to those imposed on Lodz, and that the town would be cut off from the interior of Russia, whence all provisions were obtainable, and that Warsaw would suffer from famine.

The refugees compare the orderly and systematic abandonment of the city with the panic caused by the first German approach, last October, when an attempt of the city officials, institutions and private citizens to all bolt at once resulted in indescribable confusion.

The retirement this time was so carefully planned and so systematically executed that it went off like clockwork, and an onlooker received the impression that a no more extraordinary phenomenon was occurring than the ordinary Summer exodus. Sufficient extra trains had been provided so that traveling conditions on the whole differed little from normal.

An unusual feature of the present abandonment of the city was the fact that provision tickets were made unnecessary.

The bulk of the refugees traveled on foot or with wagons along the highways. Most of the refugees were unable to proceed southward and to Kiev, and finding the railway to Vilna monopolized for military purposes they took the line to the east, temporarily crowding Moscow, Vladova, and Brest-Litovsk. Many of these lost their homes in the outlying portions of Warsaw, the destruction of which became a military necessity.

All the teritory immediately to the west of Warsaw, containing large factories, Polish estates and peasant dwellings, now presents blackened and uninhabitable areas.

Care had been taken that no suburban factories should fall into the hands of the Germans, and be converted to their use. Chief among those destroyed was the $1,000,000 sugar factory belonging to a Polish lawyer Eugene Karaluk, with more than 2,000 tons of sugar.

WARSAW, Aug. 2, (By Messenger to Petrograd, Aug. 5.)—In consequence of the cessation in the operation of postal facilities, Warsaw for ten days has been without mail connection with the outside world. With the exodus of the postal authorities, even the post boxes were removed.

The Vice Governor General of Warsaw took prompt measures to organize a voluntary post office force and to resume the operations at Praga, a suburb across the Vistula. Since Saturday this staff, headed by Miss Vanda Stokoroska, President of the Warsaw Ladies' Yachting Association, has been working under the direction of the Central Citizens' Committee. Eighty young women, lately employed in the Red Cross Hospital Service, volunteered their services as sorters and distributers.

A volunteer corps of 400 young Polish men assumed the duties of postal clerks and the sorting and delivering of the hundreds of thousands of letters and parcels, which had piled up during the last two weeks since the departure of the State postal authorities, now is under way.

The removal of the State Bank and private banks with all their funds left the city without means of carrying on trade. An appeal had been made to the Minister of Trade and Commerce to permit the re-establishment of a money order station, and efforts were made to secure the return and reopening of a department of the State Bank for limited operations.

The Chief of Police and his staff left the city ten days ago, together with all the courts and justices of the peace. The management of the Russian State theatres also departed.

Machinery Shops Stripped.

All the railway equipment, of both gauges, was removed from the west bank of the Vistula, as were all the machinery shops.

The Russian military hospitals were removed with their staffs and equipment. The Polish municipal and private hospitals are carrying the burden of caring for the wounded from the nearby battle line. The staffs are working under the highest pressure day and night.

The chief civil authorities now are the Citizens' Central Committee, which has assumed jurisdiction over the entire district, and the Central Committee of Warsaw, with immediate control in the city. The chief of the latter committee is Prince Lubomirski.

All provisions are up to 150 per cent. Sugar, tea, coffee, butter, and milk practically are out of the market. Today white bread is difficult to procure.

A meeting of Russian Orthodox priests was held at the citadel and it was determined that all the priests should stick to their posts until actually forced to leave to avoid capture.

Yesterday an Austrian scouting party was reported by telephone to have reached the suburb of Mokotof. It developed that during the battle along the Blonie line a detachment of Austrians had lost their way and had wandered toward Warsaw. Realizing their position, the Austrians wanted to surrender. Not finding any Russians along the route, they arrived at Martzilinga, a town seven miles west of Warsaw, where they entered a roadhouse and whence the nearest post was notified. While waiting the Austrians ordered dinner and were later convoyed to Warsaw by Russian troopers.

There appeared before the Central Committe today a peasant named Stanislaw Milefsky, who escaped from the German lines ten days ago at the village of Krilatka, in the Province of Suwalki.

Milefsky related that the Germans had taken 5,000 Russians from a single community and had forced them to dig trenches. The Russians, he said, were allowed daily only one meal of soup and horsemeat, and were sleeping on the bare ground. Numbers, he declared, were dying daily of exhaustion. He said the country had been swept clean of provisions and that not a pound of bread had been left for the inhabitants.

German aeroplanes nearly every day drop bombs on Warsaw. Thirty persons, mostly women and children, were killed or wounded last week. It is estimated that 20,000 windows have been shattered by the missiles.

University Transferred to Moscow.

WARSAW, July 22, (By Mail to Petrograd and London, Aug. 4.)—Official edicts direct the removal of the University of Warsaw to Moscow and the discontinuance of the administration of justice before the high courts after July 24. Another states that all horses, automobiles, and other means of transportation not removed to the right bank of the Vistula before July 18 will be subject to the requisition of the Government thereafter.

Official plans have been published for the organization of the male civilian population between the ages of 15 and 50 years for military work, such as transportation, the building of roads, and the digging of trenches.

These plans provide that each 1,000 shall be under the direction of a "Head Man," with a centurion for each 100. The "Head Men" and centurions will receive $1.32 a day, while each worker will receive 50 cents a day and his board.

The trade organizations of civilians will be turned over to the military authorities as complete units.

BIG GUNS SMASH IVANGOROD.

More Than Twenty Heavy Batteries Shell the Fortress.

GENEVA, Aug. 5, (via London.)—Telegraphing from Innsbruck, the Tribune's correspondent says of the fighting in Poland.

"The Austro-Germans, with more than twenty heavy batteries, are bombarding Ivangorod from all sides, causing great destruction. The Russians are resisting heroically.

"On Aug. 3 the Russians attacked Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces on the Radomka River. The fighting was exceptionally heavy, as was shown by the fact that within a few hours the battlefield was covered with 20,000 bodies of men from both sides.

"The bombardment of Lomza has been begun by the Germans. Large German forces continue to cross the Narew on pontoon bridges north of Warsaw. In this region the Russians have repulsed fresh German attacks."

RUSSIA ASKS NO HELP.

No Statement Made Regarding an Allied Offensive in West.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.—The Times correspondent at Petrograd sends the following:

"The War Office authorizes me to state that no official note of any kind has been issued by the Russian Government regarding desirability of an allied offensive in the west."

WARSAW CAMPAIGN GREATEST IN HISTORY

Upward of 6,000,000 Men Engaged in the Stupendous Struggle for Polish Capital.

SEVEN ARMIES ATTACKED IT

The occupation of Warsaw by the German Army ends the greatest campaign of the war—of all wars, of all history. It has been fought along a front of 1,000 miles, extending from the Baltic to the frontier of Rumania. According to the most authoritative figures, there have been between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 men engaged in almost daily conflict. Since the last week in May the attacks upon the sides of the inclosing lines—600 miles—of Warsaw have been the most furious in modern warfare, and only equaled by the vain counter attacks which have been more or less successfully launched by the Russians.

Up to July 29 hope was entertained in military quarters in London and Paris that the Russians had some tremendous coup in reserve, that they would stand a siege in their principal fortresses along the Warsaw salient, and then, with a free army still in the field, would attempt to turn the Teutonic flanks, either in the north between Libau and Riga or in the south on the Bukowinian-Rumanian frontier, or suddenly issue from the lines northeast and southeast of Warsaw and attempt to envelop the armies in the west.

But on July 29 came advices from Petrograd that in order to save the Russian armies a retreat—the greatest in history, even greater than the retreat of the Russians through Galicia from April 28 to May 25—must be made and the fortresses of the Warsaw salient abandoned. It was the same old story of the Galician retreat—lack of ammunition. The armies would retire to prepared and selected ground forming a similar angle, 130 miles east of the Warsaw salient, and there await on the defensive the munitions necessary for a new and formidable offensive.

German Plan to Reach Railways.

Notwithstanding the feints in the north, in the direction of Riga, the aim of the German General Staff has been obvious since the beginning of June. It was to reach the railways on which the Russian armies of the salient depended for their supplies and by which they might make their retreat.

To do this, seven huge armies have been employed. The German northern army operating against the double-track line which runs from Warsaw to Petrograd, 1,000 miles in the northeast, via Bielostok and Grodno; the army operating in the Suwalki district, threatening the same line further west; the army fighting as a support of the latter on the Narew; the army directly aimed at Warsaw, north of the Vistula; the army directly aimed at Warsaw, south of the Vistula; ten or twelve Austrian army corps, attempting to reach the single and double-track railway from Ivangorod to Brest-Litowsk and Moscow, and the line from Warsaw to Kiev via Lublin and Chelm, which is for the most part a single track, and, finally, the army of Von Linsingen, made up of Austria's "new" army of 700,000 or 800,000 men, operating on the Lipa, east of Lemberg.

Up to July 30, in spite of the terrible attacks made upon the Warsaw-Bialystock section in the north and the Lublin-Chelm section in the south, the Russians managed to keep the outer lines free, while between them the double track line from Warsaw via Siedlice to Central Russia remained open until the last.

North of the Vistula the combined operations have been under the supreme command of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, while the Austro-German—principally Austrian—armies of the south or right have been under the supreme direction of Field Marshal von Mackensen.

At the very beginning of the campaign the hardest fighting developed between the Middle Vistula and the Bug, where the Russians held their ground for nearly two months, suffering no small loss. Another battle front early developed was north of the Lower Vistula, from Wyszogrod to around Ossowetz. There was soon fighting almost daily for over 150 miles along this front. And until the middle of July, when Mackensen began his furious assaults to reach the southern railway, between Lublin and Chelm, these two remained the main battle lines of the Teutonic armies.

Later, on July 18 and 20, Ostrolenka was captured on the northern line. Bionic, seventeen miles southwest of Warsaw, and Grojec, twenty-six miles south of it, were occupied, and Radom, thirty miles west of Ivangorod, had been invested, while Mackensen, between Bychawka and Krasnotaw, on the Wiepiz River, was getting nearer and nearer the Lublin-Chelm Railway. (Pierced on Aug. 1.) Then after nine days of suspense came the official announcement of the Russian projected withdrawal from the Warsaw salient.

Russian Plan That Failed.

This upshot of the two months' campaign of the Teutonic armies has been the logical military sequel to the defeat of the plans, due, it is said, to lack of ammunition, which Russia had developed from January to the middle of April for penetrating and grasping the plains of Hungary in the form of a gigantic pair of shears, one knife of which was to cut southward from the Carpathians and the other northwestward from Bukowina and Transylvania. In the last week in April Russia was in possession of the crests of the Carpathians, and her left wing had already begun to move westward through Bukowina, when the vast German-Austrian masses, (including 700,000 or 800,000 Austrian reserves made up of exceptionally intelligent men between the ages of thirty-five and forty, who had for months been carefully trained in order to replace the Fourteenth and Third Army Corps on the Italian frontier,) which had been mobilized in Silesia, Southeast Prussia, and in Galicia west of Cracow began their drive eastward, the Russian lines retreating from their positions on the Carpathians in order to prevent envelopment.

When the retreating Russians left in a northeasterly direction the Polish-Galician frontier, forty miles east of Zamosc, in Poland, on May 25, the campaign proper for the possession of Warsaw began. The entire Russian front then represented a huge angle the sides of which, in irregular lines, extended from the Baltic just east of Libau to Plock, forty miles west and a little north of Warsaw, and thence in a southeaster-

JAPAN STRIPS FORTS TO GIVE RUSSIA GUNS

MUNITIONS BEING MADE, TOO

Turn for the Better in Russian Campaign Expected When These Supplies Are Received.

TOKIO, July 20. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Now that the danger of war with China is over, all Japan and Korea are engaged in making supplies for Russia and her allies.

The war brought big financial losses to Japan, but the gaps are being filled in part by the furnishing of guns, ammunition, and general necessities to the armies at the front—particularly the armies of Russia.

Officially, Japan has given increased practical expression to her friendship toward Russia by going to the limit of dismantling some of her fortifications on the northeastern coast of the empire. Big coast guns stripped from these fortifications have been shipped to Vladivostok and thence forwarded to Galicia to strengthen the big-gun artillery of the armies of the Czar.

Americans who visit Japan are especially astonished at the almost limitless number of tiny shops in the big cities of this nation—miles upon miles of streets filled with people occupied in making something, when they are not selling something. These shops are really the factories of the empire. It is here that cloth goods and innumerable articles needed to keep huge armies in supplies are turned out, handed over to commission merchants, assembled in great quantities, and distributed to Russia, France, and even England. The correspondent of The Associated Press is informed by a reliable authority that practically every household in Korea is hard at work making clothing for Russia. It is sent to Moscow and other points and manufactured into uniforms, blankets, coverings, and wrappings.

Korea also is making big quantities of boots and ammunition cases. Major Fapowski and another Russian officer have just arrived at Seoul to take over the fourth consignment of orders manufactured by a tanning company near Seoul and consisting of 40,000 pairs of boots and 30,000 ammunition cases.

The Japan Celluloid Company at Aboshi, near Kobe, has abandoned temporarily the celluloid business for a more profitable business of making explosives. This company recently received an order from the Russian Government for 140 tons of gun-cotton to be delivered before the end of the year. A test of the explosives having proved satisfactory, the first instalment, consisting of fifteen tons, was dispatched to Petrograd. The Aboshi factory is said to be turning out two to three tons of explosives daily.

Leather materials, belts, pouches and sacks are manufactured at Tokio. A series of temporary sheds have been erected on vacant land near the houses of the Diet and are busy night and day.

The production of rifles in Japan is limited in capacity compared to other countries, and Japan is anxious to fill out her own reserve stock. The available number of rifles for the reserve strength of the Japanese armies is estimated at 500,000 and it is understood that the general staff of the army is desirous of increasing the number to 1,400,000. It has learned a lesson from the unpreparedness of the Allies with respect to guns and ammunition and from the vast expenditure of munitions demonstrated to be necessary to the successful conduct of modern wars. Japan, therefore, means to get ready herself along the lines revealed by the international war.

SHELLS FIRE TRAIN; 500 AUSTRIANS BURN

MILES OF TRENCHES TAKEN

GENEVA, Aug. 5.—A dispatch to The Tribune from Laibach says:

"Shells from the Italian artillery set fire to two trains on the Borgo-Levico Railroad while they were on their way to Rovereto. The first train was filled with troops, of whom 500 were burned to death. The second was carrying ammunition, and eight cars of it exploded.

"At Polazzo eight attacks by the Italians were repulsed, but the ninth attack resulted in the capture of several miles of newly constructed trenches.

"The Italians have brought up more heavy guns against Gorizia, the systematic bombardment of which has begun. The Austrians are replying feebly."

ROME, Aug. 5.—The following official statement was issued this evening:

In the Valley of Cordevole we continued our offensive with the object of completing the occupation of Lana Pass, of which we conquered the most advanced trenches in the direction of Salesci, Pieve di Livinallonga and Agni in the fighting from the 17th to the 27th of July.

Under a concentrated fire of the enemy our infantry, effectively supported by artillery, succeeded in storming the very strong entrenchments, defending the upper part of Torone di Coldilana.

On the Carso Plateau the enemy, seeking to stop our progress on the centre and left wing, delivered yesterday afternoon an attack in the direction of the Capuccio wood. Our troops bore the shock successfully and then, taking the offensive, vigorously stormed a considerable length of the intrenchments, which our men call Trincerone, dominating the eastern border of the Capuccio wood and the approach to Sammartino del Carso.

On the Tyrolean front the only great battle is in the region of Monte Croce. An attack by several battalions of the Italian Ninety-second Infantry Regiment commenced yesterday morning on Nemesalpe, northeast of Monte Croce. It was bloodily repulsed.

The enemy retreated, partially in flight, to the woods south of the border brook. In order to release these Italian forces other troops attempted an afternoon surprise attack on the Kofel position north of Monte Croce, but it was repulsed after a short battle, with a loss of about 100 men killed. The commander of the battalion and several other officers fell into our hands. Our losses were not important.

In the region of Gorizia the Italians have maintained since yesterday afternoon a heavy artillery fire on our positions on the plateau of Doberdo. When hostile infantry from Sagrado and south of Sdraussina attempted an attack they were shot down by our artillery.

On the other fronts there is nothing of importance to report.

ATTACK SECOND CARSO LINE.

UDINE, Aug. 5.—General Cadorna has begun an attack on the second line of the Austrians which defend the plateau of the Carso forts, Gorizia, which will soon be directly bombarded by the Italian artillery, being thus placed in a perilous position.

Archduke Eugene has centred all his best troops on the crest of the Vallone, forming the Austrian second line. Austrian prisoners assert that he himself inspected the position, reviewed the troops, and encouraged them to fight, saying that on their power of resistance rested the defense of Trieste and the fate of the Austro-Italian campaign.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 5. (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The second battle of the Isonzo has now practically come to an end, as the Italians attacks, it is stated, have ceased, and only weak attempts have followed the terrible onslaughts of the last ten days.

It is stated that the Italians lost during the ten days of battle 100,000 men, which is more than improbable, as the number of prisoners taken, most of them wounded, is given as 476. However, the fierceness of the fighting suggests that the losses must have been great on both sides, but the alarming fact is that, while Italians can replace their losses, this is not the case with Austria.

It is rumored that the Austrian Army is being removed somewhat further back to a strongly fortified line of defense, where, it is argued, it will be able to hold out for some months, and then when it is found that the Italian offensive is breaking down, German and Austrian armies released from the Russian front will be thrown against the Italians.

For the present the best strategy seems to be to keep on the defensive and wait till developments on the other fronts allow a powerful offensive to be undertaken.

ANNEXATION GROUP ATTACKS CHANCELLOR

German National Liberal Party in Row Over Von Bethmann-Hollweg's Policy.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, (via London.)—A sharp conflict is in progress within the leading circles of the National Liberal Party owing to the action of a wing of the party in conducting a private and public campaign against Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor.

The campaign centres around the supposed attitude of the Chancellor on the question of annexation of territory and the final settlement of the war, his assailants assuming that he is not ready to go to the lengths in this direction which they and their backers consider proper and justified.

Ernst Basserman, the veteran party leader; Herr Hirsch, a member from the Essen district, and Dr. Gustav Stresemann, an official in various industrial and business organizations, who was defeated as a candidate at the general Reichstag elections, but who later obtained a seat at a bye-election in Hanover, are the active leaders in the anti-Bethmann-Hollweg campaign.

The attitude of the opposing, and apparently stronger, faction of the party is laid down in an inspired article in the Leipzig Tageblatt, one of the party organs.

This wing, according to the newspaper, holds that "the public utterances of the Chancellor afford no ground for the assumption that he is pursuing a weak policy, based on illusions, and is not serving the interests of the empire." It declares that the attacks upon the Chancellor merely serve to injure his prestige abroad and hamper him in exactly that vigorous policy which is demanded from him.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the party has been called. Or, it a resolution expressing complete confidence in the Chancellor probably will be passed.

FATAL BELGIAN FOOD RIOTS.

Germans Kill Ten at Charleroi—Mons Strikers Kill Soldiers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVRE, Aug. 5, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The rumor is current here that the miners at Mons having gone on strike, the Germans fired on the strikers, who fired in reply. Two soldiers were killed and seven workmen and several other persons were wounded.

At Charleroi the dearness of food led to the looting of the shops by the people. The troops fired upon the crowd and killed ten and wounded forty.

Excitement runs high in the region, and two battalions of the Landsturm have been sent to Charleroi and four to Mons.

LONDON DAILIES SMALLER.

Advertising and Paper Shortage Force Decrease in Size.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Decreased advertising revenue and a shortage in the supply of chemicals necessary for the manufacture of white paper have resulted in an agreement by the proprietors of London's newspapers to reduce the number of pages. The Post today contained ten pages, while The Times, Telegraph, and Standard contained twelve.

Some of these penny (two cent) dailies frequently have printed twenty or more pages since the war started.

HEADS CZAR'S ARMS BUREAU

Alexander Guchkof Believes He Should Have Dictatorial Powers.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5.—Alexander J. Guchkof, a former President of the Duma and recently head of the Russian Red Cross work in Poland, is said to have been selected as Chief of the Munitions Bureau, a post corresponding to that held by David Lloyd George in Great Britain.

In an interview, M. Guchkof strongly urged that dictatorial powers be given to such an official.

COLONIALS FIGHT THE TURKS NAKED

REVEL IN SURF BATHING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.—Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, in the course of a dispatch to The Daily Chronicle and other London papers dated "Eastern Mediterranean, July 16," and dealing with the rôle played by the Australians and New Zealanders in the Gallipoli Peninsula, says:

"A peculiarity of the Colonial soldier which distinguishes him in a marked degree from our own men is his dislike of clothes. I suppose that since the Dervishes made their last charge at Omdurman no such naked army has ever been seen in the field. The British Tommy likes to move and work and fight with the majority of his worldly goods hanging around him. No matter what the state of the temperature, the men in our front trenches sit with their packs on, sweating in the broiling sun, and will dig trenches without removing a garment; but to find the Australian now wearing anything except a pair of 'shorts' is extremely rare, whether he be in the trenches, in a rest camp, or on fatigue.

"One by one they have thrown aside their various articles of clothing. First coats went, then shirts, then undervlothes. Now a very large number have chucked aside their boots and puttees, and only a lingering feeling of decency still kept alive by memories of the mixed bathing season at Sydney preserves the shorts, which, starting a few months ago as full-length trousers, have now arrived half way up the thigh. In this primitive costume the Australians and New Zealanders live and work and fight. Their huge frames and gaunt limbs are now burnt by the sun to a dull brick-red.

"Some one remarked very truly the other day that this campaign at the Dardanelles has only been rendered tolerable by the excellent bathing. I do not suppose any other factor has counted so much in keeping the troops healthy and clean and in restoring their spirits after days and nights in the stuffy, dirty, smelly trenches. Especially do the Australians and New Zealanders love their periodical dips. To them the sea and a sun bath are as the breath of life. From earliest childhood they have been accustomed to live in the water. The bathing at Sydney, where as many as 50,000 men, women and children take the water at the same time, is world famous. Now, straight from the trenches, this endless procession of naked warriors, covered with sand and dirt, ceases from sun-rise to sunset. No sooner is the Colonial released from duty than he makes for the water—no matter the snipers and bursting shrapnel—for here in far-off Gallipoli for a short period each day they imagine themselves once more under the Southern sun and return reinvigorated and refreshed to the stern work of the hills above."

TURKISH PORTS SHELLED.

French Warships Destroy Supposed Supply Base for Submarines.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—One armored cruiser, two cruisers, torpedo boats, dredgers, and an aeroplane ship of the French fleet demonstrated Aug. 3 and 4 off Sighadjik and Scala Nova, on the coast of Asia Minor, says a statement issued by the Ministry of Marine. Aug. 3 Sighadjik was bombarded and the Custom House and part of the fortifications destroyed. On the day following the armored cruiser bombarded the fortifications of the Turkish quarter of Scala Nova and a fortified point to the west of that town, while the other vessels of the squadron shelled and destroyed the village of Spedia, supposed to be a supply depot for hostile submarines.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Included in the items given out today by the Overseas News Agency is the following:

"The Greek newspaper Cairi, published at Athens, declares that recently a British torpedo boat destroyer, hiding in a small bay of Chios Island in the Aegean Sea, attacked another British destroyer, having mistaken the latter vessel for a German submarine."

ITALY MAY ATTACK TURKEY AT ONCE

Said to be Holding an Army of 250,000 Men Ready for Hostilities.

ROME, Aug. 5, (via Paris.)—The tension between Italy and Turkey is declared here to be becoming daily more acute. Italy is said to have asked for categorical explanations concerning Turkey's alleged refusal to withdraw her troops from the Cyrenaica district in Tripoli, and Turkey is pursuing what is described as her usual policy of procrastination.

In official circles here the feeling is held that hostilities on the part of Italy may begin at any moment, as Italy's last note to Turkey was almost of the character of an ultimatum. Two hundred and fifty thousand men in the Provinces of Buri, Foggia, and Lecce are said to be prepared to sail from Brindisi on short notice.

CUT OFF GERMANS WITH A WALL OF FIRE

PARIS, Aug. 5.—An official eyewitness's account of a French success at Ban-de-Sapt, in the Vosges Mountains, was made public today by the French War Department.

"On July 16," the eyewitness says, "the Germans directed four heavy counter attacks with two battalions on the heights of Fontenelle, recently captured by us, which were completely checked.

"July 24 and 25 a French attack with equal forces took all the enemy's works to the west of Launois, including several houses in the village, killing or capturing the entire German garrison and occupying the position."

The eyewitness continues with a detailed description of the German attack on Fontenelle, which was prepared with an extended bombardment with guns of all calibres, saying:

"The gunfire of the Germans was directed against many points simultaneously, their principal attack being made on our strong positions across the road from Laitre to Launois.

"The enemy then charged, being sheltered by the fire from his heavy artillery. Despite this fire our quickfirers, which were mounted on the parapets of the trenches, mowed down the advancing line, while our artillery directed a wall of fire in the rear of the Germans, thus effectively preventing any reinforcements from coming to their support.

"At daybreak the side of Hill 597 was seen to be strewn with bodies. Our losses were four killed and twenty-five wounded.

"A French attack on July 24 was directed against Height 627 and a group of houses forming a portion of the village of Launois, which offered shelter to the enemy's trenches. The attack was prepared by a bombardment with guns of heavy calibre, which was very effective.

"Despite the intense fire of the enemy, our troops climbed out of their trenches at 6:30 o'clock in the evening and half an hour later had attained the objectives assigned to them, penetrating even to the interior of the village of Launois. One German blockhouse alone held out until the following morning, when it was surrounded by our troops.

"The Germans directed a counter-attack, but they were easily repulsed. Our daily progress has since given us possession of a new group of houses, so that now we hold approximately half the village.

"As a result of this action we took eleven officers and 825 men prisoners and also captured eight quick-firers, some bomb throwers, and a large number of rifles."

FRENCH RECAPTURE VOSGES POSITIONS

BRISK ARGONNE FIGHTING

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The Vosges and the Argonne forest were the scenes of fierce fighting last night and today. An attack by the Germans on the heights of the Fecht in the region first mentioned was temporarily successful, but the French today expelled them with much slaughter. A brisk interchange of rifle and grenade fire took place in the Argonne, and cannonading continues, but with diminished violence so far as the Germans are concerned.

There has been moderate artillery activity on the western part of the front. In the Argonne the struggle with bombs and petards, as well as the cannonading, continues, but with less intensity on the part of the enemy.

A violent bombardment has occurred in the forest of Apremont.

In the Vosges very sanguinary engagements have been fought on the heights which dominate the Fecht to the north, particularly at the Col du Schratzmannele, where the enemy, after having taken one of our block houses, was driven out by an immediate counter-attack. Our fire inflicted on the Germans very heavy losses.

One of our aeroplanes was forced by motor trouble to make a landing near Moulin-sous-Toutvent in our lines, a short distance from the lines of the enemy. After the machine reached the earth it took fire, but the aviators were saved.

In the Artois district, around Souchez, there took place last night fairly spirited engagements with grenades and bombs, as well as with artillery. There were also fairly active artillery exchanges at Tracy-le-Val and in the vicinity of Vailly, in the valley of the Aisne.

In the Argonne the night passed with much activity. There was rifle firing and the throwing of bombs from trench to trench, together with artillery firing on several different occasions.

In the Vosges last night there was a continued and very severe bombardment of our trenches at Lingekopf. Yesterday evening German forces delivered a very violent attack against the French positions at this point, but in spite of this, with the exception of some trenches on the crest of the Lingekopf, we retained all our ground.

In the Vosges there has been a new engagement near the Lingekopf.

message of President Poincaré were frequently interrupted with applause. At the close of each address there was an outburst of clapping from all the delegates, who rose to their feet.

"You will find it natural that after a year of war the President of the republic has the honor to associate himself with the Government and the two houses of the Legislature to render homage, admiration and gratitude to the nation and the army.

"When a year ago I recommended to the country this sacred union, which was then and still remains one of the conditions of victory, I had no doubt that my appeal would be immediately heard. Our enemies, who always have misunderstood France, alone believed that we would offer an evidence of our dissensions to their brutal aggression.

"At the precise hour when they audaciously asserted that Paris was a prey to upheaval, the capital of the republic assumed that grave and serene physiognomy in which could be read its cold resolution. From the largest cities to the smallest villages there passed a great current of national fraternity which, among the people as well as in Parliament, wiped out even the memory of civil quarrels. The whole people turned a united face to the enemy.

"For a year this unity of will has not belied my belief that nothing will weaken it. If Germany is counting on the possibility of dividing France at the present time, she is deceived today as completely as she was a year ago. Time will not weaken the ties binding the great French family.

"United France is great and strong, and because she is united she is confident and calm. Every day in the smallest communities there is spontaneous collaboration between the old people, the women and the children which makes sure the continuance of the normal life of these villages in its regular course. Fields are sowed and cultivated, and crops harvested, and this organization of labor is a material factor to the keeping alive of patience and firmness in the soul of the people.

"A generous emulation has inspired all lines of French activity to come to the aid of the national defense, and this aid is given utterly without selfishness. The country should encourage not only harmony among political parties, but also private co-operation and good-will. Individual energies, recognizing how to submit themselves to discipline, constitute a great force in the nation. In war time such energies are never too numerous or too powerful, nor is there ever a greater need to co-ordinate national action to produce a single effect.

"The merits of a people are luminously reflected in the army. The army, composed of the substance of the nation, immediately understood the grandeur of its rôle. It knows it is fighting for the safety of the race and the traditions and liberties of the country. It knows that on the victory of France and the Allies rests the future of civilization and humanity. Into the heart of the most modest of our soldiers and marines has come a high appreciation of this great historical duty. Each man is completely devoted to his mother country, and those who fall die without fear, since by their death France lives and will live forever.

"In the error of its arrogance Germany has represented France as light, impressionable, unstable, and incapable of perseverance and tenacity. The people and the army of France will continue to controvert this calumnious judgment by their calm course. They will not let themselves be troubled by that false news which has its effect only on impressionable souls; by noisy manifestos for peace by our enemies, or by the perfidious and suspicious insinuations whispered by the agents of the enemy in the ears of neutrals—cowardly counsels aimed at future efforts at demoralization. No one in France is disturbed.

"The only peace which the republic can accept is that which guarantees the security of Europe and which will permit us to breathe and to live and to work to reconstruct our dismembered country and repair our ruins; a peace which will effectively protect us against any offensive return of the Germanic ambitions. The present generations are accountable for France to posterity. They will not permit the profanation of the trust which their ancestors confided to their charge. France is determined to conquer; she will conquer."

ly direction through a corner of Bukowina to the frontier of Rumania—in all a distance of over 1,000 miles.

Although since May 25 some attempt has been made to turn the northern flie on its right flank and push the southern line still further away from the Galician frontier, the preponderance of the Teutonic armies has been employed nearer the vortex at Plock—that is to say, on a line about 300 miles long extending northeast of Warsaw and on one of about the same length extending southeast from their point of junction at Plock.

The Vital Railway Systems.

Between the sides of this angle lines of railway radiate from Warsaw—northeast, east, and southeast. A similar system is found at the fortress of Brest-Litowsk, on the Bug River, 130 miles due east of Warsaw, while further east still on the line to Petrograd a vast network of strategic railways has been constructed since the war began connecting the manufacturing towns whose products have sustained the armies at the front. At Brest-Litowsk there may be found, opening eastward and embracing these towns, an angle similar to that which in the last week in July contained Warsaw, and similarly punctuated along its sides by fortified towns and strategic heights, some of which only date from June.

At present, however, it is only necessary to deal with the fortifications flanking Warsaw. The capital itself had three circles, with nearly forty forts. Before the war it had twenty in two circles. For twenty miles west of the outer forts there are extensive marshes flanked north and south by plains, which last Fall contained forests. These have since been cut down so as to give full play to the artillery of the forts.

As the German-Austrian armies have pressed against these lines the retreating Russians have used their system of fortified cities to protect their flanks and behind them to gain much needed rest.

Fortresses Along the Line.

Beginning at the northwestern extremity of the northern side of the angle there is Grodno, a manufacturing town of 36,000 inhabitants, situated on the main railway from Warsaw to Petrograd and fortified by a series of trenches and emplacements for heavy guns which command both banks of the Niemen to the northwest. Next comes Ossowetz, fortified in a similar manner, but with its ancient stone fortifications now faced with concrete. Lonza, on the Narew, is an intrenched camp. Ostrolenka is another, famous for the great battle fought there on May 26, 1831, when the Polish insurgent army, which had driven the Grand Duke Constantine out of Warsaw, met defeat at the hands of the Russians.

From Ostrolenka to the River Orzye there are several lines of trenches prepared months ago. Within the angle, twenty-five miles northwest of Warsaw, is the intrenched camp of Novo-Georgievsk. On the southern line, sixty miles southeast of Warsaw, is Ivangorod, naturally fortified on its surrounding hills, the centre of four railways, and the junction of the Vistula and the Wieprz Rivers.

The present campaign against Warsaw was not the first in the present war which menaced the Polish capital. After the failure of the German attack on the Niemen last October, Warsaw seemed to present a good mark, both on account of the fact that three railways, similar to those which radiate eastward, concentrated then from the west and because the German troops had reinforcements on the near ground that had been brought from the western theatre and had just driven the Russians out of East Prussia.

At this time, also, a strong Austrian counter drive was being made from south and southwest in Eastern Galicia and Lemberg. Strong Hungarian forces repulsed the southern Russian advance at the southern outlets of the Carpathians, and it was driven back almost within cannon shot of the Russian army covering Przemysl.

At this propitious moment the Germans and Austrians advanced from the southwest and also from the west on Warsaw, and it became necessary to withdraw the protruding southwest Russian front from the Wisloka to the San, and this line had to be held there while every man that could be spared from it was sent to repel the danger on the East Prussian-Polish frontier. Then from Novo Geogievsk large forces were sent across the Vistula on Sochaczew while the Cossacks advanced on Lowicz—now for three months outside the Warsaw angle.

Thus in the middle of October the German left was cut and at Gova Miedzeszyn, above Jezforna, his right was turned. This time the invaders came to within twenty-five miles of Warsaw, but were forced to retire before they had time to develop their offensive. It was in pressing back this offensive in the succeeding month of November that the Russians reoccupied Lodz and almost drove the Germans over the Posen border.

The rebound of this drive made possible by the release of troops in East Prussia carried the German armies on Dec. 30 to Przasnysz and Ciechanow north of Warsaw and to the edge of the marsh which protected the capital from the west.

From Dec. 30 through January little news came from the Polish theatre of war. In February the Russians were obliged to contract their line there while they made a second drive through East Prussia—unsuccessful although not a rout like the first one in September—and developed their front southward and westward in Galicia. Eastward Bukowina had been overrun and Transylvania threatened.

Early in March, Germans coming from East Prussia got near enough to Ossowetz to capture two forts, and later southwest of Warsaw the Germans invested Skiernewice, forty-two miles from the capital. From that time on, while the Russians were pausing on the crests of the Carpathians in the south and were being driven far eastward from the East Prussian frontier in the north, until the retreat through Galicia ended in the last week in May, the angle in Central Poland remained about the same. Then the final campaign against Warsaw began on the northern and southern fronts.

The City of Warsaw.

Thirty years ago Ferdinand de Lesseps, fresh from the laurels of the Suez Canal and before the Panama project had tarnished them, said that the greatest European city of the twentieth century would be Warsaw. He based his prophecy on the fact that the city, on account of its situation, could be developed almost infinitely in regard to industries and consequently in regard to population. The population he had seen grow from 161,000 in 1860 to 483,000 in 1885. In 1913 it was 900,000, and when the war came this had reached 1,000,000. About a third of the population is Jewish. In 1911 the military authorities discovered that the fortifications near the city were obsolete, and this turned over to factories much valuable land.

But it is not alone in industry that Warsaw has developed. Its commerce has also grown. It stands at the point of junction of the great trunk lines which run from Berlin and Vienna to Moscow, and so on to Asia, Siberia, and Peking. Thus it has become the great clearing house between the West and the East. The navigable Vistula at Warsaw is a third of a mile wide, and here it is crossed by one of the longest railway bridges in the world. Besides this there are two road bridges. From one of them, the Alexander Bridge—you must not smoke on it, although it is built of iron—there is a comprehensive view of the part of the city which is on the terraced left or western bank of the Vistula.

Warsaw has for more than a century been associated with ideas of Polish patriotism and independence, rather more than Cracow, the ancient capital, which managed to preserve its independence until the 40's of the last century. Although the Poles in Napoleon's army looked upon it as the restored capital of a new and free Poland, the European Concert passed Warsaw over to Russia in 1815, and for seventeen years it was the centre of intrigue and revolt which finally found expression in the revolution of 1830, which forced the Grand Duke Constantine, the Czar's brother, out of the city and for nearly a year left it free to the Poles.

These things and the fact that many Warsaw Poles were subsequently driven into exile, among whom were many painters and writers, continued to preserve the legend of Warsaw's patriotism in foreign lands, when in reality the city was quite contented with its Russian governors and the efforts made in matters of religion and language to keep the people willing subjects of the Czar as part of the great Slavonic empire.

The city had its beginning on the beautiful terraces on the left bank of the Vistula, which in mediæval times had come into the posession of the Dukes of Masovia, their retainers and herdsmen living on the right bank, which gradually grew from a hamlet to a village, and from a village to a town.

Early in the seventeenth century it superceded Cracow as the capital of the Kingdom, although down to the last the Kings of Poland continued to be crowned at the latter place. The city was captured by the Swedes in 1655, but the next year they succeeded in ousting them for a while until the invaders had been reinforced by Brandenburg. In the partition of Poland in 1794 the city withstood successfully attacks by Russians and Prussians, until, in November of that year, the Russians captured it street by street and perpetrated a frightful massacre. After being restored to Russia in the third partition of Poland it became for a time the capital of the newly created Duchy of Warsaw, and then Napoleon held it in pawn until 1813, when its present Russian character was forced upon it.

The Vistula runs through the city between a plateau on its left bank and fertile plains on its right, the former in recent years having claimed the larger part of the population. Like Paris, too, it is a city of beautiful suburbs, among which are Praga and New Praga.

The main city lies close to the river and is laid out in squares, but the streets of the old city are merely developments from country lanes. The walls of the city, memorials of its seventeenth century sieges, inclose the suburbs, and are entered by eleven gates. Three bridges cross the river at this point, the railway bridge, the Alexander Bridge, which dates from 1865, and a road bridge, completed twenty years ago. The former was guarded by a fort on each bank of the river. Twenty-five years ago they were deemed impregnable. The one on the left bank had recently been used as a prison for political prisoners.

Aside from its river and suburbs the city has another reminder of Paris; this is its boulevards—Ujazdowska and Jerusalem Streets. There are, too, many fine parks on both sides of the river.

A City of Churches.

Warsaw is also a city of churches, with six Russian and more than thirty Roman Catholic. Among the latter is the Cathedral of St. John, north of the Palace Square and connected with the palace. A magnificent view of both buildings may be had from the opposite rising bank of the river. The cathedral dates from the fourteenth century.

Warsaw has long been famous for its printing and carriage industries, its woven goods, and its plated ware. It is also the clearing house between the north and the south, coal, leather, and wheat being the principal exchanges, which, before the war, passed over the railways centred here. In drainage, water works, and rapid transit facilities the city has not kept pace with its growing industrial importance.

SECRETS of GERMAN PROGRESS

By Frank Koester

It is the most constructive book written since the war. It epitomizes Germany's progress; presents a vital and illuminating statement of Germany's position and incentives of progress and her relation to the United States. Such a volume has never appeared before; it is a mine of information; every page glistens with facts that startle and convince. It shows why Germany has been successful commercially, nationally and politically.

CALLS GERMANS HERE 'INTERNAL DANGER'

That Sobered American Patriots, New York Correspondent Says in Frankfurter Zeitung.

WOULDN'T "WARM" TO WAR

Might Resist Germany if Conflict Were One of Conquest, but Not on Any Lusitania Issue.

An estimate of the public opinion of America from the German point of view, as sent by its New York correspondent, is presented in the Frankfurter Zeitung of July 18. The correspondent predicts that, barring an overt act by Germany growing out of the Lusitania matter, there will be no war, but adds that in case of war with Germany he feels the German-Americans will not hesitate to fight against Germany—"not, however, for the Lusitania issue or a similar one."

"The opinion is here prevalent," he writes, "that the Lusitania case will lead to nothing further, provided no new incident occurs that may render more tense the relations between Germany and the United States. Undoubtedly the President already is very sorry that in the note which he sent to Berlin as an answer to the German war zone declaration he spoke in such big tones, as, for instance, that if an American life were lost America would hold Germany to the strictest accountability. So far, five cases have become known in which Americans either lost their lives or were put into great danger by German submarines.

"The torpedoing of the Lusitania formed the climax of the 'unheard-of excesses against the lives and property of Americans,' as the local newspapers call them, and for a week at least it looked as if war might be declared any minute. The war shouters had the floor. But after the first excitement was over, the voices of circumspect Americans, and particularly of the German-born citizens, began to assert themselves. Then it became evident that only a relatively small element really desired war.

"To be sure, there are great material interests at stake, for a war with a European power would result in enormous wastage in the economic life of the country. The element which did not regard the casus belli as furnished soon received important augmentation. It was declared that, to be sure, America had not recognized the war zone, but that nevertheless a part of the blame must be ascribed to those who were killed, inasmuch as they went needlessly into danger.

"The realization that America is in no wise equipped for war, brought about a cooler view in the case of many excited patriots, and beneath the surface very many thought of the internal danger. They realized, in other words, that the Germans and the Austrians in the United States, with their children almost 12,000,000, would certainly not warm up to such a war, even if a number of 'prominent' Germans have declared that they would take the field against any one.

"In my opinion, pretty nearly every German-American would indeed raise arms against the old homeland insofar as the latter encroached upon the real interests of America, perhaps by threatening the possessions of the country or seeking to found colonies in America. But it is quite clear that the assistance of the German-Americans would be lacking to the Americans in case such a war should be waged on account of the Lusitania or a similar incident, especially if there were present also the suspicion that assistance was to be given to German's enemies. It must be admitted, besides, that here in the East the Germans have not conducted themselves so bravely against the attacks of the Americans as in the West."

The correspondent asserts that the Jingoes seem to have "the support of the Morgan capitalist group," and adds:

"It will, however, become dangerous in case it should definitely appear that England is whipped under all circumstances. At present the friends of the Allies here still hope that, with the entry of Italy into the war, an end will be put to the victorious progress of the central powers and their ally on the Bosporus. But if the triumph of Germany should become clearly evident, mighty influences would appear here that would attempt to make America a 'savior of civilization.' They are already trying to smooth the way for that, as is shown by various indications. In Philadelphia there has just been formed a 'League for the Enforcement of World Peace, American Branch,' which is to get into connection with similar bodies of other nations to carry out its programme.'

Judging from its personnel, the correspondent says, the league harbors ulterior motives not expressed in its name and dangerous to Germany and Austria, in that it may work for peace objects in an anti-German sense among other neutrals.

GERMANS CITE MORE BELGIAN DOCUMENTS

Intended to Show Aggressive Spirit of French and British a Few Years Back.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.).—The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, according to the Overseas News Agency, continues the publications of documents purporting to be secret Belgian diplomatic reports in Brussels by the Germans, covering the period between 1905 and 1914. These documents are being made public for the purpose of showing that Germany maintained a peaceful attitude from the time of the Moroccan crisis until the beginning of the present war.

The Belgian Minister at Berlin is quoted as having reported to his Government on Dec. 31, 1905: "The German Emperor's highest ambition is to maintain peace during the whole of his reign."

The Belgian Minister at London, under date of Jan. 14, 1906, as quoted, insisted that England was ready to assist France even in case of war during the Moroccan crisis, which, he says, then arose.

Commenting on King Edward's meeting with M. Delcassé, who was then a private citizen, the Belgian Minister at Paris, on March 6, 1906, wrote: "It is natural that the English King wanted to give special marks of sympathy to a Minister who had shown himself so desirous to share England's views."

The Belgian Minister at Berlin, on April 5, 1906, wrote as follows: "The English press did everything to obstruct the results of the Algeciras conference and was more irreconcilable than the French. These papers never cease to discuss German plans of aggression which do not exist."

And the excerpt from a diplomatic document is quoted by the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, that written by the Belgian Minister at London under date of March 18, 1907: "The whole force of English diplomacy is for Germany's isolation."

On March 28, 1907, the Minister at Berlin reported: "French arrogance is now as it was during the worst days of the Second Empire. * * * This arrogance has increased one degree since the negotiations between London and St. Petersburg."

The Belgian Minister at Berlin is quoted as writing under date of April 8, 1907, that "France is not expected to keep her engagement" with regard to the Algeciras Convention, and, further on in his report:

"Every time that France, in the course of history, has felt strong enough, she has tried to arrogate the hegemony of the world. This time the entente cordiale with England gives her the necessary self-confidence."

MODIFIED BLOCKADE NO LOSS TO ENGLAND

LIGHT ON THE NECHES CASE

British Foreign Office Explains That the Vessel Was Not Seized as a Reprisal Measure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The Manchester Guardian, in the course of a long article on the British-American notes, comes to practically the same conclusion that was advanced by THE NEW YORK TIMES several months ago.

"A great deal," it says, "depends on our meeting the American point of view if we can. What should we lose if we did meet it? Of neutral ports there could be no blockade, but we might extend the doctrine of continuous voyage so as to secure the right to intercept all contraband imported through neutral ports for German use, and there could still be no legitimate ground of objection. We might go further and extend our list of contraband so as to cover cotton, and conceivably even foodstuffs, imported through neutral ports for Germany, and still our action would lie within the forms of international law and give the United States no ground for protest.

"What advantage have we now through our present policy that we should lose if we adopted the policy that we have sketched? Simply this, that though German ports would be closed to everything, Germany could still trade with the outside world through neutral ports in articles, which not being of use in war, would not be on our extended list of contraband. We do not think that that would be a serious or even an appreciable loss. On the other hand the gain in getting rid of this controversy with the United States might be very great. It would remove the screen which we are placing between Germany and the full gale of American indignation over her inhuman outrages on law. It would keep up, so far as it can be kept up with justice to ourselves, the distinction between the civilian and belligerent use of articles of commerce. Lastly and most important, it might lay the foundation of that active friendship with America, which whatever happens in this war must be the necessity of any sound British foreign policy in the future."

ENGLAND EXPLAINS NOTES.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Learning from comment that the British note concerning the steamer Neches had been interpreted as stating that the cargo was seized as a reprisal measure against Germany's submarine policy, the Foreign Office explains that the misunderstanding arises from the brevity of the note. The seizure, the Foreign Office says, was not meant in the nature of a reprisal, but was based on the contention of the absolute legality of the Orders in Council, as explained in the note of July 23, to which the Neches note refers.

The Foreign Office also explains that in stating that the British Government did not yet know what steps the neutrals had taken against the German submarine policy, it did not mean to include the United States, which, it says, has made public its protests against this form of warfare. It is further explained by the Foreign Office that in making reference to the German submarine policy, the British Government only desired to point out that from its standpoint it was hardly fair to ask it to give up a perfectly legal policy because Germany was engaged in a palpably illegal course.

IMPORTERS ISSUE CALL.

The importers who recently laid a petition before Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, urging him to protest against the British Order in Council, met in the Hardware Club yesterday and adopted the following resolution:

That all importers and exporters affected by the British Order in Council be invited to participate in a meeting to be held at the Hotel Biltmore in the near future for the purpose of indorsing the efforts of the Administration in bringing relief from the restrictions of said order, and to urge such immediate action as may be deemed necessary in the premises.

This committee of fifteen originally presented to Secretary of State Lansing the petition asking for relief from the British order in Council in detaining American owned merchandise of German and Austrian origin. The personnel of the committee is as follows:

Lee Kohns of L. Strauss & Sons, Carl W. Stern of M. J. Corbett & Co., M. B. Schmidt of B. Illfelder & Co., Emil Strobel of Strobel & Winkin Company, Theodore Bach of Snow's United States Express Company, William J. Whittemore of the American News Company, George J. Hunken of Emil Majert & Co., Dr. Carl Amend of Eimer & Amend, J. M. Klaess of Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co., Henry F. Sarstag of Samstag & Hilder Brothers, Almalie Walter of Butler Brothers, H. W. Braun of Habicht, Braun & Co., E. Stratmann of the F. A. Koch Company, L. A. Repp of the Hoyt-Repp Company, and Philip J. Cunningham of Dezell & Helwig.

DERIDES BRITISH NOTES.

Staats-Zeitung Says They Are the Words of a Master to a Vassal.

Commenting on the British notes to the United States, the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung says:

"So speaks a master to a vassal. Polite—yes, that they are, these notes which Sir Edward Grey after three months of despicable procrastination transmits to Washington. Polite in language and arrogant in content. Presumptuous, like a genuine Briton who will permit only his own view of the case to stand as right. And written with the Leitmotif which never characterized British statesmanship more than now—a tone of hypocrisy. A hypocrisy which utters in many words a 'Sic volo, sic jubeo,' and asks, 'What are you going to do about it?'

"That Great Britain would yield in no point was to have been foreseen. The mouthpieces of English interests had for weeks been working to prepare the American public with columns of sophistries to realize that England, our dear friend, could not do otherwise; that England as a matter of fact was quite in the right, and the American merchants, cotton growers, and packers are wrong in demanding that England should respect American rights even a little bit."

66 British Ships Sunk in July.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The British Board of Trade report for July shows that sixty-two British steamers and sailing craft were sunk by the Germans during the month with a loss of sixty-three lives, while four steamers and nineteen lives were lost by mines.

STARTS MOVEMENT FOR ARMS EMBARGO

REPRISAL AGAINST ENGLAND

Thousands of copies of a petition addressed to President Wilson in which he is asked to call an extra session of Congress to invest him with authority to declare an embargo on the export of arms and ammunition, as, "the most efficient way of obtaining redress" for what is termed the discrimination against the United States by England in the matter of trade with Germany and Austria, are being mailed to merchants and others in this country. A note accompanying the copy of the petition asks that all signed petitions be mailed to C. R. Meissner, 31 Union Square, New York, who will present the petitions to the President through a committee.

Persons who do not care to purchase printed copies of the petition are asked to copy it "three or more times and send with copy of petition to fellow citizens." A postscript of the letter accompanying the petition adds:

The petition which is adressed to "Hon. Woodrow Wilson, Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C.," reads:

Mr. President:

I, the undersigned, a citizen of the United States of America, respectfully petition you, in the cause of humanity and justice, to call an extra session of Congress at once, to invest you with the power to place an embargo on all arms and ammunition, and in this way to help to bring an end to the present European war, which is rapidly demoralizing our industries and commerce in noncontraband merchandise.

Inasmuch as England is discriminating against the United States in preventing the commerce in noncontraband products between the United States and Germany and Austria going through neutral ports, she is causing enormous losses to the American merchants, while on the other hand, other neutral countries, as Italy, (?) Holland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Switzerland, in spite of the proclaimed blockade of Germany, are not hindered in their commercial dealings with Germany and Austria.

A Swedish merchant, for instance, is in a position the same as before the war, to send merchandise to Germany and to import German merchandise into Sweden, and England can not prevent these shipments, while an American merchant can not sell his merchandise to Germany, nor can he import German merchandise into the United States, owing to the English Order in Council.

I believe that the merchants of the United States are entitled to protection by their Government against this unjust discrimination, and I am of the opinion, in view of the fact that the protests of the American Government are ignored by England, that the most efficient way of obtaining redress would be the placing of an embargo on all arms and ammunition.

FLEE BELGIUM BY FAKE RACE

A number of Liége sportsmen called on the German commandant of that district a fortnight ago and asked permission to organize a bicycle race for the benefit of local war victims. The race was to be from Liège to Mouland, on the Dutch frontier.

The Commandant fell in with the plan, only stipulating that each contestant must wear an arm badge with the German colors and affix a small German flag to his bicycle. After some demur the promoters of the race consented to the conditions. The Commandant supplied the badges and flags himself and agreed to send a military band to the starting place.

The race took place some days later with 112 contestants. The entire countryside turned out to watch the event, and the German sentries all along the road saluted the racers as they pedaled by. But the cyclists did not stop when they reached Moulland; they continued straight on across the Dutch border and failed to return.

HORROR REPORT FOR WILSON

PETROGRAD, Aug. 5.—Copies of the second issue of documents collected and edited by the Extraordinary Commission presided over by Senator Krivtzoff, which investigated reports of German atrocities, have been sent by a special courier to Washington to be handed to President Wilson and members of the American Administration.

This issue contains photographs of Scout Makooha, whose tongue is alleged to have been cut out; of four men said to have been wounded by explosive bullets, of soldiers who are declared to have been burned alive by the Prussians, and of several persons who, it is asserted, were poisoned by gas. Along with explanatory documents, the commission's report includes the statement of seven Russian survivors of the Lusitania disaster.

SIX ENVOYS AGREE TO JOIN LANSING

States to see Mexico at peace, some of the Latin-American representatives were not too confident as to the feasibility of the methods proposed for settling Mexico's troubles. This Government is not asking the Governments of Latin America to join with it in any armed movement, but it was made plain today that it desired these Governments to be informed of what was proposed by the United States and to obtain their assent to the measures undertaken. The feeling of encouragement that the Latin-American countries will give the heartiest cooperation in the effort to get the Mexican factions to compose their differences, is based, to a considerable extent, on the fact that the general plan this Government has in mind conforms very largely to the plan for the restoration of peace in Mexico that was agreed upon at the A B C mediation conference at Niagara Falls, Canada, last year.

It was realized that the United States might find an unwillingness on the part of the Latin-American Governments to become parties to a program that contemplated interference in the internal affairs of an American State without the consent of the people of that State. But it is believed tonight that the United States has made clear that any action along the line contemplated, even if a more positive course than merely urging the Mexican factions to get together were pursued, would not be in any way an interference with internal control of Mexico. In the view of this Government, there is no "revolution" in progress in the southern republic. The revolution, it is contended, ended with the overthrow of General Victoriano Huerta last year and the triumph of the Constitutionalist cause, in which General Venustiano Carranza and General Francisco Villa were the chief factors. Now Carranza and Villa are fighting each other, although they have admitted to American agents that the ideals for which they are struggling and battling are the same. In this condition of affairs, according to the American view, anarchy prevails in Mexico, and it is the duty as well as the privilege of other nations whose tranquility is disturbed by the Mexican situation to adopt measures necessary "to help Mexico save herself and serve her people," as President Wilson put it in concluding his warning statement to the Mexican factions, issued on June 2.

Fuller Tells of Conditions

Mr. Fuller's presence at today's conference was due to the fact that he had made an investigation of conditions in Mexico at the request of President Wilson, and had sought by personal persuasion to bring Carranza and Villa to the point where they would undertake to settle their differences in an amicable manner. On account of his recent familiarity with the state of things prevailing in Mexico, and the position in each case of the two foremost leaders of the opposing factions, he was in a position to furnish valuable information as to what might be accomplished by an effort to end Mexico's troubles through concerted action by other American nations.

One important development was the view expressed that the distress prevailing in Mexico on account of lack of food might prove to be a potent factor in another endeavor to have the factional leaders compose their differences and set up an orderly government. The United States has considered the advisability of going to the extreme of sending armed forces into Mexico for the purpose of keeping open the railroad line between Vera cruz and Mexico City and using it for the transportation of food supplies for the people in the capital.

Within the past few days, however, there has been an improvement in conditions through the reopening of the railroad line and the shipment of food to the capital, and this Government is disposed to give a trial to the assurances of the Carranza Government that there will be no interference with the transportation of such supplies. Notice has already been served by the United States on Generals Villa and Zapata that they must not interfere with the operation of this line of communication between Vera Cruz and Mexico City.

It is understood that nothing developed at today's conference to indicate any present intention of the United States to send troops to Mexico for the purpose of insuring the delivery of food to Mexico City, but it was inferred that the United States would like the present conference to result in assurances from the Latin-American countries concerned that the sending of an armed force to Mexico solely to prevent starvation in the capital, should such a step be deemed necessary, would have the approval of those countries.

It is evident as a result of today's State Department conference that the attitude of General Carranza is regarded as the main obstacle to the accomplishment of the end desired by the Governments of the United States and the six Latin-American countries. Carranza is again in possession of Mexico City and claims to control the greater portion of Mexican territory. He asserts also that his enemies have been worsted in recent battles and that their complete rout is a matter of a short time only. In these circumstances he feels that the Government established by him is entitled to the recognition of the United States. In view of this stand by Carranza, little hope exists that he will modify his previous refusals to deal with the Villa and Zapata elements in an effort to end the civil war and establish a central authority that will have the support of all factions in Mexico. Whether Carranza's argument will appeal to any of the Latin-American Governments whose diplomatic representatives attended today's conference is a matter that will be brought to light if the next step to be undertaken, that of again calling on Carranza, Villa, and Zapata to adjust their differences diplomatically, ends in failure.

It is realized by the Administration that, with Carranza's forces stronger than those of Villa and Zapata combined, and his having the additional advantage of being able to establish a government in Mexico City and control of the important ports, it might be difficult to uphold the provisional Government backed by the armies of Villa and Zapata through extending it American recognition and calling off arms and ammunition from the Carranza forces. This embodies the difficult problem which faces the Wilson Administration in its determination to end the trouble in Mexico. In some quarters the belief prevails that only armed intervention by the United States would keep such a provisional Government in power, and the Wilson Administration is not yet prepared to consider armed intervention.

Secretary Lansing declined to make any statement concerning the conference further than to say that it was entirely informal. In answer to a question as to whether the representatives of the Latin American Governments had plenary powers, he said he did not know what their powers were. They came into the conference, he added, with the understanding that it should be entirely confidential and secret, and for that reason he was not in a position to make any statement as to what took place.

Ultimatum for Carranza.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Before a Mexican program is adopted the Latin-American envoys who attended today's conference will submit it to their Governments, and before it is put into effect all the Pan-American nations will be asked for their approval. None of the Mexican factions was represented in today's conference.

Before entering the meeting each of the Latin-American diplomats was notified on behalf of General Carranza that it would be futile to suggest restoring the Constitutional line of Government in Mexico by choosing a member of the Madero Cabinet for Provisional President, which has been suggested by some of the other factions, notably General Villa. Herberto Barron, a special emissary from General Carranza, presented to each of the diplomats Carranza's letter of some weeks ago to President Wilson, setting forth his claim to the Presidency.

This indicated that General Carranza had anticipated the probable purpose of the conference and had acted promptly to place on record his opposition to stepping aside. General Carranza's notice presented the first obstacle of the conference, and plainly its importance was not underestimated.

One point upon which there seemed to be unanimous agreement was that there shall be no prolonged diplomatic exchanges with General Carranza, as there were during the Niagara conference. The message which will go to him will be delivered by American Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz, who, under definite instructions from Washington, will insist upon an answer within a stipulated time. General Carranza will be asked to lay down his arms and join with his adversaries in establishing a government which the United States will recognize. The leading powers of the world, now awaiting the American Government's action, are prepared to follow. The message to Carranza will present in a firm fashion the reasons why he should adopt the course outlined.

An important part of Mr. Fuller's report to the diplomats today concerned negotiations with other Mexican leaders conducted during the last two months by agents of the Washington Administration, including Mr. Fuller himself. The results of conferences with General Felipe Angeles, Diaz Lombardo, Manuel Bonilla, and General Villa himself were disclosed. All were favorable to the general plan. Villa expressed his willingness to eliminate himself if peace could be assured. Thus the preliminary negotiations necessarily revolve around Carranza. Upon his answer much depends as to the nature of the final plans.

ARGENTINE VIEW CRITICAL.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 5.—The newspapers of Buenos Aires express their acceptance in principle of the appeal of the United States for the co-operation of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala in the pacification of Mexico.

La Prensa, however, while praising this proposal as generous, expresses the opinion that the mediation of the United States would be preferable unless the warring factions in Mexico should specifically desire the moral help of Latin-American republics.

BRAZIL MUCH INTERESTED.

RIO JANEIRO, Aug. 5.—The convocation of a conference respecting Mexican affairs has aroused much interest here. Official circles observe a purely expectant attitude. Their conviction is that the fact in itself—the consulting of other American republics—proves that the United States is contemplating no solution such as would impair in the least Mexican sovereignty.

It is pointed out in authoritative circles that public opinion in Brazil would not approve of a curtailment of Mexican rights, nor would the Brazilian Government become a party to it. The newspapers are following the subject very closely.

A certain opposition is manifested by some of them. The Jornal do Brazil, using as a text an utterance attributed to the Jurusconsult Saviana, says that intervention in Mexico would be a crime against its sovereignty. It adds that to accept this doctrine is to proclaim the right o police weak naions.

However, as an offset against these extreme views the Gazetta de Noticias, which is more moderate and reflects better the opinion of competent circles, says that the motives prompting the happy initiative of the United States are as honorable as could be wished. It adds:

"We can confidently await the solution which either will be void or wholly in accordance with these motives. It is certain, however, that in no case will Brazil assent to any infringement, however slight, of the integrity of any American nation."

An interpellation relating to intervention in Mexico has been submitted to the Chamber of Deputies.

VILLA FOLLOWS CONFERENCE

At Border to Learn of Developments —To Face Obregon Again.

Special to The New York Times.

JUAREZ, Aug. 5.—"Obregon thinks he has me trapped, but he will learn very soon that a trapped lion fights hardest," said General Villa this afternoon when told that Obregon had reached Monterey and was about to attack Torreon.

"They think they have me trapped, those men who professed to be my friends no less than a year ago and with whom I pledged the peace of Mexico. Obregon is my personal as well as my political enemy. He broke faith with me, and no man breaks faith with Francisco Villa who does not sufer for it. I trusted him and he sold me out, but I will crush him when he starts north from Monterey. I have the elements, and he will learn what it means to fight in the open against me.

"They say I am running away. That is a lie. I am here to watch developments in Washington, for I am deeply interested in the A B C conference. I will accept any peace which they arrange which is an honorable peace and one that my people will accept as honorable. I have offered to make peace and to do my part to restore order, but these selfish partisans wish to prolong war for its own sake."

Villa said tonight that Bachimba Pass was an impregnable fortress and Obregon would never be able to break through. He obtained 121,000 rounds of ammunition this morning, 126,000 rounds crossed tonight, and 500,000 rounds last night, and these were shipped south to his troops at Chihuahua to be used at Bachimba.

CONSUL HANNA AT BORDER.

Comes from Monterey on a Secret Mission.

LAREDO, Aug. 5.—Phillip C. Hanna, American Consul General at Monterey, arrived here today. He was reticent regarding the Mexican military situation.

"I am glad to set foot again on the sacred soil of the United States," he remarked.

Mr. Hanna said he could not discuss the food situation in Monterey other than to say that published reports of shortage had not been exaggerated. He would not discuss his mission to Texas. He made the journey to the border in a private car tendered by Carranza authorities.

Other passengers on the train said Monterey was quiet and that the population was enthusiastic over recent Carranza victories, believing formal recognition of General Carranza by the United States was only a matter of days.

General Alvaro Obregon accompanied by his staff, entered Monterey today, according to reports in Nuevo Laredo. It was stated Obregon was received joyfully.

MORE ARTILLERY SENT TO NOGALES

Other Border Points Strengthened —Villa Denies Reports of Recent Defeats.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5. — More artillery was ordered today to Nogales, Ariz., to drive back Carranza and Villa troops if they renew fighting near the American border and to repel any invasion of American soil by the combatants. Battery D of the Sixth Field Artillery was ordered from Fort Riley to Nogales by the War Department, and Major Gen. Frederick Funston, commanding the troops on the border, notified the department that he had ordered a battery of field artillery from Douglas, Ariz., to the same point.

These movements of artillery emphasize the determination of the Government to compel the Carranza and Villa forces to adhere to their agreement with the United States not to fight so close to the border that American lives and property will be endangered. Two American soldiers were wounded by shots fired across the line at Nogales this week, and one has died. Funston's orders are to use his artillery if the fire of the Mexican troops becomes dangerous to persons and property on this side of the border.

General Funston notified the War Department today that Governor Maytorena of the State of Sonora, who commands the Villista forces, which hold Nogales, had eight pieces of artillery. General Elias Calles of the Carranza Army, General Funston said, was returning to Nogales with an unknown number of guns. It was reported that Calles had 40,000 troops, but this is not credited. General Funston said that several spent bullets fired on the Mexican side had landed on the American side of the border. There seems to be no doubt in the minds of officials here that if Calles attacks Nogales, General Funston will use his artillery to drive back the combatants to a safe distance from the border.

The Villa agency in Washington gave out a statement today, saying the attacking force was repulsed with considerable loss and Nogales was again quiet.

The Villa agency announced also that "General Maytorena, forced by the special circumstances of the activities of Calles along the border, has withdrawn his troops from the Yaqui region to concentrate them for a movement to compel Calles to return to his former base at Agua Prieta."

According to the Villa agency, General Carrasco had deserted the Carranza army and joined with the Villa forces with his entire command of about fifteen hundred men, and, with General Buelna of the Villa army, is moving against General Iturbe in Northern Sinaloa.

The agency said that it had official reports which enabled it to deny the statements by Carrancistas of the destruction of General Fierro's flying column at Queretaro. The flying column, it was said, was still operating in the central part of the republic, including the central portion of Vera Cruz State. No engagement of importance had been fought by these troops, it was asserted. Their object, it was said, was to keep the army of General Obregon of the Carrancista forces isolated from its base of supplies.

The Villa agency gave out this statement, denying reports that Villa's army had been worsted in recent engagements.

WIGWAG SIGNALS TAUGHT TO POLICE

WILL LEARN SECRET CODE

Extra Rounds of Ammunition Now Carried by Patrolmen—11 Will Go to Army Training Camp.

People in offices in tall buildings near City Hall Park who have the habit of looking out of the window now and then to see if an eagle has flown over from New Jersey again and perched on top of the Municipal Building, were surprised yesterday morning to see a policeman in uniform wigwagging messages uptown with signal flags.

Inquiries over the telephone began to pour into Police Headquarters. Then Police Commissioner Woods announced that he was putting into operation an auxiliary system of communications to be used in case fire, rioting, or any other emergency should happen to put the telephone and telegraph systems out of order. Two weeks ago a signal corps was organized under Inspectors Cohen, O'Brien, and Morris, and the members are being taught by Quartermaster Brauer from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who was detailed to the work by Rear Admiral Usher. The men of the signal corps are now studying the Morse code, and will later learn a secret code which is being prepared.

It was pointed out yesterday that orders to the police from Headquarters depended almost entirely upon the telephone service, which might conceivably be put out of commission at exactly the time when the control of the police organization would be of the greatest necessity, as in the case of a great fire or a widespread riot. In such an emergency it would be difficult or impossible even for Inspectors and precinct Captains to keep in communication with the men acting under their orders. A case might be imagined in which the police force, utterly disorganized and uncontrolled, acting individually or in small groups, might fall entirely in the face of a situation where complete mobilization and prompt action under orders would be necessary.

The auxiliary signaling system was thought out by Commissioner Woodgs to prevent a breakdown of the police communication system in such a situation. Other measures have recently been taken to put the department in a state of preparation for anp unforeseen crisis. About a month ago policemen were ordered to report every facility on their beat that could be used in case of a riot. Recently they were told to carry an extra round of ammunition when on duty. Commissioner Woods has also announced that officers of the department might have leaves of absence with full pay to attend the United States military training camp at Plattsburg, where college students, professional men and others will receive instruction to fit them for service as officers in the United States Army. Recently a riot squad was organized, chiefly of former army and navy men, armed with repeating rifles, and special attention has been given to riot drills.

Flagwagging is not the whole of the new signal system. On sunny days the heliograph, an instrument which signals by mirroring the rays of the sun, will be used. At night powerful lamps of different colors will do the signalling.

The Municipal Building will be the centre of the system. It will receive and transmit messages for Police Headquarters. The central station will communicate with stations on high buildings in each of the boroughs, which will in turn send and take messages from precinct stations.

Another feature of the plan will be the preparations for the sudden concentration of policemen in the districts where the need of them is greatest. Directions have been given to have automobiles and patrol wagons ready to cooperate promptly, and routes have been laid out to facilitate the assembling of a large body of policemen in any part of the city within a few minutes after the wigwag alarm is received.

Only one relay is required in sending messages from the Municipal Building to the Bronx. Messages will be sent to and received from Staten Island through the Brooklyn Station signaling across the Narrows. A supplementary station has been established in one of the highest buildings of the financial district.

The officers of the department who, at the suggestion of Major Gen. Wood, will take the thirty-day military course at Plattsburgh, beginning next Tuesday, are Inspector James Boland, Captain John J. Collins, Captain Edward J. Hughes, Lieutenant Charles McKenney, Lieutenant Charles E. Schofield, Sergeants Michael A. Wall, Martin A. Noonan, Harry A. Taylor, William T. Tarvis, Dennis J. Goss, and Detective James J. Geegan.

Under the direction of Lieutenant Parks the Traffic Squad gave a demonstration of night signaling on the roof at Police Headquarters last night. Henry J. Case, Secretary to the Commissioner, said that the Commissioner had ordered experiments in wireless telegraphy with the idea of establishing a wireless telegraph system eventually as the second line of communication of the department.

Artist Receives Exposition Medal.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 5.—George Alfred Williams, an artist of 16 Valley View Avenue, Summit, has received a silver medal for seven paintings in water color on exhibition at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. In addition to the water colors, Mr. Williams is represented in the galleries by three oil paintings. The water colors were noticed by J. E. D. Trask, fine arts director of the exposition, at the exhibition of the Philadelphia Water Color Society early in the year, who invited Williams to send a group to San Francisco.

70 TO LOSE HOMES IN FLOATING HOTEL

The Good Ship Stamler, John Arbuckle's Philanthropy, Will Be Dismantled.

LAST DINNER ON AUG. 28

The good ship Jacob A. Stamler, Deep Sea Hotel for working girls and boys, bore a sorrowing crew last night. The craft rose and fell on the lazy swell at the foot of East Twenty-third Street, showing the scars she got from the seven seas in the twoscore years she freighted from the four corners of the earth to New York port, while fifty girls and twenty boys read this notice tacked on the bulletin board, amidship:

The guests of this hotel are hereby notified that the company has decided to retire from the hotel business and that the last meal to be served will be dinner Aug. 28, 1915. All rooms are to be vacated on or before that date.

Arbuckle's Deep Sea Hotel Co.

Fourteen of the girls who read the notice were out of work. They read and wondered where they were to go. One girl of 18, who said her first name was Elizabeth and thought it wouldn't do any good to tell her last name, said she lost her $4 a week job in a big candy factory four weeks ago.

"I have no home," she said. "This has been my home for two years. My mother can't care for me and I have no father. I don't know where I'll go. We were all so happy here."

Twice before in the three years since John Arbuckle, the coffee man and founder of the "hotel," died, his heirs have posted the closing notice, and each time the girls and boys have prayed that their home be preserved, and it was. But yesterday Captain Frank D. Sheeley sadly told his charges it would do no good to appeal. He has received orders to strip the ship and her eight years' service as a shelter for struggling boys and girls is near an end.

Trouble with Fire Department, Too.

There has been trouble with the City Fire Department, which didn't like some leaks the old craft has and among other things ordered that all doors on the ship open outward instead of inward. Captain Sheeley said his plea that ships were not built according to regulations of the Fire Department availed him nothing. The heirs of Mr. Arbuckle do not wish to meet the expense of repairs and maintenance and the oddest hotel in the world must pass.

The heirs of Mr. Arbuckle are his sisters, Miss Christina Arbuckle of Pittsburgh and Mrs. Catherine A. Jamison of New York. Charles A. Jamison, Mrs. Jamison's husband, was President of the hotel company and took an active interest in the philanthropy. He died on July 22.

The guests at the hotel are boys and girls who make small salaries. The girls are charged $2.80 a week for board and meals, and the boys, $3.50. This has never paid the cost of maintenance. Fellow guests on the Stamler had paid the board for the girls out of work for the last few weeks.

Captain Sheeley, who has commanded the Stamler for eight years, sat in a rocking chair on the main deck of the ship yesterday afternoon and while one of the girl guests played on a piano for the reporters, told the Stamler's story:

"About ten years before his death when Mr. Arbuckle took a sea voyage after he had been sick, one night on a balmy sea he went on deck and sat in the cool Atlantic breeze. 'I thought then,' he told me, 'of how I wished I could stop the ship and stay there in the breeze, for it was so glorious. I thought, too, that I would repay some of the goodness of the world by helping some one to share the enjoyment I had.'

Stamler Used to Cruise.

"When he returned, Mr. Arbuckle bought the Stamler and for months his greatest pleasure was to fill the ship full of laughing working people, give them a good dinner, an evening on the water, and send them back to work after a good breakfast. But after the Slocum disaster he feared an accident and moored the Stamler on the west side, near Twenty-first Street. A year later we had to move and he picked this spot. After the ship was tied up he started his hotel for working girls and boys."

Captain Sheeley said he didn't know what would become of the Stamler. He said she was too big to be used for a barge. The old ship was built in Brooklyn in 1867, within sight of where she now lies. She carried emigrants from Havre to New York before the ocean greyhounds crowded sailing vessels out of the passenger business. Later she went into the China trade, and for years the odor of spices clung to her decks.

Captain Sheeley said that the Stamler was always filled. Her capacity is about seventy, and he said that many times she had sheltered 100, with scores of applicants who couldn't be accommodated. He said some of the girls earned as little as $2.50 a week, most of them about $5, with some who received $6 and $7. By common understanding, as soon as the girls earn more than $7 they have moved to make room for poorer sisters.

The girls and boys last night discussed a plan to save their home. When the notice was posted last year a committee went into the Adirondacks to find Mrs. Jamison, as a result of which the Stamler was not dismantled. Mrs. Jamison is now ill in the Adirondacks.

THE ANKLE DEEP TOO CRASHES INTO A REEF

OWNER WAS AT THE WHEEL

Hydroplane-Speedboat Cost $25,000 and Went to Bottom When She Was Launched on July 10.

Count Casimir Mankowski's powerful little hydroplane-speedboat Ankle Deep Too, that cost more than $25,000 to build and that has been making amazing speed in New York waters for the last few weeks, came to grief for the second time in its short career yesterday afternoon. The Count himself was at the wheel when the accident happened, and the flying boat was skimming at high speed over the old one-mile race course in Hempstead Harbor. Aboard were Wallace Bugh, the chief engineer, and Assistant Engineer William Seymour.

Suddenly, as the boat was taking a curve, with her two engines, of 250 horsepower each, running at high speed, the bottom of the boat was splintered on the protruding edge of a rock. A strip of the bottom was ripped out and the boat settled into the water.

A tugboat happened to be near and hurried to the rescue, picking up Count Mankowski and his assistants. The tug was left to tow the damaged frame and the two engineers to shore while the Count returned to City Island in the gasoline launch Ymir.

A party of repair men were sent back to the boat in the Ymir from the Wood & McClure shipyard on City Island, where the Ankle Deep Too was built, and the Count, greatly discouraged at what he termed his continued hard luck with the boat, returned to his home by automobile.

Ankle Deep Too was built as the successor to Ankle Deep, in which Count Mankowski won notable victories in this country and in which he was the principal challenger, in 1913, for the Harmsworth Cup in the international races near London. His entry ran second in this race, and was burned last year in a Long Island Sound cup race. The Count's new rider was expected to be one of the most serious contenders in the coming race for the gold challenge cup of the American Power Boat Association in Manhasset Bay from Aug. 14 to 17. This race is considered the most important motor power boat race held in American waters, and it has not been held near New York for a number of years.

The first accident to Ankle Deep Too happened within fifteen minutes after the boat had been launched on July 10, and it was never definitely ascertained what caused that mishap. The boat dived sixty feet to the bottom of the Sound, and on being hauled up was partially rebuilt and considerably broadened to make it more seaworthy. As a result of that accident the challenge cup races were postponed to give the Count time to have his boat repaired, but it feared that this second accident will make it impossible for him to enter the race at all.

Count Mankowski has been guiding his high-powered boat himself during many of its recent runs, and it is said attained a speed of between fifty-seven and sixty miles. While the Indian Harbor Yacht Club races were in progress last Saturday Ankle Deep Too appeared on the scene with speed that made the racing boats seem slow. The Count was at the wheel, and when a storm threatened he put back for City Island at a fifty-mile clip.

The Count has a large estate at Lake George. He is of American birth, the son of the Polish Count Casimir Mankowski, who married the daughter of John M. Bixby, and who died in 1900.

ture—a scheme pernicious in the extreme to good government. It is scarcely conceivable that 70 per cent. of the people in the State who live in cities will accept any such unworkable home rule proposal."

Chairman Low of the Cities Committee made this statement:

"I hope that the people will remember that there are two sides to every question, and will keep an open mind until the proposals from the committee have been thoroughly discussed and are perfectly understood.

"The proposals of the committee include an exclusive grant of power to cities as to their own local affairs. Within this field the Legislature can pass no special law affecting a city. The Legislature can pass a special law affecting a city only in the field which is not included within the exclusive grant of power to cities, and even such a law remains subject to the veto of the locality.

"Furthermore, the committee's amendment gives to the cities the exclusive power of initiating all charter amendments and all charter revision, so that the power of the Legislature to interfere with the details of city affairs is substantially taken away.

"The argument of the dissenting members is practically an argument in favor of the grant of home rule, without any Legislature supervision and control, even as to matters which, like education, have been and are subjects of State concern.

"It will be noticed that the dissenting members have handed in no substitute amendment."

MITCHEL ASSAILS PLAN AS A HOAX

Calls It an "Indian Gift" and Worse Than No Amendment at All.

BUFFALO, Aug. 5.—Mayor John Purroy Mitchel of New York opened here today what is said to be a State-wide campaign for a larger measure of home rule for cities than the Cities Committee of the Constitutional Convention has yet proposed. The Mayor, addressing a meeting of the Rotary Club, denounced the measure reported by the Cities Committee. The time had come, he said, for plain speaking. He bitterly attacked the Cities Committee's plan, saying that there would be no local autonomy and independence under it. It was appropriately called the Philippine plan, he said, because it was modeled after a plan pursued in the government of a captured colony. He said:

"My point is that if the present scheme is to be retained—that is, if the Legislature is still to have unlimited power to enact special laws relating to the government of cities—there is in this proposal no additional grant of substantive power to cities that is worthy the name; it is merely a hoax, a subterfuge, an attempt to appear to give what the committee must in fact know that it has not given.

"The committee and the convention should clearly understand that the people of the cities of this State cannot be deluded by a proposal which, by the use of certain alluring phrases in a context of ambiguity and uncertainty, gives the Constitutional Convention delegates a pretext for declaring that they have granted a considerable measure of home rule, when in fact they have not done so.

"This Indian gift, this captured-colony-Philippine proposal of the Cities Committee, is worse than no home rule amendment at all. It leaves the cities practically where they are today. Such additional powers as they are granted are certainly of negligible importance, are hampered by cumbrous machinery, and at best are surrounded with doubt and uncertainty, dependent upon litigation and judicial decision for interpretation of the apparent grant.

"I think it should be clearly understood by the people of this State that the Cities Committee of the convention has had before it for consideration several proposals which, if adopted in principle, if not in every detail, would confer genuine home rule upon cities. I do not mean to say that any of these proposals has been perfect.

"It comes to this. If the people of our cities really want home rule—if they really want the privilege of directing their local affairs in their own way, guided by their own experience and free of ignorant, selfish or partisan legislative interference, they must make their demand heard now or forego the opportunity possibly for twenty years."

The Mayor said that New York City did not want any different kind of home rule than other cities should receive.

"We want home rule," he said, "not because of irritation with unfriendly Legislatures, not because of a sentimental desire to call ourselves autonomous, but because we have suffered materially, substantially, through the lack of it.

"But, say the reactionaries, can the cities be intrusted with the broad powers of local self-government? I declare that the regeneration of American cities and their rebirth in democracy is the most hopeful sign in American life today. Twenty years ago, perhaps, James Bryce may have been correct when he held that American city government offered the most conspicuous example of the failure of democratic institutions. Today these city governments offer the most conspicuous examples of their success.

"The cities are capable, intelligent, alert, conscious of their needs, alive to their opportunities. If freed to work out their own destinies, they will soon become the dynamic centres of the progress and democracy of the nation.

"We need a new Constitution in New York. There are many features of our present fundamental law that require change, but there is none that requires it so badly that we cannot afford to wait for a new Constitution one year, two years, five years, ten years if need be, until the vital necessities of the city find their answer in a full, fair, and adequate measure of municipal home rule."

FAVORS SERIAL BONDS.

Convention Advances Proposal to Readjust State's Fiscal System.

ALBANY, Aug. 5.—After defeating an amendment which would have permitted the surplus, estimated at $29,000,000, in the sinking funds of the State to be used to pay interest on the funded debt, the Constitutional Convention this evening advanced to the order of final reading the proposal presented by its Committee on State Finances which makes a radical readjustment in sinking fund management and substitutes serial bonds for the sinking fund bonds the State now issues. The debate on the measure lasted all day, but the final vote on every section was unanimous.

Senator Robert F. Wagner offered the amendment which would have permitted the use of the surplus for the annual contributions to the sinking funds. The minority leader of the Senate urged that, inasmuch as the excess money in the sinking funds had been taken without justification from the taxpayers of the present generation, it should be utilized for amortization purposes at once until the $29,000,000 had been exhausted.

Henry L. Stimson, chairman of the Committee on State Finances, ex-Mayor Seth Low, and George Clinton, Sr., who helped draft the measure under which the $101,000,000 barge canal debt was contracted, opposed the Wagner plan on the ground that it would impair the credit of the State, the value of the securities, and involve a breach of the State's good faith.

When the session of the convention opened today ex-Attorney General Wickersham's motion to reconsider the vote by which the proposal to raise the salary of legislators from $1,500 to $2,500 a year was defeated by a vote of 100 to 38.

AGAINST BUDGET PROPOSAL.

Wagner Says Majority Plan Provides for "Guesses."

ALBANY, Aug. 5.—Contending that a budget originating with the Governor would take control of the State's money from the people, Senator Robert F. Wagner today submitted to the Constitutional Convention a minority report opposing the proposal recommended by the majority members of the Finance Committee yesterday. He asserted that the power of originating appropriations should be lodged with the Legislature, which is "representative of, and elected by, the voters."

Senator Wagner asserted that the budget plan favored by the majority of the Finance Committee made no provision for obtaining accurate information as to the State's needs. He maintained it provided for a "guess" by the department heads and another "guess" by the Governor. He asserted that the plan, which was supported because it would give publicity to appropriations, would get such publicity only on routine financial measures, but gave no guarantee of publicity on special appropriations, where it would be most needed.

The minority report closes with the recommendation that the Legislature be permitted to retain the function of originating the appropriation measures, but asks that if the majority plan is adopted, department heads be copelled to swear to their estimates and classify them.

Senator Wagner's last recommendation is that a two-thirds vote be required to pass appropriation measures and that each item be voted on separately.

Those in charge of the MacLevy Health Farm near Babylon, yesterday said they believed Harry Elias, the 20-year-old son of the late Henry Elias, the wealthy brewer, who disappeared from the farm on Tuesday evening, was kidnapped, and that he was being held for ransom.

MacLevy said he would be surprised if a demand was not made soon upon Mrs. Henry Elias, his mother, as the price for the return of her son.

Mrs. Elias is in Babylon, directing the efforts of private detectives to find her son.

SIX DROWN IN SEAS STIRRED BY STORM

MAN IS KILLED MAKING DIVE

Six persons were drowned at bathing resorts near New York yesterday, and the list would have been larger except for some thrilling rescues

Mrs. Catherine Ann, a colored woman, told the Coney Island police last night that she had been sitting on the porch of her home at Eighty-sixth and Tenth Streets, Gravesend, yesterday afternoon, when she saw three boys playing in a rowboat in Coney Island Creek. She said she called to them to be more careful, but in spite of her warning one of the boys fell overboard. She said when he disappeared the other two boys hastened to the shore, abandoned the boat, and fled. Detectives from the Sheepshead Bay Police Station investigated the case last night. The boat belonged to a Coney Island boat livery.

Herman Eberhardt, 21 years old, of 936 Seneca Avenue, Queens, is believed to have been drowned yesterday afternoon while bathing in the ocean at Rockbury, Rockaway Point. He was last seen by his companions swimming about. It is supposed he was seized with a cramp and sank before he was able to sail for help. Eberhardt's clothes were found on the beach, where he had undressed. William Walz, an uncle, with whom he lived, said last night the young man had not returned home and he supposed he had been drowned.

Berkley Harvey, 14 years old, son of Boston Harvey of Flemington, N. J., was drowned while swimming in the South Branch River, near Flemington, yesterday afternoon. The river was above its normal height, due to the heavy rains of Wednesday. Harvey started to swim to a sand bar which had become submerged beyond his depth or swept away by the freshets. He became exhausted and called for help. Leroy Strouse of Bordentown made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue him. His body was recovered two hours later.

Dives to His Death.

Joseph Jacobs, 19 years old, of White Plains, was drowned in the Hudson last night near Tarrytown. He dove off a steep bank at Kingsland Point and did not come to the surface. It is believed he hit a submerged rock. Friends were unable to find the body. This was the second drowning off Kingsland Point within three weeks.

A victim in an unusual way of the rainstorms of this week, George Baumheuser, 9 years old, was drowned yesterday afternoon in a pool of water, five feet deep at Skillman and Morgan Avenues, which was caused by the rains. Half a dozen boys were in swimming in the pool when George threw up his hands and called for help. His companions ran away. A woman who saw the boy struggling in the water screamed for help, and John Walsh of 977 Metropolitan Avenue heard her. He went into the pool and found the boy's body. An ambulance surgeon from St. Catherine's Hospital worked more than an hour in a vain attempt to resuscitate the boy.

Five life guards at Rockaway Beach yesterday afternoon saved four people who had been carried out into the ocean by the strong undertow. Paul Lieberman, 12 years old, of 381 Fifteenth Street, Manhattan, got beyond his depth and called for aid. Mrs. Rose Bronstein of 16 East Seventeenth Street, Morris Bodkin of 1,524 First Avenue, and Julius Kaller of 16 East Seventeenth Street went to his rescue, but were themselves carried beyond their depth. Life Guard Thomas Welthy went to the rescue in a lifeboat, in the meanwhile blowing his whistle for help. Guards Robert Sloan, James Smith, and Walter Bailey went to his aid, and the five men brought the four to safety. The rescued were attended by Dr. Victor of the Far Rockaway Hospital.

Falls from Motor Boat.

There was another rescue near Rockaway Beach yesterday when Charles Chassner of Eldert Street, Rockaway Beach, was saved from drowning in Jamaica Bay. He was taking a trip in his motor boat when he fell overboard. Policeman Charles Boldeman, who was off duty, saw his fall from the stern of the boat, leaped into a rowboat, and reached Chassner before he went down for the last time. In the meanwhile the wild motor boat went on down the bay. It was later overtaken by a speed boat stopped, and towed into Rockaway.

While bathing in the heavy surf at Seaside, L. I., yesterday afternoon Miss Edith Snyder of 28 Springfield Avenue, Schenectady, N. Y., was drawn beneath the surface by the undertow. She was rescued by Life Guards Finklestein and Dunn and was carried unconscious to the White Cross emergency station, where she was resuscitated.

Powerful searchlights were used yesterday and last night by two divers in an attempt to find the body of Edward Van Valkenburgh, who is supposed to have been drowned last Thursday in Lake Wawayanda, N. J. The work was directed by Willis Van Valkenburgh of 10 Chestnut Street, East Orange, father of the missing man. The divers will work night and day until they have explored every part of the bottom of the lake.

AUTO SKIDS; FIVE DROWN.

Disaster Overtakes Toronto Party Crossing a Muskoka Lake.

PORT SYDNEY, Muskoka, Ont., Aug. 5.—Five persons were drowned near here late today when an automobile in which they were riding skidded on the floating bridge across a long lake and, breaking through the railing, plunged into the water. The dead, all from Toronto, are: Henry R. Alley, 65, head librarian of the Ontario Education Department; Fred Alley, 6, son of H. R. Alley; Miss E. M. Lawson, 30; Angus Lawson, 12; and Beverley Swabey, 10.

Harold Swabey and Douglas Lawson, boys, and John Clark, the chauffeur, escaped by tearing the curtains from the automobile and leaping to safety.

The car was one of five returning from an excursion to Utterson. It began to rain as the party approached the bridge and the curtains were put up.

JAILED ANARCHIST MARRIES.

MELUN, Fance, Aug. 5.—The marriage took place here this morning of the anarchists Victor Napoleon Kibaltchiche, known as the "Obstinate," and Mme. Anna Estorges, divorced wife of the famous Maître Jean Graves, once editor of L'Anarchie, of which Mme. Maître Jean was business manageress.

Kibaltchiche after the ceremony returned to prison, where he still has three years of a five-year term to serve for complicity in the Winter and Spring of 1912 in the exploits of the gang led by Jules Bonnot, known as "the demon chauffeur," when bank messengers, freight agents, policemen, and chauffeurs were murdered and banks in the suburbs of Paris raided and robbed at the points of the revolvers of the bandits. Four of the gang were sentenced to death and fourteen to various terms of imprisonment, while three women accomplices, including the then Mme. Maître Jean, were acquitted.

On the last day of the trial, Feb. 27, 1913, when twelve of the motor bandits were convicted, Mme. Maître Jean, who at the early stages of the case had flirted with the guards about her, suddenly lost all control of herself. She arose and while tears ran down her cheeks cried:

"I have two little children; pity for them! Pity!" Thereupon Kibaltchiche arose and attacked his fellow-prisoners, declaring that they were thieves and bandits, while he himself was innocent, until Callemin, who was soon to be sentenced to death, interrupted him with:

"This is becoming idiotic, and you bore me. Don't keep on calling us murderers. I am innocent."

From all the prisoners there arose the same protest, and some time elapsed before Kibaltchiche could continue his defense.

EDISON'S SON AUCTIONS CAR

Sells It in Street to Farmer Who Outbid Justice Pitney.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Aug. 5.—William Edison, second son of Thomas A. Edison, was the centre of attraction here yesterday afternoon when he auctioned off his automobile in the street for $225. The buyer was a farmer, who paid in cash and drove the machine away.

Mr. Edison lives between this place and Mt. Tabor. He drove into town during the afternoon and engaged Joseph Van Dyke, an auctioneer, to handle the sale for him. One of the early bidders was Supreme Court Justice Pitney, who, however, dropped out when the offers neared the $200 mark.

Kaiser Honors Archduke Frederick.

BERLIN, Aug. 5, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—Emperor William personally delivered a Prussian Field Marshal's baton to Archduke Frederick of Austria, the Commander in Chief of the Austro-Hungarian forces in the east. The presentation took place at a little Galician town serving as the Austrian headquarters, which was richly decorated with flags. The inhabitants of the place, in spite of a pouring rain, cordially greeted the German Emperor, who briefly addressed the Archduke.

BRIDGEPORT STOPS APPEALS TO LABOR

MAYOR AGAINST AGITATION

Labor Leaders Ignore Warnings and Are Accused of Breach of the Peace.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 5.—A general strike of the hundreds of employes of the Locomobile Company which at present is engaged in filling war orders for automobile trucks for Russia and England will be called within two days, according to statements given out tonight by the police and labor leaders. Only the exhortations of members of the Machinists' and Toolmakers' Unions restrained 200 men from walking out this afternoon following the arrest of three leaders who attempted to address the men employed at the shop at the noon hour today.

There has been talk of calling a strike at the Locomobile Company's plant for several days for the purpose of winning an eight-hour day. Matters were brought to a head by the arrest of three labor leaders today. On orders received from Mayor Clifford B. Wilson, Superintendent of Police Birmingham at noon arrested Frank J. Bowen, business agent of the Machinists' Union; Louis J. Nelson, said to be an I. W. W. member, and ex-Alderman Frederick Cederholm, when they attempted to address the employes of the company on a lot in the rear of Seaside Court.

The arrests were made amid the cheers of the crowd of 300 men which had congregated, some to hear the speeches, but many more attracted by the presence of Superintendent Birmingham and a large squad of policemen. Although the crowd expressed its sympathy by cheering as each speaker was taken from the box on which he stood, no other demonstration was made.

Shortly before the noon whistles blew, as Nelson and Cederholm approached the Locomobile shop, they were halted by Superintendent Birmingham. Nelson was warned that he must not speak.

"I'd like to know why I can't speak if I want to," he said. He was informed by Superintendent Birmingham that on orders of the Mayor he would not be allowed to speak on either public or private property.

"Well, I am going to speak just the same," he replied.

"I warn you now that if you attempt to do so you will be arrested," said Superintendent Birmingham.

"Go ahead. That's just what I want to have you do. I'll make a test case of it," replied Nelson. Cederholm remained quiet during the conversation and a few minutes later both moved into the lot.

Agent Bowen of the Machinists' Union was the first to attempt to speak. As he opened his remarks Superintendent Birmingham stepped up to him and said:

"Mr. Bowen, acting on orders of the Mayor, I warn you not to attempt to address this assembly. If you do so I shall place you under arrest."

Despite the warning, Mr. Bowen started to tell the crowd what the purpose of the meeting was, and had got as far as to say it was to win an eight-hour day, when Superintendent Birmingham ordered Sergeant Wheeler to take him from the platform and place him under arrest. Wheeler promptly did so, and Bowen was taken through the crowd to the police automobile outside. Cedarholm and Nelson were likewise arrested when they attempted to speak from the box from which Nelson had been taken.

The three prisoners were taken to Police Headquarters and later released on bail to appear in the City Court on Friday morning to answer charges of breach of the peace.

It is expected that Joseph Ettor, leader of the I. W. W., will arrive in Bridgeport tomorrow. National labor leaders are gathering here to direct the fight of the employes of the big automobile factory.

In a formal statement today Mayor Wilson said:

"Bridgeport has suffered during the past few weeks on account of the reports which have gone out all over the country that industrial conditions here were in an unsettled state. This, we here in Bridgeport, know to be untrue. The need of a large number of skilled mechanics is great, and I dislike to see anything happen which would in any way deter such from coming to our city, as it would mean a tremendous handicap to our industries and to the development of the city as a whole."

The Mayor added that he did not believe open-air meetings were the proper places to settle differences, as they tended to unsettle the peace of the community, and he would prohibit them on the ground of public policy. Mayor Wilson is the Lieutenant Governor of the State, and at the present time is acting Governor in the absence of Governor Holcomb, who is at Block Island.

MASSENA STRIKE SETTLED.

New State Industrial Commission Brings About an Agreement.

ALBANY, Aug. 5.—Official announcement was made tonight by the new State Industrial Commission that the strike of employes of the Massena plant of the Aluminum Company of America, during the early stages of which there was so much rioting that three companies of the National Guard were called out by the Governor, was closed today.

The employes accepted the company's offer of 10 cents a day increase, and the last of the strikers holding out returned to work. Third Deputy Commissioner William C. Rogers, head of the Bureau of Mediation and Arbitration, conducted the negotiations for the State

MAIL STRIKERS HELD.

Judge Veeder in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, yesterday held John F. Byrne, John Murray, and Peter Debbs, striking mail car drivers, in bail of $500 each. The men were accused by Post Office Inspector Crowell of a conspiracy against the United States to interfere with the transfer of the mails. They will have a further hearing on Aug. 19.

Meanwhile United States Marshal James M. Power and his deputies are looking for four more who struck. The strike followed the demotion of Byrne, who was Superintendent of the mail contractors' garage. There were no serious delays yesterday, and the Post Office authorities regard the strike as over.

DU PONTS GIVE 8-HOUR DAY.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 5.—Approximately 50,000 employes of the du Pont Powder Company were notified today that their working day would be reduced to eight hours and that the wages would remain the same as they now receive for ten hours. An order to this effect was posted last night at the Brandywine plant of the company, and today it was extended to plants throughout the country. The new schedule will start tomorrow in some of the plants, and by Sept. 15 it will be in effect universally.

The reduction in hours will apply to employes in all departments of the company. It was estimated by officials that the new order would increase the operating expenses about one-third.

1,500 GO ON STRIKE.

Remington Workers at Ilion Expect Early Settlement.

UTICA, Aug. 5.—At a meeting this afternoon in Ilion, which was attended by about 1,500 piece workers in the Remington arms plant, a general strike of all piece workers was declared, and it was decided to ask those who have remained at work to refuse to return to work in the morning.

There has been no disorder and no indication of any. The striking men say that they do not want the interference of any outsiders and that they will not tolerate it. They believe that they can deal with the situation themselves, and they expect a settlement of the whole matter before the end of the week.

8-HOUR DAY OR STRIKE.

William H. Johnston, President of the International Association of Machinists, came to New York yesterday from Washington and authorized strikes in all machine shops in New York City which refuse the eight-hour day. He left the city last night for Hartford, Conn., where he will preside at a meeting of the union's organizers, who have been busy in New England for the past three months in preparation for a campaign for the eight-hour day.

J. J. Keppler, Vice President of the machinists and director of the campaign for an eight-hour day, presided at a meeting of 500 machinists employed in the plant of J. H. Williams & Co. of Brooklyn yesterday, after which it was announced that the men had decided to strike if ordered to do so. Last night the 100 die sinkers and drop forgers employed at the Williams plant met and announced they would stand by the machinists. J. H. Williams said last night that no demands had been made upon him and that he had advised his men to have a talk with him before going on strike.

The Williams firm is a sub-contractor for the E. W. Bliss Company in Brooklyn, makers of torpedoes. E. J. Deering, business agent for Local 15 of the Machinists' Union, said last night that the proposed strike at the Bliss plant had not been abandoned and that the men would go out within a few days if the increase in wages demanded was not granted. Deering said he had had a conference with officials of A. Schrader's Son, Inc., 783 Atlantic Avenue, makers of submarine armor, and that the company had agreed to a graduating scale of hours that would mean an eight-hour day by May, 1916. Deering said he expected an agreement would be reached which would prevent a strike.

At the offices of the machinists, 116 Nassau Street, it was said that several big shops in New York had posted notices granting concessions to the machinists.

Killed by Fall of Girder.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 5.—Christopher Taylor of Paterson, nephew of Street Commissioner Taylor of Paterson, was killed this afternoon in a partly completed school in this city. An iron girder on which he was sitting gave way and he fell to the concrete floor, crushing his skull. Taylor was Superintendent of Construction for the A. J. Christopher Company of Paterson. He leaves a wife and two children, who live in Beckwith Street, Paterson.

ARMENIAN HORRORS GROW.

Massacres Greater Than Under Abdul Hamid, London Paper Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 6.The Daily Chronicle says:

"A tragic episode of the war in the East is the wholesale massacre of the Armenians in the eastern vilayets of Asia Minor by the Turks and Kurds. Regarding the terrible scale of these massacres, greater than any which occurred under Abdul Hamid, there is now no room for doubt, and the statements made on the subject last week by Lord Bryce in the House of Lords were officially corroborated by Lord Crewe.

"In certain cases the Armenians have defended themselves successfully. At the town of State, for instance, to which Enver Pasha sent his brother-in-law with a commission of extermination, the victims rose after the massacres had begun, barricaded the Armenian quarter, and held out against the Turkish siege for four weeks until relieved by the advent of the Russian army. But with this and some similar exceptions they have been powerless. Tens and probably hundreds of thousands have been butchered, and great numbers more have been deported by road hundreds of miles to Western Anatolia under conditions amounting to slow extermination.

"The Germans, who are masters of the Central Ottoman Administration, have to their everlasting shame not only permitted, but rather encouraged these horrors. The allied powers have notified the Turkish officials that they will hold them personally responsible, and at this stage they can do no more. There is perhaps room for an effective American protest, though we have not yet heard of one."

The Chronicle concludes by making an appeal to British private charity, citing the following terrible account of ruin and devastation following the Turkish massacres in Northeastern Armenia, telegraphed by Ayvadian, the Archbishop of Van, and Aram, the Governor of Van, to the honorary secretary of the Armenian Red Cross and Refugee Fund:

"Besides Van, the provinces of Chatakh, Moks, Sparkert, Mamertakh, and Khizan are saved. The rest are ruined and devastated. Men, women, and children are massacred. Twenty thousand people are homeless. Famine and infectious disease prevail. Many volunteers are sick and wounded. Notwithstanding assistance from the Russian Government and the Armenians in the Caucasus, there is great want of doctors, drugs, ambulances, and food. The situation in Bitlis, Moush, and Diarbekir is terrible. We beg urgently for immediate help."

Prison Reform—How? When? Why?

THE STORY OF "CANADA BLACKIE"

By ANNE P. L. FIELD

With an Introduction by

Thomas Mott Osborne

Cloth, 8vo. $1.00

Describes an absolute face-about from wrong to right in the spirit of a desperate criminal. Through Mr. Osborne's simple kindness and his faith in a fellow human, this notorious convict became a strong influence for good to his fellow-prisoners, and an organizer of their welfare. These remarkable letters from the convict himself tell the story, full of direct inspiration to all who are earnest in the great cause of Prison-Reform.

POLICE GET NO CLUE TO KINDRED'S PAST

Bank Book Shows $9,000 Deposited, but Gives No Hint of Whence It Came.

HERMIT WHEN NOT AT WORK

Rode in Big Auto Alone, Had Sideboard but No Guests, and Women Did Not "Interest" Him.

Detectives searching the apartment at 560 West 168d Street, where Edward C. Kindred had lived for two years till he disappeared on Wednesday with the $22,119.70 pay roll of Booth & Flinn, were amazed yesterday to find a bank book showing that this $150-a-month employe had deposited more than $9,000 in cash in the Bank of Washington Heights within twenty months.

Not a scrap of paper was found to indicate where any of this money came from, nor was there any evidence to corroborate the statement of Kindred to his employers that he had $800 a month from an estate, which he mentioned to explain his purchase of a touring car. Booth & Flinn officials say Kindred's accounts are correct and that he never got a penny beyond his salary previous to the robbery.

The police find the bank deposits of peculiar interest. Every deposit was in cash, except two, one check for $200 and another for $42. A sheaf of canceled checks was found with the bank book. Most of them were payable to Kindred in person, but a few were given to tradesmen for small bills.

Kindred opened his account on Oct. 20, 1913, fourteen months after Booth & Flinn hired him. From then to Nov. 15, he deposited $781.75. His largest deposits were between March 9 and April 18, 1914, when in forty days he put in $3,806.22. On April 18, he made one deposit of $2,500. On June 19, this year there was a deposit of $500.

In addition to the big touring car the police found that Kindred had a runabout, which he kept at Grant's garage, 688 West 158th Street. The larger car, he stored at Wright's garage, at 158th Street and Audubon Avenue. There is no bank check to show from whom he bought either car. One check was for $550 to pay for an automatic piano, which was in his room.

Kindred's heaviest withdrawals from his bank were between April 18 and June 9, 1914, when he took out $2,843.23. From that date to Aug. 20 he withdrew $1,485.87, and from then to Dec. 27 $1,-888.52. When his account was last balanced, in July, he had only $10.18 in bank.

"Kindred is a man of mystery," said Detective Captain William Deevey. "His mode of life and habits were apparently the best, and yet we cannot find that he ever had a close or cofidential friend. His acquaintances all speak of him as a model man, genial, generous, and sociable, but none recalls that he ever invited any one to his rooms or was ever seen with either men or women, except sometimes he would take a fellow-worker or two uptown in his car. On one such occasion two office acquaintances were taken into Kindred's rooms. He produced drinks and cigars, which he had in abundance, and treated his visitors, but abstained himself. None knew anything of his affairs, past or recent.

"He paid $30 a month for his apartment, and was almost a recluse at times. It was customary for him to go uptown in his automobile, buy food at a store, take it home and cook his own dinner. In good weather Kindred would take his car out, occasionally returning late. On none of these trips was he known to have a companion, although his car easily seats five persons. Like everything else connected with his life, it is a mystery why he wanted such a large car. Generally Kindred was in his rooms nights, and in Winter went to bed early, sometimes by 7 o'clock.

"Inquiries show that he did not drink, smoke, or visit night resorts, and we find no evidence that he gambled or speculated. And although he was not known to have visitors in his rooms, he had a well-stocked sideboard of liquors and cigars. Not a thing was found to indicate anything of his life, not even a letter from a friend or a relative."

Kindred was the timekeeper in the subway tunnels under the East River, and pay days went to the office to assist in making up the pay roll. Thus he became known to most of the employes. He never talked about himself, and when asked to meet people declined all invitations, although he seemed socially inclined. When asked once why he did not marry he replied: "Women do not interest me."

An accident insurance policy in his effects contains a clause providing for payment "to the executor or the administrator of my estate."

The authorities of San Francisco and Oakland, Cal., have been requested to look up his career there, where he was supposed to have lived before coming here five years ago. All steamers leaving here have been watched, as have the railway and ferry stations.

Members of the firm and some of his acquaintances are still doubtful that Kindred committed the robbery. They think he may have been the victim of highwaymen. The faith of the firm in Kindred's honesty is due to the fact that on many occasions he had been trusted with from $1,000 to $7,000.

OSBORNE IN COURT TODAY.

Warden to Prosecute Agent of Prisons Superintendent.

OSSINING, Aug. 5.—Warden Osborne's assault charge against Prison Superintendent Riley's confidential agent, Patrick H. McDonald, will come up this morning before Magistrate L. N. Valentine. McDonald, with whom the Warden had a fight on the railroad station platform on the day of Becker's execution, was in Ossining conferring with lawyers today. He will be represented by Benjamin Fagan. Warden Osborne will be represented by Joseph A. Greene.

The sympathy of the prisoners in Sing Sing is plainly with Warden Osborne, whom they call "the boss," in the present controversy with Superintendent Riley. It is believed that if Osborne is replaced a new Warden will find them in ugly mood on his arrival.

Two of the trusties, engaged in cleaning the streets and gutters adjacent to the prison, were seen today to be wearing the latest style in glasses—tortoise rimmed and with frames of the same material running back to the ears. One of the men was wearing a "sport" cap and tan shoes and the other wore the regulation gray shirt and trousers and black shoes and was hatless. There was no keeper near the men, but they were being watched by a guard in the tower house on top of the wall, about fifty feet away.

MOTIONS IN TESLA SUIT.

Plaintiff Asks That Parts of Marconi Answer Be Stricken Out.

In the suit brought by the Nikola Tesla Company for the annulment of the patent owned by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America and for infringement of the Tesla patent, Judge Augustus N. Hand, sitting in the Federal District Court, yesterday heard arguments on technical motions based on the pleadings. The Tesla Company asked Judge Hand to order several paragraphs stricken from the defendant company's answer to the complaint.

In the first paragraph objected to the plaintiff asked for the elimination of a letter in which it was asserted that the validity of the Marconi invention was sustained by Judge Van Vechten Veeder in the infringement suit against the National Signaling Company. Two other paragraphs alleged that the complaint does not set forth sufficient facts to indicate that the defendant's patent in any way interfered with the plaintiff's patent and the remaining six paragraphs objected to contained the usual allegations to be found in infringement suits brought under section 4918 of the United States Revised Statutes.

In support of the motions it was contended that Tesla was the first inventor of the patent in suit and the only issues to be decided were priority of invention and whether the patent covered the infringement.

For the Marconi Company it was urged that the paragraphs objected to were responsive and material as answers to the bill, and as to the assertions in the letter, it was explained that Judge Veeder, before he rendered his decision, considered the question as to whether or not the Tesla patent anticipated the Marconi patent and had found that it did not because the inventions were not the same.

At the conclusion of the argument Judge Hand reserved decision.

Brooklyn Mason Is Missing.

Charles Fity has asked the police to look for his father, Frank Fity, who disappeared from his home at 417 Seventy-third Street, Brooklyn, last Monday. Mr. Fity is in the hardware business in Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn. His relatives believe he wandered away while suffering from temporary insanity. He is 52 years old, of good build, weighs 160 pounds, and is about five feet eight inches tall. His hair is gray and rather abundant, and his mustache is black. When he left home Mr. Fity wore a suit of mixed gray material with a Masonic emblem in the button hole.

LINCOLN CONFESSES HE IS A GERMAN SPY

Denies British Consul's Charge That He Is Forger and Fugitive from Justice.

HEARING PUT OFF TO AUG. 19

Prisoner Alleges Plot to Get Him Back in England—Says He Was Member of Parliament.

Ignatius Timothy Tribich Lincoln, who was arrested at 518 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, on Wednesday night by United States Marshal James M. Power and Deputy United States Marshal George R. Proctor at the instigation of Hugo Alexander Ford, British Consul in Manhattan, admitted yesterday that he was a German spy when arraigned before Judge Van Vechten Veeder in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, charged with being a fugitive from justice from England.

Lincoln revealed more about himself. He said he was a former member of the British Parliament, an ordained English clergyman, and a naturalized citizen of England. When he was told that he was wanted in England to answer charges of forgery he branded the charges as false and a subterfuge to get him back to Great Britain, in which event, he declared, he had no doubt he would be tried as a spy and executed. Lincoln had as his attorney Morris Cukor and Alfred E. Schwabach of Manhattan.

Judge Veeder granted the motion of the attorney for the British Consul, E. H. Loughlin, to adjourn the hearing until Aug. 19, to give the British authorities time to get depositions from England to support the charges of forgery. Lincoln was taken back to the Raymond Street jail. If Judge Veeder upholds the charge that Lincoln is a fugitive from justice in England the British authorities will arrange for his extradition.

In the papers filed with the complaint of the British Consul and now in the possession of United States District Attorney Melville J. France in Brooklyn are mentioned three charges of alleged forgery. One is that Lincoln forged a paper whereby Benjamin Seebohn Rowntree purported to guarantee to John Goldstein, trading as J. Grainger, £750, with interest at 7 per cent., due Dec. 1, 1914. Another charge is the forgery of a signature in a bill of exchange, the sum involved being £200. The third charge alleges that Lincoln forged another name to a check for £150. The three sums amount to £1,100.

CONVICTED BY TORN SUIT.

Captured Shred of Cloth Fits Gap in Bandit's Trousers.

A piece of blue serge torn from the seat of his trousers constituted the most important bit of evidence in the trial of Joseph Berger of 1,205 Fifth Avenue for highway robbery before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday. The patch of cloth fitted into a gap in Berger's trousers, and the jury was convinced that Berger was the man who participated in the attack on Albert E. Hiltpold, cashier of the Cupples Envelope Company of 7 Laight Street on May 8.

Hiltpold was ascending the stairs to the office of his company when Berger and another man knocked him down. One of them seized a bag containing $1,370 which Hiltpold had just drawn from the bank, but in the scuffle the bag was dropped and recovered by Hiltpold, who also succeeded in grabbing one of his assailants by the trousers and ripping out a piece of cloth, which at the trial yesterday served as a means of identification.

After the jury returned its verdict of guilty yesterday, Judge Malone sentenced Berger to three years in Sing Sing.

STOP FRAUD ON TEACHERS.

Promoter Confesses Plan to Cheat Porto Rican Educators.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—A scheme for exacting contributions of $2 each from teachers in Porto Rico schools on the pretext of getting them employment in United States schools is disclosed in a fraud order just issued by the Postmaster General against the "The Great Agency" and "H. N. Barcel," 141-145 West Thirty-sixth Street, New York City. A memorandum by W. H. Lamar, Solicitor of the Post Office Department, upon which the issuance of the fraud order was based, says:

"One J. M. Paradis of San German, Porto Rico, has assumed the names given above, and under those names has sent out letters to school teachers in Porto Rico in which they are advised that nine States of the Union have made the teaching of the Spanish language in all their schools obligatory; that three or four thousand teachers are required for the teaching of this language in such schools; that The Great Agency and H. N. Barcel have contracted with these States to furnish the required teachers; that no examination is required provided the addressee has credentials to the effect that he has had two years' in high school; that the salaries vary between $75 and $90 per month, and that as an evidence of good faith the addressee, if he desires one of the positions referred to, must forward to The Great Agency or H. N. Barcel the sum of $2.

"These pretenses and representations were found to be without foundation, and after a thorough investigation of the matter Inspector Hathaway on July 16, 1915, caused the arrest at San German, Porto Rico, of J. M. Paradis, who was identified as the promoter of the scheme. After his arrest Paradis confessed that the purpose of the scheme was to obtain $2 from various teachers in Porto Rico and convert the same to his own use and that the representations made for this purpose were all false and fraudulent."

FROTHINGHAM LOSES SON.

Magistrate's Little Boy Drowned While Playing at Lake George.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 5.—While at play this morning on the shore of Lake George at Bolton Landing, James, the 6-year-old son of City Magistrate and Mrs. E. D. Frothingham of New York, fell into the water and was drowned.

The boy was sojourning with his aunt, Mrs. William Emerson of Stillwater, at a cottage near by. He was not seen to fall into the lake, but his lifeless body was discovered soon after his disappearance was noted by his tutor, Donald Fen, who was making ready for a motor-boat ride and had left the child on the shore to play. Fen dived into the water and recovered the body.

Magistrate Frothingham received a telegram while holding court in Part II. of the Harlem Court yesterday, telling of the drowning of his son. He got Magistrate Ten Eyck in Part I. to attend to his cases for him, and left at once for Lake George.

NEW MEN'S ANTI LEAGUE.

Prominent Men in New Jersey Open Headquarters in Newark.

A new Men's Anti-Suffrage League of New Jersey was organized yesterday at Newark, and is to have in its membership prominent men from every county in the State. Colonel William Libbey of Princeton is the President, Walter C. Ellis of East Orange Secretary, and John C. Eisele of Newark Treasurer.

The State Committee, headed by former Chancellor William J. Magie, has among its members Garret A. Hobart, son of the former Vice President; W. F. Magie, Dean of Princeton University; Richard Stockton, and Judge Huston Dixon of Trenton; Dr. William Perry Watson, James W. Gopsill, and Rynier Wortendyke of Jersey City among others.

A suite of offices has been opened in the Wiss Building, 665 Broad Street, Newark, from where a vigorous campaign against votes for women will be waged.

and Advertising

SOME people have said that our advertising is good. If that be the case, it is simply because Coca-Cola's own deliciousness has been the inspiration.

Advertising did not "make" Coca-Cola—goodness and deliciousness are its foundation stones and advertising is but the message that carries the news of this deliciousness to every nook and corner of this great country.

Advertising has let people know why Coca-Cola should be popular—but it has been Coca-Cola itself that has proved to all why it is popular.

This is no denial of the part advertising has played in our success—but it is placing credit to advertising where it belongs and credit to quality where it belongs. While we are proud that our advertising has pleased, there is another feature of it that arouses a more serious and earnest pride.

We are proud of our advertising—because it is more than pretty or strong or effective; it is truth-telling advertising. What we say of Coca-Cola in our advertisements is based absolutely on what Coca-Cola is.

And frankly—if the advertising has played the part we think it has in making Coca-Cola known, it is because of this very truthfulness of our printed words.

What has been said has been verified by Cola-Cola itself—always. Such advertising and such a product in combination are certain to produce complete satisfaction in the purchaser's mind. It is this kind of satisfaction that has made people buy Coca-Cola and buy again.

Just one single glass of Coca-Cola will tell you all we mean when we say that advertising has advertised what Coca-Cola has verified. This we call successful advertising.

Our Free Booklet—"The Romance of Coca-Cola" is interesting and attractive—send for it.

Demand the genuine by full name—nicknames encourage substitution.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, AUG. 6, 1915.

STATE BUDGET REFORM.

The Constitutional Convention has received a minority report disapproving the amendment giving the Governor power to propose a budget for the Legislature to act upon. However, the disapproval extends to details only. The principle of budget reform is not condemned. It is still possible to believe, therefore, since the present way of making the budget is the worst possible, that it is better that any proposal should succeed than that all proposals should fail. There is no necessity that jealousy of prerogative between the Legislature and the Governor should cause failure of action. The majority report merely gives the Governor power of initiative. He is allowed to propose, but the Legislature will dispose. It might even be argued that the power of the Governor is lessened, rather than increased, his new initiative being offset by the loss of the present power to veto items after the Legislature has passed them. That power is in some degree transferred to the Legislature, which loses its initiative, but gains the power to make its action effective in reducing or omitting items, without revision by the Governor. It is plain how much easier and better it is for the Governor to prepare the budget instead of the Legislature. The Governor can be making preparations for his action throughout the year, and can give the final touches during comparatively idle months. The Legislature cannot conveniently be assembled for the making of the budget, and if the work were to be intrusted to a committee its action could not be final without revision by the Legislature. That would be too much like the present system, which has worked so badly.

The objection of the minority that the power of the purse should be kept with the representatives of the people is not well taken. In the first place the power of the purse is left with the Legislature. The Governor cannot alone make any appropriation, and the Legislature can work its will with what the Governor proposes. The redistribution of functions rather alters than reduces the functions of either. The only loss of power is that now possessed by the wirepullers and logrollers who assume the initiative without responsibility either to the people or to party control. In the second place the Governor is elective, nearer to the people, and more responsible than the Legislature. The action of the Governor is undivided and personal. It must be exercised in a manner which cannot be concealed, and can be either punished or approved as the action deserves. On the other hand the responsibility of the Legislature is a cloak for the irresponsibility of its members. Who knows who is responsible for the inclusion of the three million dollars which the Governor cut out of the last budget, without the slightest public protest or damage, so far as known? Whoever heard of any punishment of any legislator for causing the enactment of improper appropriations? On the other hand, imagine how much better the Governor could deal with the 169 departments which now cajole and bamboozle the Legislature, engineering extravagance, although the Governor may be trying to give an economical administration.

The majority report argues from the growth of expenses disproportionately to the growth of population. In thirty years the expenses have grown sixfold, while population has less than doubled. The per capita cost of government has doubled, while the population has grown by only half. It is necessary to call a halt on such growth of burdens, so clearly traceable at best to mismanagement almost beyond description or belief, and, there is reason to fear, to something worse. Thus Senator WAGNER, who makes the minority report, when he was denouncing the imposition of the direct tax, said: "Any one who "would take the trouble to analyze "the present supply bill will surely "agree with us that 60 per cent. of "the items contained therein should be "disallowed." That is an example of budget making by the Legislature as described by the Senator who now opposes the transfer of the initiative to the Governor. On the Republican side of the Legislature Senator BROWN, condemning the financial action of the last Legislature, prophesied that "if the State maintains "the different branches of public service to which it is thus committed "the State budget will, under strictly "economical administration, reach "$70,000,000, and probably $75,000,000, within five years." Not even the majority report is stronger than those expressions in favor of budget reform. That they were made for another purpose only strengthens their significance. As these are representative Democratic and Republican spokesmen, why not make it unanimous?

THE FALL OF WARSAW.

Warsaw, one of the most important cities of Eastern Europe, rich in steel and iron manufactures and the chief stronghold for the defense of Poland, is a great prize for the Germans. It is more than one-third of the way from Berlin to Petrograd. The taking of it was a valorous feat of arms, a triumph of German strategy and sheer doggedness. Three efforts had failed. Last October, in the third month of the war, the fall of Warsaw was all but foregone, and then the Russians at one stroke drove the invaders back into their own country, moving them 134 miles in 18 days. Having done this the Russians retired to Warsaw, the Germans following, and the reason the Russians retired instead of trying either to keep the enemy out of Poland or invade his country was that the defense of Poland at all, against the Germans, was not physically feasible.

Poland, as you can see by the map, thrusts itself into Germany like a fist in a pillow, and, therefore, to defend the Polish frontier against Germany would have required the Russians to maintain a line dangerously exposed to crushing pressure from several directions at once. To defend Warsaw the same formation was required, only much less exaggerated, and that was strategically difficult from the beginning, and in the end became an untenable position. It is doubtful, indeed, whether Russia's military plans ever contemplated anything in the nature of a final defense of Warsaw.

But the quarry escaped. It is a choice which kind of military genius to admire more, that which won Warsaw or that which accomplished its evacuation in so orderly and thoughtful a way. The Russian forces appear to have been saved almost if not quite intact. That was an achievement alone. But the banks, the courts, the university, even the management of the State theatres, were all transferred away. The precious railroad equipment and the machinery shops were saved.

The Germans for a fortnight past evidently have known that Grand Duke NICHOLAS was eluding them, was turning defeat into a characteristic Russian event, and were much more concerned about cutting off his retreat than in taking Warsaw. He had three railways by which to retreat, one leading in a southeasterly direction through Ivangorod and Lublin, one in an easterly direction through Brest-Litovsk, and one in a northeasterly direction straight away to Petrograd. Preparations to abandon Warsaw were begun while yet all three ways were open. The Germans thereupon put forth their utmost energy to intercept the movement. They succeeded only last week in reaching the southeasterly road. The most desperate fighting in the last few days has been to the northeast of Warsaw, where evidently the Germans were determined to break the northeasterly road. They were gallantly resisted and although they made headway it was too late. The third road, leading east through Brest-Litovsk, was never in danger.

The taking of Warsaw was at last a job of minor importance. The heroes of the Polish campaign had been General VON MACKENSEN, the southern jaw, and General VON HINDENBURG, the northern one, but it was Prince LEOPOLD of Bavaria who captured Warsaw. While the Bavarian troops were entering the Polish capital, General VON MACKENSEN was hammering away still at Ivangorod, fifty miles south, seeking there to make the crossing of the Vistula which the Germans disastrously failed to make last October. The fierce character of the fighting at that point, with Warsaw already lost, shows only how obstinately the Russians give way.

In the meantime, events of high strategic importance, probably under General VON HINDENBURG'S direction, are taking place away to the northeast, where the Germans have invaded Courland with very large forces, and are threatening to get control of the railroads and other means of communication between interior Russia and the second most important Baltic seaport, which is Riga. It is reported that the Russians are preparing to abandon Riga as they have abandoned Warsaw. Riga would be in some respects, perhaps in all, the greater sacrifice. It is only 366 miles from Petrograd, and the centre of the export trade of northwestern Russia.

At the same time a German force of unknown strength appears to be moving dangerously toward Dvinsk, intending to gain the Vilna-Petrograd railroad at a point about midway between Warsaw and Petrograd. That is striking deep. For Grand Duke NICHOLAS it is like walking backward into a trap. It might be worse for him to lose control of the railroad at that point than sooner to have lost his northeasterly outlet from Warsaw, which he defended so successfully until the last. For the Germans to succeed in this move might seriously embarrass him, both in retreat and in defense. These operations largely account for the fact that no great battle was fought at Warsaw.

If the Germans are successful in their new campaign in this field, a campaign which suddenly detracts from the interest of that which has culminated in the fall of Warsaw, it would seem impossible for the Russians to establish or hold what was supposed to be their second line of defense from Riga south through Brest-Litovsk, eliminating the huge salient or loop around Warsaw. Also, if the German campaign in the Baltic provinces of Russia assumes the proportions now suggested, the fall of Warsaw may not mean the re-transfer of a vast German force to the western front in France and Flanders. Evidently Germany intends to carry the war into Russia.

GERMANY'S UNBLOCKADED PORTS

It is not open to the United States to declare the British blockade of Germany not binding because the blockade does not extend to the Baltic ports of the empire. It is an established principle of law that the blockade to be binding must be effective; it must also be maintained impartially against all countries. In our note of March 30 we pointed out to Great Britain that the Scandinavian and Danish ports, so far as the actual enforcement of the Order in Council is concerned, are free to carry on trade with German Baltic ports, although it is an essential element of blockade that it bear with equal severity on all neutrals.

The point was not pressed, it is not likely to be pressed. That argument, like a weapon with a double edge, is one to be employed with great wariness, lest it do more harm to the user than to his opponent. Great Britain does not blockade the Baltic ports of Germany because she cannot. We did not blockade the Texas port of Brownsville against Mexico and other neutral nations because we could not. The waters of the Rio Grande are not, like those of the Baltic, important for navigation, but the principle is the same. In fact, the Mexican port of Matamoros was used during the civil war by merchant adventurers intending an evasion of our blockade. We took measures against them, as in the case of the Peterhof, by capture and condemnation of the contraband part of the cargo. But our blockade of the Confederate States was respected as binding, and therefore lawful, notwithstanding the fact that it left open a commercial water route to a Confederate port through the nearby neutral port of Matamoros.

THE HUMBLE INDIVIDUAL.

The Interests are a callous and brutal lot, and they are quite soulless. All they look out for is their pecuniary profit, and they oppose or support a public man or a political principle as it threatens or favors their welfare. Questions which do not affect this are of no importance to them, and, therefore, they do not bother about aligning on such questions. These are axioms. Therefore we do not follow Mr. BRYAN'S observations to the newspaper reporters in Portland, Ore., where he stopped the other day to deliver a lecture. He was "exceedingly bitter toward those newspapers" which oppose him, and he said:

> I am not vain enough to believe that they are opposed to me personally, for I am but a most humble individual. But I happen to stand for certain political principles that are in conflict with the views and the wishes of the grasping plutocrats. For that reason the plutocratic press is opposed to me.

And he "added that the same Interests that opposed him twenty years "ago are opposing him now." At first all this seems easy to understand, but it gets more difficult as you go on. Naturally the Interests opposed him in 1896, for he then advocated the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, and that would have hurt their pockets; also everybody else's pocket, though that is beside the question. They opposed him in 1900, for he then advocated abandoning the Philippines, which they wished to loot and rob and "exploit"; Mr. BRYAN knows how they have looted and "exploited" the islands ever since. Afterward they opposed him because he advocated Government ownership. All this is easy to understand.

But now Mr. BRYAN is campaigning for peace, which somebody unnamed is threatening. Since the Interests have no rancor against anything that does not menace their pocketbooks, why should they inspire the Plutocratic Press to attack him? They are not opposed to me personally, for I am a most humble individual." It is his principles that conflict with the aims "of the grasping plutocrats," and just now he has no principle in stock but the principle that Americans should give up the right to use the public road to Europe, so as to avoid being assaulted. How this touches the pocketbooks of the Grasping Plutocrats so nearly as to make them snap the whip over the Plutocratic Press and send it barking about Mr. BRYAN'S calves is hard to see. Do they want war? War does not seem to be helping the Grasping Plutocrats of Germany and France very much, and the mere breath of it, blown across the ocean, closed our Stock Exchange for four months. A hint of it here now and then sends prices tumbling; for a year men have been cautious about spending money. Can the Interests be so desirous of deepening and widening this state of things that, with no rancor against a most humble individual they yet view with anger his attempt to save their pockets, and they set their tool, the Plutocratic Press, assailing him again?

Somebody, surely, wants war. After Mr. BRYAN got through with his talk with the reporters he delivered his lecture, and in it he renewed his proposal that a vote be taken on war, and that if it be declared "those of "the jingo press, who seem to want it "the worst," be sent first to the firing line. The Plutocratic Press, then, is the Jingo Press; the plutocrats are the jingoes; the plutocrat-jingoes are those who have been assailing Mr. BRYAN for twenty years; send them at once to the firing line and wipe them out at a volley. Then only good people will be left, those who do not oppose Mr. BRYAN, and it will be easy to take mankind down from the cross of gold.

Before the referendum is taken Mr. BRYAN should make the work of the recruiting officers easy by designating those jingo and plutocratic newspapers which are advocating war. If he cannot find any he should name those which do not deprecate war, do not preach against war, do not look upon war with repulsion in any case except as the last resort. If he cannot find many he should find at least one. Let him go over the list of the newspapers of the country, find just one newspaper which wants war, and proclaim its name. It is a patriotic duty, for when war comes it will save the War Department from losing time in making the search. He has the information which nobody else has, and it is his duty to give it to the public at once. If war comes the Government will have no time to spend in searching haystacks for needles. Mr. BRYAN will not have to search; he knows now, though nobody else does, the names of the newspapers that are urging war. True, he is "but a most humble individual"; there has been none humbler since Chadband, Pecksniff, and Uriah Heep; perhaps not since Blifil. But humble as he is, he has achieved a celebrity which may be distasteful to him, but is a fact, and an announcement by him, giving the names, would be instantly heard throughout the nation. Let him pillory them; they deserve it; let him press this crown of thorns upon their brows and crucify the men of blood upon a cross of shame.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

This Summer Compared With Others.

Present weather bulks so large in our interests and our sensations, in our joys and our sorrows, that everybody is constantly tempted to see the unusual in temperatures and precipitations which are not so in reality and would not seem so were it not for the fact that, of all recollections, those in regard to the weather of the past are the most inaccurate and deceptive.

There are, of course, dry and wet Summers, and Winters that are not so cold as other Winters, but trustworthy records do not go back anything like far enough to show any measurable changes in climate. Every "oldest inhabitant" is sure that the weather was different when he was a boy, but he hasn't any documents to prove it, and the available evidence is all against him. The geologist alone has a right to talk about real climatic changes.

After propounding and admitting those things, however, we can all declare, honestly enough, since we all remark it, that this is a remarkable Summer. So far it has brought to the eastern part of the country only one real "hot spell"—the one from which New York is just recovering—and even that one was trying to endurance not because any of what may be called the weather components were unusual for the season, but because there happened for several days to come together heat, humidity, and still air. Not one of the three would have attracted any particular attention had both, or even one, of the other two been absent.

But it is true that the Summer has brought more than the ordinary amount of rainfall—by no means as much more as memories of the Summer when we had a water famine, or at least the threat of one, tend to make us think—but still enough to produce several fairly rare phenomena. At this time of year it is customary for all lawns not generously refreshed with a hose to be in a bad way, and for the leaves on the park trees to be showing signs of wear in both color and texture. Now the grass and the trees look as if it were June, and out in the country farmers have been able to do in July and August plowing that they commonly have to defer till the Fall rains soften the baked ground.

What the Winter will be after such a Summer nobody knows, and only false weather prophets pretend to tell. The scientific meteorologists do not attempt long-distance prediction at the present stage of their art, and they do not expect the weather to average itself within any definite or specified time.

Waging a War of Attrition.

Really notable among the explanatory and expository war narratives that have been sent out under official sanction, though unsigned, was the one that came from France Wednesday night for publication yesterday morning. It was sufficiently described as "a statement from unquestionable authority," and its evident object was to answer the question so often and so impatiently asked in recent weeks—Why is it that the French and English are not attacking the German lines more effectively?

This "unquestionable authority" declared, and plausibly enough, at least for friends of the Entente Allies, that the attacks have been continuous and that, though the gain of ground has been small, they have not been without results. With both sides in trenches elaborate enough to be called fortresses, and with both provided with heavy artillery trained ready to fire on every square yard in the narrow space between the two lines, battles and victories of the old-fashioned sort have become practically impossible. Aeroplanes and searchlights have almost put an end to the hope of surprising the enemy, and every charge on a trench is a truly desperate venture for the men who make it.

Yet such charges have been risked, hundreds of times, as the awful calamity lists too clearly show. The willingness to die and the inability to do anything immediately decisive characterize all the opponents to about the same extent, and the war in that "theatre" has come to be one of attrition, of slow, steady wearing out. The "unquestionable authority" insisted that thus the Allies had accounted for 2,000,000 Germans, killed, wounded, or "demoralized." By demoralization he presumably meant the nervous exhaustion that renders a man useless for further fighting, without a long rest, if ever, but if that exists to any large extent in the German armies, few signs of it are visible to remote observers—as few, certainly, as in those of the French and English.

That the Allies have also suffered heavy losses in carrying out this process of attrition, the "unquestionable authority" frankly admitted, but he insisted that the Germans, with their more definitely limited resources of men and material, could not stand it as long as could their opponents. On the truth of that assertion he staked the outcome of the war. Of course the Germans will say that he is mistaken—if they do not use a harsher word.

Haverstraw Sighs for Cleary.

Its Board of Education being in need of three new members, the people of Haverstraw proceeded on Wednesday to elect them. Incidentally it proceeded to disclose that the long rule there of the "Cleary ring" is still pleasing to a majority of the Haverstravians, the members of that majority evidently having been not at all disturbed by the fact that their leader not long ago narrowly escaped the consequences that would in some towns follow the shooting of an unarmed boy with no excuse except a rage that professed to be drunken.

Equally indifferent were they to the other fact that the same leader has found it convenient not to assist, by returning to Haverstraw, the trial of an indictment found against him for making peculiar uses of large amounts of public money intrusted to him and his henchmen.

Little things like those apparently do not count for much in Haverstraw. At any rate, they did not prevent the election of all three of the Cleary candidates, and in order that defeat might be rendered certain for the few advocates of change and reform by whom the town is troubled, local politicians who formerly professed a noble hatred of the Cleary ring worked on election day openly and vigorously for its representatives.

Several deductions might be drawn from this election. The most interesting of them, perhaps, is that Mr. CLEARY'S return to his familiar scenes and accustomed activities is delayed quite unnecessarily. He has nothing to fear from a jury of that vicinage.

A Meeting at Madison Square.

While passing Twenty-third Street and Madison Avenue my attention was attracted to a group of men who were holding a so-called legalized meeting. Being on my vacation, and having an unlimited amount of time at my disposal, I decided to loiter a few moments and hear what the person who was addressing the meeting had to say.

This demagogue proceeded to attack the laws of God, and scoff and laugh at the laws of this great country, "America." But this was only the beginning, for after his introduction against God and country, he then endeavored to advocate a policy of "Free Love" and did everything in his power to impress upon his listeners the fallacy of holding motherhood in the high esteem we do.

It seems to me that instead of preaching lawlessness and disorder, it would behoove these men to learn to respect this great republic of ours, and act in accordance with the great majority of law-abiding citizens, whose very heads bow in reverence at the mention of the name "America." True, the constitution allows freedom of speech, but the great men who drew up that document never realized for an instant that this power of free speech would ever be used as a cloak to shield men whose one ambition on mother earth appears to be to attack the God who made them and the country they should love. Italian Socialists and War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The funniest of all the canards that have come out in the last twelvemonth is the story cabled from Paris, on the authority of the Giornale d'Italia, which pretends to speak with authority for the Socialist Party in Italy, to the effect that on May 16 a rich Chicago woman tried to "bribe" the Italian Socialists to oppose Italy's entrance into the war. It would be about as reasonable to say that on the same date some one tried to bribe the Kaiser to invade Belgium.

For more than nine months before that time the Italian Socialists, with all but complete unanimity, had been opposing with all their might every effort to drag their country into war on either side. They continued to do so till war was actually declared and a drastic censorship imposed to prevent any further protest. The few men in the party who, earlier in the year, showed an inclination to support the jingo policy were driven out of all positions of trust by the party membership. Many Italian Socialists were fined or imprisoned for their anti-war activity, and not a few gave their lives, being killed by gendarmes and armed thugs who raided Socialist peace demonstrations. Had the Italian Socialist Party been accessible to bribes, it would today be financially strong and morally bankrupt; in fact, it is the reverse. ALGERNON LEE.

Smoking Dangerously.

I believe the street car companies give smokers the right to a certain number of seats in the rear of each car, the proportion being ample when the fact that women do not smoke in the cars is taken into consideration. Recently, in crowded cars, I have seen men standing in the aisles, or between seats in the regular Summer cars, smoking, their lighted cigars or cigarettes directly over the heads of women, hatless or wearing highly inflammable hats, and in filmy, inflammable dresses. Hot ashes or sparks from overhead might easily cause serious injury. Can you not call attention to this danger? L. S. DAVIS.

Baseball at the Beach.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you please tell me why the Police Department allows a couple of dozen lunatics to play ball on a beach where people are sitting so close together there isn't room to move? I went to Rockaway Beach today, sat on the sand, and got hit six times in one hour and had to go home. J. C. M.

MYTHS OF GERMAN BATTLE.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 5, 1915.

The military reviews of the first year of the European war, as they have appeared in a great part of the press, here and abroad, instead of plainly recording the course of events, have dwelt at length and with enthusiasm on two events—the battle of the Marne and the battle before Warsaw, in September and October respectively. Most critics have gone as far as to call them complete German routs. It is not my wish to minimize any of the achievements of the gallant foes opposing Germany's armies in the field. Merely for the sake of correcting wrong impressions, I should like to present in short the version of both events.

On Sept. 2 the French battlefront was firmly established on a line running from Paris along the Marne, over Epernay and Châlons, to Verdun. The original German plan of strategy, to envelop the retreating enemy before his battleline was covered by the two formidable points of vantage on both flanks having failed, it had already been resolved, in the last days of August, to break the enemy's centre and to throw his left wing into Paris and behind the Seine, and his right wing into Verdun, Toul, and Epinal.

The "failure" of the left wing of the German battle line, under the Crown Prince, to keep up the pace of von Kluck's right, which is mostly regarded as responsible for the collapse of the German offensive, and later the suddenly retarded pace of von Kluck's advance, which is frequently taken as indicating a shortage of supplies and ammunition, are fully explained through the change of the German stategic aim, in accordance with which both wings held back while the armies of the centre pushed forward.

On Sept. 3, the latter forced the crossing of the Marne between château Thierry and Châlons, and on Sept. 8, by incessant frontal attacks, had all but pierced the French centre, having already bent it back beyond the line Sézanne-Vitry, when von Kluck's right wing, which then approached the line Meaux-Montmirail, suddenly found itself outflanked by a formidable new army from Paris, which moved rapidly northward and threatened to roll up the entire German battleline from the direction of Compiègne. The appearance of the new army so greatly increased the numerical preponderance of the allied forces that it proved impossible to withdraw sufficient troops from the German centre to extend the battle line to the region of Compiègne without dangerously weakening the centre.

A retreat in order to shorten the battlefront was the only alternative, to which General von Kluck was forced by a skilful strategic move of the enemy, made possible through a great superiority in numbers at his command—but not through defeat in battle. The German General's prompt recognition of the situation and the manner in which he solved the newly arisen problem will secure him the everlasting admiration of friend and foe alike.

Not until the morning of the 9th did General Joffre recognize that von Kluck's attacks had changed into rear-guard actions. He at once gave orders to follow up the retirement of the German right, and simultaneously sent word to General Foch, commanding the French centre, to counter-attack the German advance between Sézanne and Vitry, in co-operation with the forward movement of the French left wing.

Nothing can better illustrate the situation at the French centre at that time than General Foch's reply to his superior's orders: "My left has been forced back, my right is routed. I shall attack with the centre."

Even before General Foch had received the order to attack, General von Bülow's and General von Hausen's opposing armies, having been informed of von Kluck's retreat several hours before it was recognized by General Joffre, had already begun to retire. When the French counter attack came, therefore, it found only rear guards opposing it.

Thus the German retreat was the result of the enemy's superior strategy. The fact that the French were able to bring up superior forces with which to follow out their plan does not lessen their achievement. The ability to do so, after all their reverses, deserves all the more appreciation. But what history will never concede to France is that she has at any time during the first year of this war been able to win a tactical victory, an open field battle, against a German army—the German rout at the Marne is a myth. If there had been a French victory in battle, why is it that every single German unit remained unbroken, that more than two-thirds of the prisoners taken by the French were men left behind in a few field hospitals that could not be removed in time; that their number, as well as the number of cannon and machine guns taken was negligible in comparison with the German booty in the "battle for the invasion of France" on Aug. 24, which the French have not as yet conceded to have been a rout, though this battle was lost by them both strategically through the envelopment of their left wing at Mons tactically through the defeat of their right wing in the open battles at Neufchâteau and Longwy?

In regard to the other myth, that of the "ten days' battle before Warsaw," the truth will sooner or later be revealed as well. I can state on excellent authority that not more than four German army corps participated in the first invasion of Poland in October. The object of this invasion was firstly to threaten the Russian invasion of Galicia in its right flank, and, forcing it back, to re-establish the Austrian campaign on its vital base, Northeast Galicia. After this purpose had been accomplished, the four German army corps, having relieved pressure on the Austrians in Galicia and drawn on themselves the main Russian attack east of Radom, retired, and successfully accomplished the second purpose of their invasion, to draw a great part of the Russian armies after them into the Polish "bag," which the German strategy was to attempt to tie up when the time for the real offensive against Russia should come.

Thus the few troops then available excellently fulfilled the task that had been set for them—to prepare the ground for all further German operations against Russia. The absurdity of the contention that the Germans in October, their main armies then engaged in France, should have expected with 200,000 men to break the Warsaw-Ivangorod line, held by more than a million of the enemy's best troops, is too apparent to deserve any further argument.

Thus, in spite of the contentions of many Allied enthusiasts to the contrary, the operations, rather than battles, of the Marne and before Warsaw have not clouded the record of invincibility in open battle of German arms, unbroken since the days of Napoleon I.

WHY THE SOUTH DOES NOT THINK GERMAN.

Even When It Thinks Cotton It Can See Beyond the Horizon of the Present Conflict—The Nature of Its Political Philosophy.

By JOHN STUART THOMSON,

Jersey City, Aug. 4, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I give testimony in support of your editorial of Aug. 3, 1915, in which you declare that the Germans are mistaken if they dream that our Southern States are not one, with the remainder of this country, in opposition to German militarism? You say: "That the South is thinking German is the wildest of delusions."

I have just returned from a long trip over seven of the Southern States. I diligently sought every class of opinion there regarding our controversies with Germany. Here are my findings, based on the facts, carefully arranged as to proportion.

1. It is true that a few untraveled and speculating Southern editors, for reasons known only to themselves, are cantankerously anti-Allies, but the readers of these journals are not willing that America should attack the Allies and favor Germany.

2. It is true that the South has temporarily lost some of the German cotton trade, but I found no cotton farmer willing to attack the Allies for this reason. They understand that Germany precipitated and desired the war. They are willing that the Allies should embargo the cotton trade with Teuton countries, so as to bring the war to an early close. The South is sane enough to have a due sense of proportion. It realizes that to suffer economically from the British blockade is the lesser wrong, endured for the shorter time, as compared with fighting on the side of Germany against Britain.

3. The cotton farmers told me that the war was a real blessing, as it was compelling them to plant less cotton and more cereals; i. e., they realize that a one-crop people is a weak people financially and agriculturally.

4. The South has more blood of British descent than any section of this country. It is a wild delusion for Germany to expect this "Magna Charta" blood to fight against Britain while Britain is fighting a righteous war for democratic principles.

5. The South realizes that victorious Teutonia would naturally next pick a quarrel with an unarmed America, and the South does not want to enter upon a permanent militaristic career, so as eventually to withstand a challenging Prussianism. The South desires to see the Allies destroy German militarism, as, in so doing, America will be saved from the necessity of accepting the German challenge.

6. The South will never tolerate German militarism established at the mouth of the Orinoco or the Amazon, and the South realizes that this is where a victorious Germany planned to land, ever since Admiral Diederichs challenged Admiral Dewey at Manila in 1898.

7. Southern blood mainly flowed in the personnel which built the Panama Canal. The Panama Canal is the gateway of our South, opening it to the commerce of the world, including the populous Orient with its 700,000,000 cotton buyers. The South, therefore, will not permit that that gateway shall be endangered by a victorious German militarism.

8. Southern blood mainly flows in the personnel of our army and navy. The South is a high-tempered, homogeneous, fighting people. It is a delusion for Germany to believe that the South will bow willingly to German militarism. On the other hand, the South insists on bravely accepting the German challenge enunciated by the Lusitania, Frye, Falaba, Gulflight, Nebraskan and other incidents.

9. It is true that Germany has located propagandists of her Foreign Office throughout the South. I found these hirelings shouting into the teeth of an American gale, when they asked the Southerners: "Why will you not declare war on Britain and compel her to admit American cotton into Germany?" The answer of the South is: "We remember the Lusitania; we remember Diederichs at Manila. We behold Belgium. The Monroe Doctrine was born in the South."

Since I found the South so magnificently loyal to American institutions, as we understand these institutions here in New York and in our great West, may I close with a plea for the needs of the South. Send to our seven fairest and richest States of sun, shower, soil, and mine, Northern capital, Northern libraries, better roads, and Northern forgiveness. A civil war fifty years dead, and settled on the side of political progress, is, indeed, innocuous of political dissension. The history of democracies proves this statement. The new generation in the South knows only one country, with one future—the most radiant under the sun. The North, of necessity, destroyed Southern capital in every way, so as to end the war. I went over the whole long path of Sherman's march. Since the new South is so loyal, we of the North are under equal obligation to recapitalize the South, and unify peace in industry. I met many Northern capitalists traveling in the South, and they all agreed that the South offers great opportunities for Northern capital.

MONEY AND MILITARISM.

The Two Powers Which Threaten the Existence of Democracy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of this morning diverts the judgment of the public from the real issues to be debated at the National Convention of The Friends of Peace, to be held in Chicago on Sept. 5. As I have accepted the invitation of the several organizations which are combined under the name of The Friends of Peace to act as Chairman of the National Committee calling the convention, I shall appreciate your giving to your readers my reasons for action at this time.

I am convinced that the great interests which have found extraordinary profits in furnishing battleships, armor, and powder to the United States and Europe are seriously at work to foist upon the American people a great military institution under the plea of "preparedness." I believe that militarism, if added to the monetary control already exercised, will sooner or later accomplish the downfall of democratic institutions. If there ever was a time when it was necessary to awaken the people to the dangers of militarism it is now. And with so many of the leading papers sympathetic with the interests of these great fortunes, anxious to ridicule, misrepresent, or denounce, this is a difficult task.

The monetary control of the United States by the aggregation of capital centring in New York is now nearly absolute. Directly or indirectly it covers every portion of every State in the Union. I have visited nearly every leading city on the continent within the past five years and my studies lead me to believe that this is absolutely true.

It is to the interest of this control to bring the country under militarism for two reasons. First, with a view to the immense profits in supplying battleships, powder, &c.; second, to keep the people agitated over questions other than those of existing social conditions—if necessary, as in England, where, under Lloyd-George, reforms affecting the wealthy classes had become too acute, to throw the country into war.

I do not hesitate to say that the men behind this attempt to turn the country over to militarism constitute the most unscrupulous, most avaricious, and most dangerous combination that has ever been drawn together on this continent by the hope of plunder.

One would have believed that the prominent men of this country would be universally in favor of peace. However, so strong are the financial powers behind the movement for armament that those having business interests seem afraid to declare themselves. But the Chicago convention will, nevertheless, be an absolute expression of the sentiment of the men and women of America, 95 per cent. of whom are opposed to militarism in its every form. The frightful fate of Europe, whose people have allowed militarism to gain the upper hand, clearly shows what America has to fear if we permit similar influences to gain the ascendency.

If the world is ever to have freedom from militarism and wars that threaten civilization itself it must be through America setting the example of calm, intentional, deliberate refusal to take its place among the bullies of the globe.

Now is the time for the American people to reach this determination. Now is the time when this example would become the hope of civilization and the promise to future generations of mankind.

Sleep.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Folsey, in his letter of July 28, seems to be laboring under the impression that I am a champion of sleep for its own sake. Pretty much all of us, I think, are agreed that sleep is not one of the higher pleasures of life and that its curtailment or, more exactly, the curtailment of its need would prove very welcome to busy, short-lived humanity. No more is eating a particularly ennobling occupation, yet one would indeed be rash to follow the advice of a very low diet, based solely on the personal experience of another, however gifted. We are always glad to hear of discoveries which aim at giving more to mind and soul, but we should be wary about putting them into practice before they have been given a proper test. We are too prone today to attribute to men of genius infallible judgment in a wide variety of matters. For one Edison, who needs but four hours of sleep, there may well be ten other inventive genii who require eight or nine hours in order to obtain their highest mental and physical efficiency. Which one would Mr. Folsey takes for his guide?

JAPAN'S NEW ALLY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The adjournment of the special session of the Imperial Japanese Diet in June was soon followed by unusual activity on the part of the Elder Statesmen in busily interchanging calls day after day between themselves and Count Okuma, the Premier. The subjects of discussion at these conferences were kept in deep secrecy, therefore giving rise to various sorts of surmises and speculations.

One of the most important problems taken up, according to the recent press of Japan, was to determine, or to be prepared, what attitude should be assumed by the nation when the European war comes to an end. As remote as this end must have been to them, it is not difficult to imagine that nothing but a general policy in its broadest sense was decided, if at all. It is interesting to note, however, the report that the advisability of the closer and friendlier relations, with Russia in a more definite form was one of the topics that received weightiest attention.

After the war of 1905-1906 the enmity between the former foes gradually dissipated until there now exist in its place a more favorable understanding and friendlier intercourse than ever before. When Prince Ito, one of the Elder Statesmen, and who early advocated better relations with the St. Petersburg Government, was assassinated by the Korean crank at Harbin, the tragedy was deeply mourned in Russia also. The late Prince Katsura, under whose Premiership Japan fought Russia, was also converted to a pro-Russian policy in his later days. Russia also having many public men who have expressed the desire to see the two nations combine in an alliance, the sentiment of both peoples has now brought about a very favorable opportunity to become definitely engaged.

Though there is obviously dissatisfaction among some Japanese, who complain of England's attitude toward Japan, it is, of course, not because Japan and Russia are likely to combine. The main object of the agreement sought by the two countries is to promote and preserve their close and vital interests in the Far East. Doubtless Japan will not reckon without her host, the existing Anglo-Japanese alliance, but why should not England recognize the real position of the present Japan?

Baron Kato, the Foreign Minister, may go out of his office as the result of the present Cabinet crisis. Among the candidates for the portfolio the most likely to succeed him is Baron Goto, who is one of the strongest advocates of the Russo-Japanese alliance. But while Count Okuma remains Premier, the Baron's chance is doubtful, even if a coalition Cabinet were to be formed.

Unsanitary Transfers.

JOHN L. CADWALADER ESTATE IS $2,378,206

$100,000 TO PUBLIC LIBRARY

John L. Cadwalader, who was President of the Association of the Bar of New York and head of the law firm of Strong & Cadwalader, now Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, left a net estate of $2,378,206 when he died on March 11, 1914, according to the appraisal filed with the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Charles Sweeney.

There are forty beneficiaries under Mr. Cadwalader's will, among them Mary de Navarro, who was Mary Anderson, the actress, and now the wife of the banker, Antonio Fernando de Navarro of Broadway, England, both of whom receive $5,000 bequests. Mrs. Maria C. Hone, the testator's sister, receives the income for life from $501,993, and has the power to dispose of the principal. Richard M. Cadwalader, brother of the decedent, receives the income for life from $443,095.

Bequests to institutions are appraised at the following valuations: The New York Public Library, $100,000 in cash, collections of prints, $50,000, and collection of books, $1,000; Princeton University, $25,000; the Metropolitan Museum of Art, $25,000 and a collection of porcelains, old furniture, and other items totaling $18,475; the New York Zoological Society, $20,000; Harvard University, $20,000, and the Alumni Association of the Harvard Law School, $5,000.

Bequests to Nephews.

The report shows that Richard M. Cadwalder, Jr., a nephew, because of advances in money made to him during the lifetime of the testator, receives only $13,280. The other nephews, Alexander, Lambert, Gouverneur, William B., and Thomas Cadwalader, each receives $25,000 in cash, a life estate in $63,427, and the following pro rata adjustment interest in the bequest that was to have been for Richard M., Jr.: Alexander, $10,186; Lamebrt, $20,524, and Thomas, $17,642.

Hester Gouverneur Bartel, a niece, receives $25,000 in cash and a life income from $205,986. Sarah B. Cadwalader and Beatrice Ferrand, cousins, receive $10,000 and $20,000, respectively, in cash. Furniture, jewelry, and other items are apportioned equally to Francis Smyth and Edward J. Hancy, executors, whose shares are given at $18,823. Mr. Hancy receives an additional cash bequest of $20,000.

There are other bequests such as $10,000 to Mrs. Lily Millet, described in the will as a friend of the testator; $1,500 in cash, each to James Morn and his wife, Mary, and a life annuity of $600 to Mr. Morn. The couple were formerly employed by Mr. Cadwalader. There are bequests ranging from $200 to $1,000 each to employes in the law offices of the firm.

The assets include realty that totals $93,600, as follows: One-third interest in 308 to 312 Grand Street and 70 and 72 Allen Street, appraised at $41,700, and one-third interest in 314 to 320 Grand Street, $51,900.

Cash and Personal Effects.

The bank deposits are given at $36,355, and the furniture and personal effects in the home at 3 East Fifty-sixth Street, $36,247, none of which are included in the appraisals of the bequests to the institutions.

The report shows that the decedent's interest in the estate of his sister, Maria C. Cadwalader, now Mrs. Hone, amounts to $245; that the notes and mortgages of the estate are appraised at $204,988, and that the stocks and bonds are valued at $1,814,477. The decedent's interest in the law firm is placed at $39,390; his commissions as Trustee of the estate of Consuelo, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, is placed at $12,767, due; and the contents of his wine cellar are given a valuation of $1,000. There is no valuation of the decedent's interest in the estates of his brother and sister, Thomas Cadwalader and Mrs. Mary C. Mitchell, the latter having been the widow of Dr. S. Weir Mitchel, the author.

Among the larger holdings of securities are 700 shares of the Consolidated Gas Company, appraised at $92,750; 200 shares of the Bankers Trust Company, $88,000; 520 shares of the General Electric Company, $76,960; 1,000 shares of the Consolidated Traction Company of New Jersey, $73,500; 500 shares of the Northern Pacific Railway, $55,500; 500 shares of the Norfolk & Western Railway Company, $51,687, and 500 shares of the Hooker Electrochemical Company, preferred stock, $50,000.

Mrs. Augusta L. Jones, who was the widow of Herman Le Roy Jones and daughter of the late Ambrose C. Kingsland, left a net estate of $1,383,759 when she died, on Dec. 9, 1914, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Charles Sweeney.

Mary Kingsland Bradford, the daughter, receives all her mother's jewelry, laces, and wearing apparel, certain pieces of furniture, one-third of the residuary estate, $332,815, and the life income from $100,000. Herman L. and Ambrose K. Jones, the sons, receive respectively $399,327 and $395,365. George Dexter Bradford and Philip Hine Le Roy Jones, grandsons, receive respectively $25,953 and $24,989. Mary Helena Tompkins, a sister, and Albert A. Kingsland, a brother of the testatrix, receive respectively $20,000 and $25,000.

Mary Spencer, wife of the Rev. J. Selden Spencer, a friend of the testatrix, receives $3,000. There are bequests of $300 each to servants, Annie O'Keefe, Helen McConney, and Margaret Harrington, while Fanny Bonnen receives $200 and Mary Ryan $50.

The Children's Aid Society receives $5,000, the Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind $3,000, and St. Luke's Hospital $7,500.

The assets include mortgages aggregating more than $800,000; ten shares of stock of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, $47,418; other stocks and bonds aggregating $209,713; 75-77 Nassau Street, $325,000; one-third interest in 35 West 128th Street, $26,000, and bank deposits of $17,540.

Playwright's Widow Makes Fifty-seven Different Bequests.

Mrs. Alice Maud Howard, who was the widow of Bronson Howard, the playwright, left a net estate of $194,545 when she died in London, on June 19, 1914, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Charles Sweeney. There are fifty-seven separate bequests, among which are $100 each to Sir Charles Wyndam, brother of the testator, and her sister-in-law, Lady Wyndam.

All of the testator's interest in the plays of her husband are bequeathed to the Society of American Dramatists and Composers of New York, except "New Henrietta" and "The Henrietta," which are given for the life benefit of May W. S. Robson, and at her death, for the life benefit of her son, Stuart Robson. Upon the death of the latter, all rights in the two plays revert to the dramatic society. The plays which go immediately to the dramatic society are given a present valuation of $3,875, while "New Henrietta" and "The Henrietta," are appraised at $9,754.

The largest bequest is to Mrs. Margaret B. Maynard, described as no relative, who receives a life income from $39,018. A life income each in $14,631 is bequeathed to Mary M., Ella M., Myra W., and Bronson H. Waterman.

Other bequests include $2,000 to the Bide-a-Wee Home, $4,877 to the Vivisection Investigation League, and $1,950 to the Twelfth Night Club. The testator's sister, Mrs. Emma Hutchinson, receives $2,500.

In addition to the valuation of the plays and copyrights, and railroad and industrial corporation stocks and bonds which aggregate more than $160,000, the assets include promissory note of Samuel French, $6,000; cash in hands of Clarence A. Lightner, $3,386; indebtedness of Clarence A. Lightner secured by contract of A. J. Wood and wife on property at Third Avenue, Detroit, $7,106; and balance due for moving picture rights of "One of Our Girls," $290.

WILLS HISTORIC SNUFFBOX.

E. C. Post Will Bequeaths Gift of Louis XVI. to Museum.

A gold enamel snuffbox bearing a portrait of Louis XVI. by Sicardi, surrounded by diamonds, a gift of the French monarch to Benjamin Franklin's secretary, Colonel Laurens, together with forty-one other pieces, including miniatures, porcelains, and portraits, are to go ultimately to the Metropolitan Museum of Art under the will, filed yesterday, of Edward C. Post.

The articles are to be the property for life of the widow, Mrs. Emilie Thorn Post, who is the niece of the late William K. Thorn. Mrs. Post receives a life interest in the entire estate, no adequate valuation of which is given, and the power to dispose of all except the bequest to the museum. The Post home in New York is at 350 West End Avenue, and the Summer home is Bellevue Court, Newport, R. I., where the testator died on July 5.

Other articles in the bequest to the museum are an intaglio head of Christ, and another of the same kind of the Virgin, both by Pickler, and a Louis XVI. clock.

WIFE OF BANKER IS HELD.

Mrs. Michael Bernadini Accused of Assaulting a Servant.

Mrs. Mary Bernadini, wife of Michael Bernadini, a banker of Manhattan, was held for trial in Special Sessions yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Handy in the New Brighton Police Court, after a woman servant had preferred a charge of assault in the third degree against her.

Miss Josephine Sivoh was employed in the Bernadini home on Hope Avenue, Clifton. She charged that on July 31 she was attacked by Mrs. Bernadini. On the stand the young woman said she was in the bathroom at the time, and that Mrs. Bernadini came into the room, grabbed hold of her hair, and pulled her about the room. She said her face was scratched in the tussle and she was severely pummeled.

Mrs. Bernardini denied the charge. She said the girl attacked her when she ordered her from the house. The girl refused to go because she said Mr. Bernadini was the head of the house and she would not leave the place unless ordered to do so by him.

A fact that was commented upon in court was that the banker's lawyer questioned the witnesses for Mrs. Bernadini and brought out points favorable to the complainant's case.

While on the stand the young woman was asked what her duties were at the Bernadini home, and she replied:

"I am employed to wait upon the table and to assist Mrs. Bernadini when he comes home. I take off his shoes and stockings and see that his clothing for the night is arranged for him. I also see that his room is kept in order."

TANGO DANCER DIVORCED.

Henry W. Pollock, referee, filed a report in the Supreme Court yesterday recommending that a divorce be granted to Mrs. Amie Davis from Albert J. Davis, the tango dancer mentioned in connection with Miss Eugenia Kelly when the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward Kelly, was endeavoring to have the court restrain the girl from her manner of living. The papers in the case were sealed.

Mrs. Davis is the daughter of Patrick H. Fogerty of the late brewing firm of Fogerty, Kelly, & O'Reilly. When he died he left Mrs. Davis an income of about $1,200 a year for life. She married Davis in June, 1908, and has one child, John Van Holland Davis. Mrs. Davis ceased living with her husband about six months ago. She is with a sister at Hempstead, L. I.

The plaintiff accused her husband of misconduct with an unknown woman at the St. Francis Hotel on May 19, and of living with another woman in the Van Cortlandt Hotel from October, 1914, until May 1, 1915.

MRS. E. B. FORD WEDS.

Harvey Danforth Goulder, a prominent lawyer of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Estelle Barney Ford, formerly of Cleveland, were married yesterday at noon in the bride's Summer home at Easthampton, L. I., by the Rev. Oscar F. R. Treder, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Easthampton.

The bride, in traveling costume, was attended by Mrs. Emma Von Juch Wellman. Mr. Goulder had William Wisner White as his best man.

The wedding will come as a surprise to all but the closest friends of Mr. and Mrs. Goulder, as no formal announcement had been made of their engagement.

Mrs. Goulder's first husband was Seabury C. Ford. Mr. Goulder has also been previously married, his first wife having been Miss Mary Rankin, a daughter of the Rev. J. E. Rankin, at one time pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., and later the President of Howard University in that city.

After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Goulder will go to Cleveland to make their home there.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Baron E. de Nagell, who married Miss Julia Calhoun, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun of New York, last autumn, has been assigned as Attaché to the Netherlands Legation at Petrograd. He will go to Petrograd on Aug. 15. His wife is the great-granddaughter of John C. Calhoun.

The Duchess of Manchester, who has been at Southampton, L. I., plans to sail tomorrow for England.

Mrs. E. H. Weatherbee of 240 Madison Avenue, who has been at Waytes Court, her Summer home at Mamaroneck, N. Y., is spending August on a motor trip in the Adirondacks.

Word comes from Paris of the marriage there on Tuesday of Mlle. Paule A. Mercier and Baron Maxwell de Wardener of New York. The Baron is the son of the late Baron de Wardener, who was associated with the late Henry O. Havemeyer in business. He went to Paris at the outbreak of the war and has been attached to the American Ambulance Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo M. de Acosta, who have been at the Plaza for the last three weeks, have left town for the Berkshires.

Mrs. Alexander H. Chenoweth and her son, Alexander F. W. Chenoweth of 34 East Thirty-second Street, have gone to Saratoga for the Summer.

Mrs. Richard Nott Dyer has closed her house in East Orange, N. J., and is at the Mount Washington, Bretton Woods, for August.

Hubert Neville has given up his apartment at the Ritz Carlton and is soon sailing for England to take up a commission in the British Army Medical Corps.

Ocean Travelers.

Among the passengers arriving yesterday on the Ryndam from Rotterdam were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Abeles, A. J. Bruno, W. Paul Pickhardt, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ryckman, J. E. Schlatter, O. E. Toben, and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Warren.

SEES IN PRESIDENT HOPE OF HIGH IDEALS

Professor Krehbiel Urges Support for Wilson's Stand for International Law.

NATIONAL MORALS NARROW

Basis of World Peace Must Be Respect for Rights and Aspirations of All Peoples.

Support of President Wilson in his stand for the observance of international law by Germany, Great Britain, and all nations as a means of furthering civilizing ideals and world peace was urged yesterday by Professor Edward B. Krehbiel of Leland Stanford, Jr., University in an address to an audience that filled Havemeyer Hall, Columbia University.

Following Professor Krehbiel, L. Hollingsworth Wood, Secretary of the League to Limit Armaments, made an address in which he attacked the recently formed American Defense Society and what he characterized as the "propaganda of fear" fostered by it and related organizations. The speeches were made under the auspices of the Columbia Common Sense League, which is affiliated with the Intercollegiate Anti-Militarist Clubs.

In his address, Professor Krehbiel made it clear that he did not believe in disarmament and was not making the question of arms and armament the basis of his talk. He was interested, he said, in the development of the international spirit as the real guarantee of peace and as of higher and better quality than limited national spirit.

"Back of what we commonly call patriotism," he said, "lies the assumption that the nation is the highest conception known to man. According to this belief, when a nation has discovered its national interest, that interest is the highest good man can know; it is right; it is moral; it must be fought for.

"This makes a national morality, as apart from international morality. We have British morality, and each is to those who accept it the highest good. But might we not just as well speak of the morality of bald-headed men against the immorality of unpadowed men? We will not admit an individual morality as the highest good in private life, and why should an extension to national morality change our attitude?

"How can we hope for peace or prosperity or security based on the principle that the national interest or morality is the highest good? Is it not possible to conceive of a righteousness which is world-wide, of a morality which is international?"

That this conception is possible to man, Professor Krehbiel said was illustrated in the manner in which the American colonies had merged their local or national interests into the interest and morality of the United States. Just so, he said, on a world-wide scale, should nations merge their local interests into international interest.

"What position shall the United States take on this question?" he continued. "The United States stands as the greatest co-operative society in the world, and should show the way to further co-operation. Now, I am not a disarmament advocate. I see armament as a result of the false notion that the national interest is the highest good, and it is against this false notion that I am speaking. Our true future lies in the correction of the misapprehension from which armaments spring.

"One thing that we can do now toward correcting this misapprehension is to stand for the sanctity of international law. This, I believe, is what President Wilson is doing. He is not standing so much for the American national interest as for the interest of all nations when he insists that the belligerents observe international law. If you want to do something definite for this higher ideal you can hold up the hands of President Wilson right now."

Mr. Wood began his address by attacking the veracity of the published statements of the American Defense Society regarding the military unpreparedness of the nation. He used statistics furnished by Secretary Daniels and other official spokesmen of the army and navy.

He said that belief in armament was based on fear, and he pleaded with his audience to "think optimistically and not fearfully." He also advanced the futility of armaments, saying that as one nation armed another followed suit, so that both remained relatively stationary in physical force.

"The trouble is," he said, "we don't get anywhere with armaments."

Mr. Wood added that urging armament as insurance was, as another had said, like advising one to surround himself with gunpowder to make himself careful with matches.

"GERMAN DAY" AT THE FAIR.

Head of National Alliance Lauds Influence of Teuton Culture.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—German-Americans celebrated "German Day" at the Panama-Pacific Exposition today. They paraded through the city, passed in review before prominent German-Americans and Franz Bopp, German Consul, and joined thousands of their countrymen in an audience at the exposition, which sang "Deutschland Ueber Alles" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," and cheered the news of the fall of Warsaw.

Dr. C. J. Hexamer of Philadelphia, reelected President of the National German-American Alliance, address of which the day was arranged, told the story of Germans in American history and urged his countrymen to preserve for their children the ideals and traditions of the Fatherland.

"What Greece was to Rome," he said, "that Germany, in the widest sense, is to our beloved land, only with the further distinction and advantage in our favor that the Greek brought to Rome with his culture disgusting sensual vices, while the German with his culture brings to his new home sturdy integrity and a pure and happy family life."

The celebration, which followed the three-day convention of the alliance, concluded with a fireworks display.

CARUSO COMES HERE NOV. 15

He Writes That Metropolitan Has Engaged Him for 80 Performances.

Constant J. Sperco of 29 Broadway has received a letter from Enrico Caruso, now at Buenos Aires, in which the singer says that he has agreed to appear in eighty performances of the Metropolitan Opera Company, beginning on Nov. 15. Officials of the Metropolitan Opera Company could not be reached yesterday to confirm this. Mr. Sperco said that Caruso was to receive $3,250 a performance, or $260,000 for the season.

In his letter to Mr. Sperco, Caruso said that he hoped to leave for Italy about the middle of August, if he could get a boat on that date. The singer said he had been startled by the warmth of the reception he received at Buenos Aires. When he entered his dressing room after a performance he said that he could hear the cheering at the theatre, which was half a mile distant. He received 35,000 francs a night for eight performances, but the demand was so great that he consented to appear in eighteen additional performances at a slightly lower figure.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Louise Rutter was added yesterday to the cast of "Moloch," the war drama that Klaw & Erlanger will present in association with George C. Tyler here next month.

Helen Desmond, a young American pianist and composer, will play selections by Schumann and Bach, and Elizabeth Rubb will sing songs by American composers in the Little Thimble Theatre on Monday afternoon.

A special showing of the feature film "The Battle Cry of Peace" will be made this morning in the Vitagraph Theatre. This will be followed by a series of special projections in other cities.

The New York Supreme Court decided yesterday in favor of the defendant in the suit brought by Marie Dressler against the Keystone Film Company. The court held that there was no fraud or misconduct on the part of the film company and that the actress was merely entitled to her proper share of the profits from the picture "Tilly Punctures Romance."

WEINGARTEN'S HEART IS WITH THE ALLIES

Morris Weingarten, an importer, makes a formal profession of his sympathy with the Allies in an advertisement in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning:

STATE OF NEW YORK, COUNTY OF New York, United States of America, ss.:
My sympathies are with the Allies, wishing them quick and decided victory.
MORRIS WEINGARTEN.

Sworn to before me this 5th day of August, 1915, Irving Fish, Notary Public, New York County, No. 73. New York Register No. 7,126.
Also sworn to before the French Consul General, Aug. 5, 1915.

Mr. Weingarten, who imports from French merchants, was credited by fellow-passengers on the arrival of a steamship here from Europe with holding pro-German views.

A little later he received word from a French house with which he did business that orders which he had placed there had been cancelled because of his expressions of sympathy with the Germans. Mr. Weingarten sent by letter a vehement disclaimer of the pro-German views imputed to him. The French concern, however, would not relent.

Mr. Weingarten tried to get his orders filled by other French firms, but found that the story had been passed on to them also, and that he was on their black list. By this time he was suffering serious business losses, and he made strenuous representations by cable that his heart was in the cause of the Allies. He offered to write a letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES expressing his anti-German sentiments, but this was not accepted as sufficient.

Mr. Weingarten, however, was so emphatic in his expressions of sympathy for the Allies that the French firms opened negotiations with him, and word was sent to him by cable yesterday or the day before that he would be reinstated as a customer if he would make an affidavit before the French Consul General that he favored the Allies and wished them a speedy success, and have the affidavit printed in a prominent newspaper. Mr. Weingarten complied unhesitatingly with this condition.

CRETAN LEGION RECALLED.

May Be Summoned to Aid Greece in War Against Teutonic Allies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 5, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Several members of the Cretan Legion which has been fighting with the French in the Argonne are now on their way to Greece, having obtained indefinite leave of absence from the French Army.

The foregoing dispatch may signify, just as the disbanding of the Garibaldian Legion in April on the French front signified, that Italy would soon need the Legionaries in her own army, that Greece may be getting ready to utilize the Cretans serving abroad in her army. Two near events are, at any rate, likely to be productive of activity in the Balkans.

On Aug. 12 the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum to Rumania demanding the latter's neutrality for the rest of the war will expire. Two days later the new Greek Chamber, under the control of M. Venizelos, with his eighty-odd majority, will meet to consider his program of intervention on the side of the Entente Powers, which, meanwhile, are understood to have made concerted representations to Serbia, which will have Bulgaria nothing to desire in the way of territorial additions.

Last August demonstrations were held at Canea and Candia in favor of England, France, and Russia, and a Cretan Legion was enrolled in spite of the halfhearted objections made by the Greek authorities.

CABLE TWISTS A WORD.

And English Make The Times Say "Justifiable" for "Justiciable."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—An odd error in cable transmission is noted in THE NEW YORK TIMES editorial comment on the British notes. THE TIMES in most of the papers is made to say: "Our differences with Great Britain are of a 'justifiable' nature." Evidently the word used by THE TIMES was "justiciable." [It was; but even in this dispatch the cable returns it as "justifiable."]

One or two papers render it "judicial."

ANNUAL NARRAGANSETT FAIR

Loaded Tables Scattered on Lawn of St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 5.—The lawn of St. Peter's Episcopal Church was the scene of the annual fair today, and many tables laden with fancy wares, millinery from Paris, and other articles were presided over by matrons and maids of Narragansett.

A large table with an array of hats from Paris, dolls, gowns, veils, and lace collars was in charge of Mrs. John H. Hanan of New York, who was assisted by Mrs. Arthur E. Spencer, Mrs. L. J. B. Somerville, Mrs. Henry Chase Foster, Mrs. J. C. Tucker, and Miss Sarah Carey.

Parisian dolls were offered by Mrs. Talbot S. Hanan and Miss Mildred Hanan of New York. At a miscellaneous table were Mrs. W. H. Ballen, Miss Dorothy Allen, and Miss Ida Mathewson, while the bonbon table was in charge of Mrs. Henry B. Kane of New York, assisted by Miss Florence Kane. Homemade cakes were sold by the Misses Beatrice and Gertrude de Coppet of New York.

At the lemonade table were the Misses Lucy Jones of Louisville, Ky., and Eleanor Chase of Waterbury, Conn. Toys were sold by Rodman Wanamaker, Albert B. Lambert, Jr., and William Harding Jackson, and at the ice cream booth were Mrs. William H. Griffith and Mrs. Charles Easton.

The grab bag was in charge of Mrs. E. W. Mason Pfizenmayer of New Haven, who was assisted by the Misses Elizabeth Pfizenmayer, Beatrice Sheffield, Elizabeth Chase, Dorothy M. Chase, Elizabeth Watson, Katharyn Clothier, and Katharine Fielding Jones, and Messrs. Thomas Wanamaker, George Lee Lambert, and Mason Pfizenmayer.

The Duke Arturo de Majo Durazzo and Talbot S. Hanan were in charge of the cigarette booth. Fortunes were told on the lawn by Mrs. Damon Lyon of New York. Music was rendered by the Casino orchestra, under the direction of Julius Rosenberg. Many members of the villa colony attended the fête. At the Casino Mrs. John H. Hanan gave a luncheon for the women assisting her at the fair.

The annual lawn fête of the Baptist Church took place today under the auspices of Mrs. W. A. Nye, President of the Women's Sewing Circle. Among those in the tables were Mrs. W. A. Nye, Mrs. James T. Caswell, Mrs. Frank Locke, Mrs. Thomas Greene, Miss Adeline Briggs, Miss Edith Champlin, Miss Mildred Dawson, Mrs. Abbott McIntosh, Mrs. B. A. Burns, Mrs. Herbert Kenyon, Mrs. Theodore Bliss, Mrs. William Tucker, and Mrs. J. Winfield Church.

Senator Henry F. Lippitt and Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt sailed to the Pier today from Warwick Neck and were entertained at luncheon at the Casino by Stephen O. Metcalf. They were joined by Lauriston Hazard.

William H. Coombs gave a luncheon at the Casino for Admiral H. T. B. Harris, U. S. N., and Mrs. Harris, and William C. Marrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cassatt of Philadelphia entertained at luncheon today.

Mrs. C. C. Goffe of New York has arrived at the Arlington, where she has joined her daughter, Mrs. Edward G. Burgess, Jr.

Long Branch Sees "Under Fire."

It will be presented in the Hudson Theatre, New York, next Wednesday night. In the cast are Frank Craven, Violet Heming, Felix Krembs, Henry Stephenson, Edward Mawson, Norman Tharp, Walter Kingsford, Phoebe Foster, Dorothy Abbott, and Mallee Sheridan.

DRS. CARREL AND DAKIN FIND NEW ANTISEPTIC

Remedy Tested in French Hospital Said to Make Infection Impossible.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, and Dr. Henry D. Dakin of the Lister Institute have discovered, after exhaustive experiments at the Compiègne Military Hospital, what they say is the ideal antiseptic.

The most powerful antiseptic known to science is hypochlorite of lime, but its use is injurious to the tissues, owing to its acidity, and it does not keep.

Drs. Dakin and Carrel have found these two defects are remedied, respectively, by the addition of carbonate of lime and boric acid.

Wonderful results have been obtained with the new antiseptic, and, if applied in time, it is said to make infection in wounds henceforth impossible.

Professor Landouzy has explained the new antiseptic to the Academy of Science, the members of which agree that the discovery will be of great importance in surgery.

The news of the discovery by Drs. Dakin and Carrel aroused much interest among New York surgeons last night.

Dr. Robert T. Morris, who has made an extensive study of bacteria and presented the results of his investigation in a number of popular works, among them "Microbes and Man" and "Doctors versus Folks," thought that the new antiseptic would encourage people to use it rather than bichloride of mercury, carbolic acid, and the peroxide compounds which, he said, were doing as much harm as good.

"We must understand clearly," said the doctor, "that there is a great difference between an antiseptic and a germicide; the one limits the development of the bacteria, but does not interfere with its life, the other kills bacteria outright.

"The old method was to fight infection with germicides which killed the bacteria, but we have since learned that such treatment is apt to also kill body cells, which are our most efficient allies in the recovery from a wound. Now we use antiseptics. Carbolic acid, bichloride of mercury, and the peroxide preparations are all germicide, and their use should be confined to the surgeon. On the other hand, in this new compound, boric acid is a mild and at the same time very efficient antiseptic."

Dr. Morris said that New York surgeons were now using the germicides, together with salt solutions, which were essentially of the same properties as the blood and which are not harmful to the body cell. It gave the cell a chance, he said, and that was all that was necessary.

Dr. William H. Park, bacteriologist of the Board of Health, said that he had not heard of the discovery, but considered that it would be very beneficial. It was not a radical change, however, he declared.

FLAMES TRAP 15 GIRLS ON HIGH FIRE ESCAPE

Fifteen girls stood on the fire escapes at the fourth and fifth floors of the five-story loft building 401 East 124th Street shortly after 6 o'clock last night, screaming for help and too excited to descend the ladders.

A fire was blazing in the third floor, and smoke poured from the windows. Nearly 500 girls, 200 of them employed in the plant of Jewel & Co., confectionery manufactory, on the third floor, where the fire started, had marched out or descended the fire escapes in response to fire-drill signals, but the fifteen, staying to gather hats and wraps, had lost their heads.

Firemen of Truck 14 shouted to the girls not to jump, as some were threatening to do, and half a dozen firemen ran up the escapes. They got the girls down, but three of them fainted and were carried.

The police did not learn how the fire started. It spread downward, and the first and second floors as well as the third were pretty well burned out. Half a dozen makers of clothing occupied the part of the building not used by the confectioners.

Great crowds gathered, and Captain Savage of the East 126th Street Police Station cut off the street with a line of reserves. As a result traffic could not pass over the Willis Avenue bridge for half an hour, and for the same time the surface cars in First Avenue were stalled.

DENIAL BY LEON RAINS.

Says Passports of Himself and Recknagel Were Not Canceled.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Newspaper clippings cut from United States papers have just reached me stating, first: That Mr. Recknagel's and my passports had been revoked by the American Ambassador at Berlin on instruction from the State Department.

This is not true.

Secondly: That we were German-Americans. This is false. Both Mr. Recknagel and myself were born in New York State.

Thirdly: That we had declared in a newspape article that we were ashamed of our citizenship.

Again this is absolutely false. Neither of us eyer having written, said, or thought of making such a disloyal statement.

Trusting that you will give this matter its due publicity, I am, most respectfully yours LEON RAINS.

FRENCH LOSS IN SECURITIES

Experts Place the Shrinkage Due to the War at $2,000,400,000.

PARIS, July 22, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The total value of foreign securities listed at the Bourse on Dec. 3, 1913, that is to say admitted to the official quotations, was $16,200,000,000, $8,000,000,000 of which were held in France. The domestic securities listed at the same time were about $14,000,000,000, most of which was held in France. There are altogether 1,200 different securities that figure in the list of official quotations, including Government bonds, municipal bonds, railroad, canal, and other securities.

Financial experts, taking the estimate of Neymarck, of $170,000,000,000 as the total value of the world's securities, figure that war depreciation has cost their holders throughout the world $20,000,000,000.

Supposing the loss in France to be in the same proportion as estimated on the world's total securities, 11 per cent., the depreciation upon the foreign and domestic securities that she now holds is $2,000,400,000.

General Tracy Weaker.

General Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy under President Harrison, was reported late last night at his home, 14 East Sixtieth Street, to be still unconscious and slowly growing weaker. His last period of consciousness was on Tuesday, when he opened his eyes and recognized his daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand Wilmerding. He was unable to speak at the time, and soon lapsed into unconsciousness again. The General is not suffering, and his death is expected at any time, as his heart beats are so faint as to be barely perceptible. His daughter and son, Frank Tracy, are always with him.

OUTINGS FOR THE BABIES.

Sick Children's Mission Appeals for Funds for Summer Work.

An appeal was made yesterday by the Sick Children's Missiqn, which maintains seven stations in the densely populated districts of the city under the direction of the Children's Aid Society of 105 East Twenty-second Street. The fear is expressed that the mission may be compelled to curtail its work unless more money is supplied. The appeal says in part:

"We are doing an important work in saving the lives of infants in the hot weather. By our system of house to house visitation we discover cases that are not found by health authorities of the city, cases which otherwise would be lost. Our campaign is entirely one of education. We are trying to teach the women of the tenement districts how to be good mothers, knowledge in which they are woefully deficient. It is not an uncommon sight to see mothers feeding infants such indigestible food as watermelons, cucumbers, ice cream cones, candy, tea, coffee, beer, and bananas."

The society says that as a rule the mothers are glad to see the visiting nurses and consult the physicians. Continuing, the appeal says:

"As rapidly as possible the sick children with their mothers are removed to the society's home at Coney Island. On Monday of each week about eighty mothers and 200 children are sent there. One week in the bracing sea breeze, with proper diet and treatment, is usually enough to give the child perfect health. If that is not enough, the child is kept longer."

Checks may be made payable to Edwin C. Merril, Treasurer, or C. Loring Brace, Secretary, of the society, at 105 East Twenty-second Street.

WOMAN KILLED ON ELEVATED

Mrs. Marianna Perna, 74 years old, of 27 Thompson Street, was caught between the platform and the second car of a northbound Third Avenue elevated train at the 116th Street station yesterday morning and dragged 15 feet. She died a few minutes later while firemen who had been summoned by an emergency alarm were chopping away the station platform to release her.

According to Mrs. Rose Marie Perna, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Marianna Perna, the car started before Mrs. Perna was clear of the gate. Passengers screamed when they saw her predicament, but the motorman was unable to stop the train immediately, and Mrs. Perna's head was crushed.

Conductor Drum said that Mrs. Perna had walked two-thirds the length of the train on the platform before she either stumbled or accidentally caught her foot between the train and platform. The police did not charge that there had been any criminal negligence. Witnesses will be called before Magistrate Ten Eyck for examination this morning.

COOL WAVE TO CONTINUE.

While a temperature of 77 degrees was recorded at 1:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the thermometer took a sharp drop of fifteen degrees during the evening and at 6 o'clock registered 62, the minimum for the day. At 8 o'clock in the evening it had jumped back to 68 degrees, and then it fell off two degrees in the following hour. A steady east wind was blowing at a rate of fourteen miles an hour at 9 o'clock. The Weather Bureau experts promise cool weather for today with moderate east winds.

The temperature started off at 65 degrees at 8 o'clock in the morning with the humidity at 77 per cent. At 8 o'clock in the evening the humidity was 78 per cent. Altogether New York had a very comfortable day and the indications, according to the Weather Bureau, were that there will be no severe weather for some days.

McANENY ANSWERS A SLUR.

Rebukes Bureau of City Inquiry, Which Attacked Aldermen.

President George McAneny of the Board of Aldermen sent a reply yesterday to the Bureau of City Inquiry, which accused the Aldermen of permitting exemptions from the public letting of contracts. Mr. McAneny said that such exemptions were perfectly proper and that they were all in the interest of economy.

"It is the purpose of the charter," said Mr. McAneny, "to exempt from public letting all contracts for work or supplies that in their nature cannot well be submitted to competition or that have to do with some emergency of time. Not one of the exemptions to which you refer falls to come under one of those two heads. Had you investigated the facts before you gave out your slurring statement you might very readily have ascertained that for yourself."

The Rev. Philip Brown Noble.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 5.—The Rev. Philip Brown Noble, D. D., LL. D., of Coronado, Cal., died today at the home of his son, 704 Linwood Avenue. Dr. Noble was born on April 14, 1841, at Bedford, Penn. He was the son of Judge Joseph E. Noble. Fifty-one years ago he married Margaret Frances Murphy of Canonsburg, Penn. She died two years ago. He is survived by four children, Mrs. David S. Lacy of Coronado, Cal.; Mrs. Joseph A. Coleman of Morristown, Penn.; Willis C. Noble of Los Angeles, Cal., and Irvine M. Noble of Buffalo, N. Y.

Obituary Notes.

YANKEES AND GIANTS WIN DOUBLE-HEADERS—DODGERS LOSE—ATHLETICS—TURF

GIANTS CRUSH REDS IN A DOUBLE-HEADER

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5.—John J. McGraw and Charles "Buck" Herzog, baseball enemies, began a five-game siege at Redland field this afternoon, and when hostilities ceased for the day the Giants retired with two victories, having given the redleg aggregation the same treatment they handed to Miller Huggins's Cardinals on Wednesday at St. Louis. The first game, which was an easy victory for the Giants, ended with the score 5 to 2. The second contest was a pitching duel between Schauer, Marquard, McKenery, and Toney, with the Giant hurlers proving the stronger and coming home with the game, 2 to 1. Stroud went the full route for the Giants in the first conflict, while Schauer, although he was forced to give way to Marquard in the fourth round, is credited with the victory, as the visitors were in the lead when the change was made. The Giants are now half a game behind Brooklyn and Boston for third place.

Herzog seems to have made a pitching find in his recruit, McKenery, who held McGraw's men to four hits in the second contest. He gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth round, and Toney finished for the locals. Rube Benton essayed to check the Giants in the opening encounter, but what followed his determination resembled a nightmare. The Red veteran southpaw was as helpless as a lamb before the bats of Meyers, Brainerd, Merkle, and Lobart. Besides, the Rube contributed graciously with a couple of wild pitches, while several others of Herzog's crew made dull plays.

The important happenings of the first game occurred in the third and fourth sessions. Brainerd, in opening the third inning, struck out. Meyers, who batted out three hits, got his first one, a single to right. Groh fumbled Stroud's bounder. Burns bounded out to Groh, Big Chief taking third and Stroud second. Robertson got a single, when nobody covered first base, and Meyers scored. Robertson stole second. Benton uncorked a wild pitch and Stroud scored, followed by Robertson shortly after, when Benton contributed his second wild one. Incidentally, he really proved enough to beat the Reds, as they were never able to overcome the lead. Robertson turned his ankle sliding into the plate and Snodgrass finished the game in right field.

In the fourth inning Fletcher popped to Groh. Merkle, whose fielding was one of the big features of the double win, singled over third, stole second, kept right on to third when Wingo threw wild, and scored when Lobert hit past third. Brainerd forced Lobert. Meyers got his second hit, a triple to the centre field wall, scoring Brainerd. Stroud ended the round by popping up to Griffith. This ended the Giants' scoring for the day.

Doubles by Wingo and Rogers and a single by Williams scored one for the Reds in the fifth, while Wingo's single and stolen base and a double by Williams scored another during a rally in the ninth.

The second game was a clean contest from the tap of the gong. Schauer and McKenery were in rare form. The local hurler had one bad inning, the fourth, when Giants batted three hits, which, with the aid of a sacrifice, scored two runs and won the game. McGraw's team should have scored even more in this round but for some stupidity on the part of Lobert and Brainerd when they were caught in a double play. Doyle opened the fourth with a single to Groh. Fletcher followed with a one-base drive to right, Doyle taking second. Merkle sacrificed them along, and both scored when Lobert doubled to left. Brainerd rapped one to McKenery, who threw to Groh, the latter running Lobert to second, where a quick third-sacker sent him safely back to the bag. Brainerd in the meantime had advanced toward second. When Groh saw he had missed Lobert, he went out after Brainerd, chasing him toward first base, where Groh tossed the ball to Mollwitz. The latter ran Brainerd back toward second, tagged him out, and then pounced upon Lobert, who had his foot off the bag. Then McKenery settled down and not a Giant reached first base thereafter.

Schauer held the Reds hitless until the fourth, when he exhibited quite a bit of wildness. With two bases full, McGraw sent Marquard to the rescue, and the Rube held the enemy safe. Groh started the Reds' half of the fourth with a single to centre. Herzog grounded out, Groh taking second, and scoring on a single by Wagner. Schauer hit Killifer. Griffith forced Killifer, Clark walking. With Williams up, Schauer went out and in came Marquard. He caused the batter to ground out, and thereafter was not in any real danger. The scores:

Red Murray's Hit Downs Braves.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Manager Bresnahan outguessed Manager Stallings today, and Chicago nosed Boston out of the first game of the series, 4 to 3. With the score tied at the start of the ninth, McClarry dropped a Texas Leaguer into left field for two bases. Archer advanced him to third on a sacrifice. Stallings instructed Tyler to pass Phelan in hopes of retiring the side on a double play when Humphries came to bat. Instead, Knisely was sent to bat for him, and again the Boston manager ordered the batter passed, filling the bases. Saier went to third and ran for McClarry, scoring the winning run on Murray's single, which shot past the leaping infield. Boston played an uphill game and Tyler's homer in the ninth tied the count. Cheney, relieving for Wingo in the seventh, and scored the second run on bunched hits, while Vaughn's wildness, coupled with a timely hit in the third, gave Boston its first run. Chicago bunched hits in the first and third innings for a total of three runs. The score:

Pirates Get Only Run on Wild Throw

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5.—Adams shut out Philadelphia here today, Pittsburgh winning 1 to 0. The winning run was scored in the ninth inning, when, with the bases full, Killifer threw wild to third base and Hinchman scored. Alexander pitched for the visitors, allowing five hits, one less than Adams gave. The score:

"Bill" James to Rest Pitching Arm.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—"Bill" James, one of the three pitchers who figured in the Braves' sensational climb in the National League race last season, will be of no assistance to the team in its fight to regain the leadership during the next month. President Gaffney announced tonight that James had been suspended at his own request in order that he might go to his home in Seattle, Wash., and rest his pitching arm. Experts who have examined the arm say that only by a complete rest can it be brought back to form. President Gaffney also announced the release of Maurice Shannon, who played with Villanova College the past season, to the Rochester International League Club.

Umpire "Doc" Shetter Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Simon Cameron Shetter, widely known as an umpire in amateur and professional baseball ranks, died at his home here today after two weeks' illness of typhoid fever. While he did not advance to the big leagues he had umpired in minor leagues in all parts of the country. He was familiarly known as "Doc" Shetter.

TALL PITCHERS NO TERRORS FOR YANKS

The Yankees had a life-sized baseball appetite at the Polo Grounds yesterday and they satisfied it from soup to nuts. The other party concerned was the St. Looey Browns. Whenever you hear of the Yankees winning a double header you can always guess that St. Looey is somewhere in the neighborhood. The Yanks consumed the first engagement, 3 to 1, and frolicked home first in the second, 2 to 0. If Branch Rickey wasn't used to this sort of thing he might be disappointed. Defeats roll off the St. Looeys like water over Niagara Falls.

Besides the three runs the Yankees got in the first game they threw away half a dozen or so. At that, perhaps they knew what they were doing, for they didn't need them anyway. The Yanks did a big business on the bases and had them packed to suffocation several times. No less than nine of them were left slumbering.

Branch Rickey doesn't believe in playing ball on Sundays. The same goes for Thursdays. After managing the Browns for two seasons, Rickey is getting so he doesn't believe that the Browns will ever be able to play ball. You've got to give them credit for having enough patience to play out the schedule, anyhow.

St Looey imposed a couple of their smokestack pitchers on the Yanks. Carl Weilman was on the mound in the first game. By standing on a soap box Carl is so tall that he could peek into the thirty-seventh story of the Woolworth Building. In the second game Grover Lawdermilk, not buttermilk, did the flinging. Putting Lawdermilk and Weilman together in the sun wouldn't make a good-sized shadow. Lawdermilk is a human lath and Weilman is built like a clothes rack.

The Yankees' popular telegrapher, Ray Caldwell, took the tee for the Yanks in the opening encounter. He pitched, made hits, and scored a run, but outside of that wasn't very busy. St. Looey broke into the scoring in the second inning. With one gone, Walsh sent a double to left centre and scored on Lavan's single.

In the third, the Yankees pushed to the front. Nunamaker walked, and Caldwell advanced him to third with a single. High slapped a roller to Lavan, who foozled, and Leslie scored. Peckinpaugh, who is back in the game after a week's illness, punctured the centre field atmosphere with a hit, and Caldwell went to third. The bases were jammed. Maisel's single scored Caldwell. Pratt's single to second base on the play and "died" at third. Pipp skied to Walker, and High was doubled trying to register. There was a wholesale waste of runs in this inning.

The Yanks got another in the seventh. Boone ambled and Nunamaker singled. Caldwell hid the Edward Payson Weston exercise and loaded the paths. High jammed a grasser at Lavan, and Boone was thrown out at the plate. Peck's sacrifice fly scored Nunamaker.

The second tilt was one of those tight pitching duels between Ray Fisher and Lawdermilk. Both of these lads pitched as well as they ever did in their careers, if not better. They were both as stingy as a couple of misers most of the way, until the Yankees attacked Lawdermilk's benders in the eighth.

At this point everybody was worrying because it looked as if it was going to be an all-night party.

The boys' band which was playing between the innings at the game had run through all its selections and was tooting a lot of repeats when the Yanks finally went to bat.

In the eighth, Boone beat a hit through second. He went to third on Sweeney's single to left. That's a fact, Sweeney made a single. Paddy Baumann ran for Edward. Fisher's out advanced the boys a sack and up came Hughey High, who isn't any bigger than a pint of peanuts, and whipped a vicious low to right centre, sending Boone and Baumann home with the goods. The scores:

Tigers and Athletics Share Honors.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Hard hitting marked both games here today, Detroit winning the first, 11 to 5, and Philadelphia the second, 9 to 8. Both Steen and Bressler, who started the first game, were batted off the rubber, while Detroit mixed hits with passes by Davis and piled up runs. Dauss, who succeeded Steen, was effective. Cobb and Veach of the second game Detroit's three twirlers were ineffective. Cobb got two hits after failing to hit safe in his first nine times at bat and Sheehan once caught him napping off first base. Scores:

DODGERS STILL SLIPPING.

St. Louis Bats Smith for Three Runs in One Inning and Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—Sherrod Smith of the Brooklyn Nationals, feared and respected in St. Louis as one of the best Cardinal tamers in the country, failed this afternoon. As a result St. Louis broke its losing streak by scoring three runs in one inning and defeating the Dodgers, 3 to 2.

Smith was relieved by Dell,

VANITIE LOSES TO RESOLUTE

VANITIE LEADS RESOLUTE IN RACE

But Time Allowance Gives Honors to Skipper Adams's Boat in Newport Trial.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 5.—As a result of the races for the cups presented by Captain Vincent Astor of the New York Yacht Club, which were sailed for today in the waters just outside this city, Resolute won the cup for the America's Cup defender class, Hendon C. Hubb's Queen Mab won in the race for schooners, and W. E. Dodge's Samurai won in the sloop class.

All the craft sailed over the same course of 37½ miles, made up of three legs. The first was one of 17 miles eastsoutheast from Brenton's Reef Lightship to the Vineyard Sound light vessel; the second of 4½ miles due north to the Hen and Chickens light vessel, and the third a run of 16 miles almost due west back to the starting point.

There was a fresh wind from the north by west, blowing at the rate of 22 knots an hour, and, while there was a good swell, the sea was not particularly rough. Resolute won by 1 minute and 8 seconds corrected time, though Vanitie was the first to cross the line. Queen Mab, smallest of the schooners, won by 1 minute and 44 seconds from Enchantress, which was the first to finish, and Samurai won by 4 minutes and 17 seconds from Crayling. All fifteen yachts which started finished, with the exception of the Ventura, whose steering gear became jammed while she was leading the sloops of her class at a point about midway of the first leg of the course. Ventura was compelled to withdraw from the race and put back to Newport.

With the sun shining brightly a goodly crowd had assembled on the Newport Cliffs near the Agassiz cottage and on the bluffs on the opposite shore of the harbor, and so long as the fleet remained in sight the ten-mile drive had a procession of automobiles whose occupants were watching the big sloops on their journey. None of the sailing craft attempted to follow the racers, but there were merry parties aboard the big steam yachts which followed the cup chasers. This fleet was made up of Vincent Astor's Noma, Commodore Baker's Viking, which served as the committee boat; Lloyd Phoenix's Intrepid, W. E. Dodge's Alacrity, ex-Commodore Frederick G. Bourne's Alberta, J. P. Morgan's Corsair, George Lauder's Endymion, ex-Commodore E. C. Benedict's Oneida, Henry Walters's Narada, Edward Palmer's Alcyone, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James's Lanai, H. Wilmer Hanan's Maviet, Nat Herreshoff's Hallanthus, and H. A. Taylor's Vanderer.

The two big sloops of the special class were sent away first, with Vanitie leading and Cornelius Vanderbilt handling the tiller. She was on the port tack, with her sails drawing perfectly, and carried working topsails and small jib topsails, as did the Resolute when she, too, went away thirteen seconds later, also on the port tack and with Charles Francis Adams II. at the tiller. It was a broad reach for them to the first mark, and for the first ten miles of the run both held the same relative positions. At about this point Mr. Vanderbilt surrendered the tiller to W. Butler Duncan, who sailed the craft for the rest of the race.

After the change had been made Resolute seemed to get a new bit of life into her sails and crawl up on Vanitie. Resolute was still to windward of Vanitie as she had been from the start. There was little apparent difference in the speed of the sloops, though as the first mark was reached it was made evident that the apparent gain was an actual one, for Resolute was the first around the mark, making the turn at 12:47:50, Vanitie turning just twenty seconds later.

Windward work was now in order for the four and a half miles to Hen and Chickens Lightship, and both craft did some clever sailing in the six tacks which each of them made to reach the mark and end of the second leg of their voyage. The experts had it that Vanitie was footing a trifle faster than her rival, proof of which was had in the fact that Vanitie was first around the Hen and Chickens Lightship twelve seconds ahead of Resolute, having gained thirty-two seconds over her rival on this leg. Vanitie passed the mark at 2:23:45, and Resolute at 1:23:57.

From this point on it was a broad reach to the finish at Brenton's Reef light vessel, sixteen miles to the westward. The wind had freshened a trifle and some of the puffs were at the rate of twenty-five knots. Vanitie was being driven through everything in her way, and cut a clean path through the water, which occasionally broke with nasty-looking white caps. Resolute seemed to be eased to some of the roughest of these in the opinion of the experts, who were studying the handling of the boats critically. To the layman both seemed sailing as perfectly as boats could be sailed, and the contest, which it was evident would be a close one, aroused the liveliest interest on all the following craft. Resolute certainly was not perceptibly gaining on Vanitie, and there was no great surprise when the latter swung her bowsprit to finish line twenty-eight seconds ahead of Resolute. Vanitie continued her course up the harbor to her anchorage, but Resolute hauled after crossing the line and was taken in tow.

Admirers of both craft have long waited for such a decisive test of the sailing qualities of the two craft in a stiff wind, which they had not had until today since their launching, with no accident or untoward incident to mar the trial. Boat for boat, without regard to time allowance, the Cochran boat came out best in the trial, which was some consolation to those who have favored this craft over Resolute, even though the latter did get the cup under the handicap she received from Vanitie.

The only sufferer in this test of the two yachts was Vanitie. A few moments after the start, her jib topsail sheet parted and made some trouble aloft which it took four and a half minutes to rectify before the sail was perfectly set again.

Queen Mab, the smallest of the schooners, with the exception of Alice, was next to the last to finish in the race between the two-masters. Alice being behind her by about forty-seven minutes. Enchantress led the fleet of schooners all the way and made the run in 3 hours 10 minutes and 48 seconds. But as she had to allow Queen Mab an hour and four minutes and failed, the cup went to the smaller craft. It is barely possible that the decision of the committee will be reversed and the cup be given to Alice, if the claims of her owner and Captain, Henry Howard, of the Eastern Yacht Club, are allowed.

Alice is entered in the class as "not measured." She is one of the Stamford one-design class, which have a measurement of 30 plus. Taking a measurement of 32 as a basis to allow for any mistake, Mr. Howard asserts he is entitled to the cup, as his corrected time, with a time allowance of 2:08:07, would be 2:41:14, making Alice winner by 17 minutes and 36 seconds, as Mr. Howard figured it. His boat was not entered until the last minute, as he had not been able to get into the harbor in time to make his entry on Wednesday, and did not know of the postponement of the races until he came in this morning from the westward, where he had been detained, with so many others of the fleet, by Tuesday's storm.

The Regatta Committee was not at the station last evening to receive Mr. Howard's formal protest against the award to Queen Mab, but will receive it tomorrow. Mr. Howard makes no formal complaint against the action of the committee, as he assumes that under a strict interpretation of the rules his boat's claim might be rejected because she was not measured before the race by the club's official measurer. However, he did not understand this to be necessary.

Samuri's victory in the class for sloops was an easy one, made so in part by a rather unusual incident. The start was made at 11:30, five minutes after the cup sloops got away. Iroquois was right away on the sound of the whistle, closely followed in order by Barbara, Ventura, Carolina, Samuri, Crayling, and Spartan, with the 46-footer Kalinga last of all. The order at the first mark was Barbara, Iroquois, Grayling, Samuri, Carolina, Spartan, and Kalinga, Ventura having been withdrawn owing to the accident to her steering gear.

After the windward work which carried them to the second mark Barbara was still leading and first around, Iroquois, Samuri, Grayling, Spartan, Carolina, and Kalinga following. Off West Island Samuri suddenly shook off Barbara and Iroquois and took a lead which she never after relinquished. The reason was revealed after the finish of the run. Then it was learned that as Queen Mab passed Samuri she created a wash with sufficient suction to actually pull Samuri away from her two competitors when the trio were on almost even terms. Samuri got the benefit of this suction created by the schooner to get a lead which she was able to hold and even increase to the end of the race.

All day long the vessels of the New York Yacht Club fleet, which had been stormbound at New London, Mystic, Stonington, and in Fisher's Island Sound, have been coming into the harbor until tonight the fleet is practically complete as it was on the day of the rendezvous at New London. Tomorrow morning all will start for the run to Buzzards Bay with the cups offered by the Alumni Association of the United States Navy as prizes to be raced for. There is one cup for schooners and another for the sloops and yawls racing in one class.

SURPRISE AT WINSTED.

Stevens Defeats Ward in Connecticut State Tennis Championship.

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 5.—Nearly one hundred gallons of gasoline were burned today on the tennis courts of the Norfolk Country Club in order to enable the players to compete in the Connecticut State Championship and Bridgeman Cup, in which N. C. Stevens of New York reached the semifinal round. In order to do this he had to eliminate Vanderbilt B. Ward, the Central States champion. Stevens defeated young Ward in straight sets at 6—4, 8—6. This was the first of the upsets of the day, F. M. Watrous of New York springing the second when he won from H. A. Plummer after three hard sets at 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

In the doubles Ward and Cedric A. Major, formerly of Cornell, formed a strong combination and won their first round match from Costikyan and Lawson, 6—0, 6—3. Summary:

First Round—C. A. Major of New York defeated M. T. Ackerland of New York 6—4, 6—3.

Second Round—Treanor defeated Hapgood 6—4, 6—3; Iler defeated Leighton 8—6, 5—7, 6—3; Veysey defeated Bigelow 6—4, 6—4; Costikyan defeated Tallant by default; Stevens defeated Geer 6—0, 6—2; Major defeated Rand 6—1, 6—2.

Third Round—Major defeated Iler 6—4, 6—2; Plummer defeated Watrous 6—2, 3—6, 6—3; Veysey defeated Arguinbau 6—4, 5—7, 6—3; K. D. Fisher defeated Haggerty 6—0, 6—3; Harrison defeated Mellkyan, 6—4, 6—4; Treanor defeated Bigelow 6—2, 6—3; Stevens defeated Lawson 6—0, 6—0; Ward defeated T. W. Fisher 6—3, 6—3.

Men's Doubles—First Round—Geer and Iler defeated Lowe and partner, default; Haggerty and Leighton defeated Cook and Grant 6—3, 6—1; Fisher and Fisher defeated Clark and Tweddell by default; Harrison and Harrison defeated Root and Sweet 4—6, 6—2, 6—4; Lowe and Rand defeated Bigelow and Vreeland 6—3, 6—1; Major and Ward defeated Costikyan and Lawson 6—0, 6—3; Veysey and Treanor defeated Meigs and Hapgood 6—0, 2—6, 6—2; Post and Ackerland defeated Peaslee and Watrous 10—8, 6—3.

G. M. CHURCH EASY VICTOR.

Princetonian Defeats J. J. Forstall in Western Tennis.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—George M. Church, the Princeton University star, played true to form in the Western tennis tournament at Lake Forest today, easily defeating J. J. Forstall of Chicago, 6—3, 6—1. He also disposed of R. E. Turvey, Chicago, 6—0, 6—1. Church's victory rounded out a day in which half a dozen favorites scored in the third round. Other successful players being Al Lindauer of Chicago, who won a hard-fought match from Nat Thornton of Atlanta, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3; Walter Hayes, and Heath Byford. Wet courts prevented some of the matches, practically all of the women's singles being postponed. The score:

Men's Singles—Third Round—Walter Hayes, Chicago, defeated M. A. James, Chicago, 6—2, 6—1; C. G. Hill, Chicago, defeated L. Harry Weidner, Chicago, 6—4, 6—3; R. E. Turvey, Chicago, defeated Francis Benson, Decatur, Ill., 6—1, 6—3; J. J. Armstrong, St. Paul, defeated Stayer Moulding, Chicago, 6—0, 6—2; M. G. Ketchum, Chicago and California, defeated Paget Cady, Chicago, 6—4, 6—4; Al Lindauer, Chicago, defeated Nat Thornton, Atlanta, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3; Kenneth B. Uhls, Kansas City, defeated Billy Swift, Chicago, 6—4, 6—3; George M. Church, Princeton, N. J., defeated J. J. Forstall, Chicago, 6—3, 6—1; Al Green, Chicago, defeated H. C. Gifford, St. Paul, 2—6, 6—3, 6—1; Heath Byford, Chicago, defeated D. Robertson, Chicago, 6—3, 6—3.

Men's Doubles.—Second Round—Byford and Squair, Chicago, defeated Merrill and Yott, 6—2, 6—0, 6—1; Hamilton and partner defaulted to Davis and Weber, Chicago.

HUDSON RIVER FINAL.

Miss Grove and Steinkampf Win Mixed Doubles Championship.

With the victory of Miss Margaret Grove and J. H. Steinkampf in the final round of the mixed doubles, the annual tennis tournament for the championship of the Hudson River Lawn Tennis Association was brought to a close yesterday on the courts of the Park Hill Country Club, near Yonkers. Miss Grove and Steinkampf defeated in the challenge round Mrs. William H. Pouch and J. L. Jova in straight sets, at 6—3, 6—2. The match closed the most successful tournament held by the association.

The superiority of the winning combination was apparent from the start. Mrs. Pouch, who is a former titleholder, was far below her form, while Miss Grove was at the top of her game. Steinkampf made a number of clever overhead smashes, but played mostly in the back court, leaving Miss Grove to attend to the net. The arrangement worked well, and the losers were always at a disadvantage.

Although the match was decided in straight sets, several of the games went to deuce, and the contest was much more interesting than the score would indicate. After taking the first set, Miss Grove and Steinkampf forced the issue, and held their opponents to two games in the set. The summary:

Hudson River Lawn Tennis Association.—Final Round—Miss Margaret Grove and J. H. Steinkampf defeated Mrs. William H. Pouch and J. L. Jova, 6—3, 6—2.

Chicago Men in Maine Finals.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 5.—Joseph T. Bowen and Allister McCormick, both of Chicago, qualified for the finals in the Maine lawn tennis championship in singles by defeating two Philadelphians, Robert S. Potter and R. Landreth, in the semi-finals today. Both matches were decided in straight sets.

R. N. WILLIAMS TO PLAY M'LOUGHLIN

Special to The New York Times.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 5.—R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Harvard, national champion, defeated Nathaniel W. Niles this afternoon, 6—1, 6—0, and 6—1, and thereby earned the right to challenge Maurice E. McLoughlin of California for the Longwood singles trophy tomorrow afternoon in the finals. It was one of the worst tennis days possible, but notwithstanding that fact there was an unusually large gallery on hand, and Williams and Niles displayed some exceptionally good tennis. Of the twenty games only four went to deuce, and Niles won his two games entirely on errors by the champion.

Williams registered more earned points than he did errors, in spite of the soft turf and heavy balls. He won ten service games and completely outclassed the former Massachusetts champion, as the latter only registered four earned points. Niles, however, was handicapped, more so than his adversary, because of the weather. The continual mist and drizzle caused Niles's glasses to become constantly clouded, and that fact hurt his chances many times when he seemingly had chances for points. For two sets he spent most of his time cleaning his glasses of the moisture, but in the third he gave it up in despair and decided to play under that handicap.

The match was one of the shortest on record for the finals, it taking but 47 minutes to play it. For two and a half sets Williams as usual played his erratic game, but his play resembled that of last August when he defeated McLoughlin at Newport. His speed was dazzling and his placing was startling. He seldom went to the net, where his ability to volley and smash is usually his best asset. Instead he stayed in the rear of the court and dazzled Niles with his forehand and backhand drives. At least a half a dozen times Niles went near the barrier in hope of breaking up those powerful shots, but only to see the ball repeatedly shot over his head. He returned to the back court again and was little better off, for Williams's control of the ball was wonderfully good and his many clever points except seven service aces were made on deep drives to corners when Niles was forced out of position.

Niles played well under the handicap of the weather conditions and his opponent's cannon-like service. Williams experienced trouble in finding his swing in the first game, which went to deuce, although he succeeded in breaking through Niles's service with four clever shots in the second game. The same trouble allowed Niles to bring the third twice to deuce. Niles won his only game in the first set with the sixth. Williams took the next two without the loss of a point and continued until the second set was won at love and a lead of 2—0 was established in the third.

Nine consecutive games with the loss of only fifteen points is nearly a record for a star to take over another and has been surpassed only by Clothier's triumph over Little in three love sets at Newport a year ago. Niles saved himself from being blanked in the final set by taking his own service with the third game. After that, however, Williams won two more love games, one at 30 and the other went to deuce, thus completing the conquest. By winning Williams showed that he was in his form and should make the challenge match with McLoughlin an interesting one tomorrow.

McLoughlin occupied a side line seat and followed the champion's play closely, as he wants to pay back a debt for losing in the national championship to Williams a year ago.

Russell Brown in Semi-Finals.

Russell Brown, the Central Park champion, won his place in the semi-final round of the championship cup series of the Public Parks Lawn Tennis Association tournament yesterday. Brown, playing steadily and volleying with considerable speed, outplayed Marty Alexander, the Claremont Park title holder, in straight sets at 6—1, 6—0, at Macomb's Dam Park. The match was closer than the score indicates, as eight of the thirteen games were fought through deuce and vantage points.

The other match, in which Louis Oshman, Crotona Park champion, plays H. L. Pulsberger, Macomb's Dam Park winner, will be decided this afternoon on the court at Crotona Park for the semi-final round, and Gerald F. Muster, Bronx winner, and Jesse C. Fishel, Prospect Park, will play for the other bracket of the same round.

The Prospect Park doubles will be finished this afternoon, so that the winning pair may take its place in the final tomorrow without incurring the penalty of being defaulted. Sheridan and Rubinstein will oppose Fishel and Rooney in this contest. A default was recorded against the Macomb's Dam Park pair because of failure to appear.

Inman and Washburn Win.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 5.—After the storm of the past two days Point Judith's tennis tournament was resumed this morning. Large galleries were present. The feature match, between John G. Thomas, Philadelphia, and F. C. Inman, New York, lasted over three hours, Inman winning, 6—4, 7—9, 6—3. Other singles played in the second round were: Leonard Beekman, Princeton, defeated A. Adair Waters, New Orleans, 6—0, 6—0; Watson M. Washburn, New York, defeated Craig Biddle, Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3; Frank B. C. Paul, Philadelphia, defeated Benjamin K. Gatins, New York, 6—0, 6—2; D. S. Waters, New Orleans, defeated Stanley Henshow, Providence, 6—7, 6—2; Claude R. Branch, Providence, defeated Frank W. Paul, Philadelphia, 9—7, 1—6, 6—2.

Third Round—Watson M. Washburn defeated Leonard Beekman, 7—9, 6—0, 6—1; Ward Dawson, California, defeated Claude R. Branch, 6—4, 6—0; D. S. Waters beat B. C. Law, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3; F. C. Inman defeated Andrew Wylie, Canada, 6—4, 6—4.

Crawford Notch Tennis Near End.

CRAWFORD HOUSE, N. H., Aug. 5.—The Crawford Notch Tennis Club reckoned without the fickle elements of wind and rain when it arranged the schedule for the annual New Hampshire tennis championship. During the past three days rain has driven the players off the courts with the day's play only half done. The matches finished this morning brought play down to the semi-finals, which, with the finals, will be played tomorrow, leaving Saturday free for the challenge match. The summary:

Singles.—Robert Tunis, 6—4, 6—4; J. Wheelwright beat R. M. Currier, 6—3, 6—4; B. Ray beat D. Woodbridge, 6—4, 6—0; A. E. Kent beat M. W. Whipple, 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles.—Wheelwright and Bray beat Nowell and Wilbar, 6—1, 3—6, 9—7; Kent and Woodbridge beat Charesy and Hart, 6—0, 6—4; Currier and Foster beat Abbot and Seabury, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2; Smith and Martin beat Tunis and Tunis, 8—6, 3—6, 6—3.

A Seven-Year-Old Tennis Player.

Some time little Billy Ellwood hopes to be one of the top notch tennis players, that is, when he grows up, for just at present Billy is only 7 years old and just about tall enough to get his eyes above the top of a tennis net. And if there is any truth in the saying that starting young gives one proficiency, Billy ought to become an expert. Even now he is playing tennis that has given him many a victory over an older rival who has prided himself on being quite a master of the game, and he is a member of three tennis clubs in Brooklyn, the Maple Court, Rosmuir and Brighton Baths clubs. Last week he played against Tom Smith, the Brighton Baths instructor. Of course he didn't win, but he gained the admiration of his experienced opponent by his forehand drives and backhand plays, and covered the court in a way that was remarkable for such a tot.

Two Tourneys for Borough Park.

The interclub tennis series between Borough Park and Bayside tennis clubs will be played on the Bayside courts tomorrow when five singles and four doubles are down for decision. Several of the players who competed in the match with the West Side Club at Forest Hills will again represent Borough Park. The latter's players will include Dr. Willoughby Jennings, W. Stull Hoyt, E. A. Davis, William H. Dewey, Walter Kress, Channing Burrows, William A. Hartye, Jr., Chester Schubert, and Gerald Donaldson. The return series of matches between Borough Park and the Crescent Athletic Club will be played Sunday afternoon on the Bay Ridge courts. Ten matches, six singles and four doubles, will be played.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Pressure distribution is very uneven tonight, although there was a general but moderate fall in the South, Southwest, and Central West, and a moderate elsewhere.

Rains continued in the upper lake region and showers in the Atlantic States, but elsewhere the weather was generally fair, except in the Rocky Mountain region and extreme Western Texas, where there were local thunder showers.

It is cooler in the Upper Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, and portions of the Middle Atlantic States, the Middle Plateau, and the extreme Southwest, and generally warmer elsewhere, except in the Pacific States.

Generally speaking, temperatures are considerably below the seasonal average in the Ohio Valley and the upper lake region and above the average in the Northwest.

Except for scattered showers Friday and probably Saturday in the lake region and the South Atlantic States the weather will be generally fair east of the Mississippi River during the next two days, with somewhat higher temperatures in Northern interior districts.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate northeast to east; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate southwest, except variable off the Florida Coast.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, Southern New England, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Unsettled Friday, local showers; Saturday, partly cloudy.

Western New York and Northern New England—Cloudy Friday and Saturday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	64	66	4 P. M.	73	72

CALLS SKYSCRAPERS POOR INVESTMENTS

G. B. Ford Tells City Bureau Students That High Buildings Have Become a Menace.

WANTS HEIGHT RESTRICTED

American Civic Association Secretary Urges Country-Wide Campaign Against Billboards.

New York's skyscrapers were declared to be poor business propositions, destructive of adjacent land values, unwholesome obstructions to light and ventilation, and undesirable edifices generally in an address by George B. Ford of the New York Committee on City Plan before students of the American City Bureau Summer School yesterday. Mr. Ford spoke to the students, most of whom are connected with civic organizations of growing cities, after they had had luncheon at the City Club at noon. The school is being conducted at East Dorset, Vt., and the trip to New York was one of the series of trips mapped out for the students to enable them to compare modern methods of city building and city government.

"High buildings in a city are often a detriment to surrounding property," Mr. Ford said, "and sometimes play havoc with the older buildings near which they are erected, cutting off the light and air of the smaller buildings and forcing their tenants to seek new quarters. The high structure is especially harmful in residential sections. A man's home loses its charm when a company buys adjacent land and erects a twelve or fifteen-story apartment house, and often the value of the land his home is situated on is cut in half. Skyscrapers, too, are poor investments. They seldom pay more than 2½ or 3 per cent.

"In New York we certainly ought to restrict the height of buildings, in certain areas at least. In upper Manhattan twelve stories would be an adequate limit for buildings; in the Bronx, five or six stories; in Brooklyn, four stories, and in Queens, where most of the houses are built in rows of residences or are single family houses, two or two and one-half stories would be enough.

"After an apartment house has reached the ten or twelve story mark the fire risk is enormously increased, and it is due to Providence alone that we have not yet had some horrible catastrophe in New York. Furthermore, the lower apartments in these high houses usually lack light and fresh air, and the shadows of the buildings cut off the light from other houses.

"We Americans are inclined to think of Paris as a flat city, and of New York as a high city in its buildings. Do you know that the average height of buildings in Paris is oneand one-half stories greater than the average height in Manhattan? Our buildings on this island average from three and one-half to four stories. The average in Paris, due to their maximum height limit, is five stories. And if we took all of Greater New York into consideration, our average height would be considerably less, for it is a fact that three-quarters of our five boroughs is as yet uncovered by building improvements. This explodes the theory that our high buildings are made necessary by lack of space.

"Regarding the exceedingly high value of certain locations, as compared with the value of land only a few blocks away in Manhattan, an interesting point which does not seem to have been taken into general consideration is this: The minutes spent in waiting from the door of one of the skyscrapers to the elevator that stops at your floor, say the twenty-fifth floor, and of ascending in the elevator and losing time while it stops to let off other passengers, and of walking along a long corridor to your office, is in a great many cases more than sufficient time to walk a couple of blocks away to a site that could be bought for one-tenth the price of the land on which the skyscraper is built, and on which a smaller office building, with lower priced offices, could be built."

The City Plan Committee has gathered statistics which show that if all of the people who can be accommodated by the rentable space in the Woolworth Building were to leave the building at the same time and go to the nearest express station of the subways, and the trains were to be run with the least allowable headway, it would take twenty-two minutes to move them out of the station. It would take between twenty-eight and thirty minutes to move the population of the new Equitable Building."

Richard B. Watrous of Washington, D. C., Secretary of the American Civic Association, spoke on clean-up movements in cities throughout the country and urged the civic association secretaries, when they return to their cities, to advocate the removal of billboards, ash dumps and other unsightly objects from along the railroad approaches to the different cities. These ugly approaches, he said, often created a first impression that kept people from

Stocks Reach New High Ground Despite Profit Taking—Steel Still Leads the Market.

New high levels were reached in yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange, but the market was called upon to absorb a large volume of profit-taking sales which brought reaction in many stocks and considerably reduced the net gain in the general level of prices. The great strength in United States Steel was again the most conspicuous feature. The advance in Steel which is now paying no dividend to above 72 shows how confidently the market counts on a continuance of the improvement which has lately been taking place in the steel trade, for upon a continuance of the more favorable conditions which have come to prevail in that industry depends, of course, the re-establishment of United States Steel common upon a dividend basis. For long periods while it was paying dividends Steel sold much under the price which it now commands.

Wall Street has come to believe firmly in a period of industrial prosperity, even though that prosperity may be somewhat circumscribed, and it cannot imagine industrial prosperity without the steel trade sharing largely in that prosperity. The advance in Steel common in recent days has been the market expression of that belief. The market, whether or not it is premature in doing so, is discounting a return of Steel common to the dividend list. It is to be presumed that, having had to abandoned dividends on the common stock the Directors of the Steel Corporation will act deliberately about resuming payments so that the mere earning of a dividend would not be synonymous with its declaration. It may be therefore that the market at present is jumping at conclusions a little too quickly, but if it is it is merely acting in a way which is characteristic of such markets as we have lately been having.

There were large net gains in some of the war order stocks, and runmor added one or two companies to the list of those already favored with orders in terms of scores of millions of dollars, even in terms of a hundred millions. As a whole, however, this group moved less excitedly than it did during the days last week when dealings in the war stocks were most unrestrained. Traders are perhaps learning that taking an order for $100,000,000 of war supplies is not quite the same thing as putting in bank the profits on the order at some assumed percentage of profit.

The fact of the matter is that there are many ifs between the taking of an order and realizing the profit which it is "estimated" the order should yield. For one thing, many of the orders which have been placed for war supplies are subject to cancellation. For another, only in rare instances can net profits be figured with assurance. The Director of a company whose war orders the Street has made much of, said yesterday that all the uncertainties of the matter into consideration he would be satisfied if 25 per cent. of the profit now being estimated on these orders was actually realized.

Some of the railroads made further progress, but many of them, under later profit taking, lost much of the ground previously gained, which furthermore was much less than the ground gained by the industrials. One of the movements which attracted most attention among traders was that in Rock Island, which showed a net gain of 2 points. This was one of the directions in which the belief in the probable grant of a rate increase to the Western roads bore fruit, for it was felt that a rate increase would considerably facilitate a satisfactory reorganization of the road.

Clearings Show Better Business.

Clearings through the banks in July reflected improving conditions in general business, the total at all of the leading cities in the United States, according to a statement of Dun's Review, amounting to $14,980,074,000, an increase of 3 per cent., compared with the same month last year, and of 10 per cent., compared with July, 1913. To a considerable extent this gain was due to the expansion at New York City, which showed gains of 6.3 per cent. and 18.4 per cent., respectively.

LONDON TRADING STEADY.

Money In Ample Supply and Discount Rates Steadier.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Money was in ample supply and discount rates were easier today.

The stock market generally did not expand. The new war loan fluctuated narrowly and closed slightly lower. Home rails were weak, owing to the impending issue of £1,500,000 London and North Western Railway 4½ per cent. preferred stock. Brazilian tractions were firmer, coppers hardened and Canadian Car made a further advance of 4½ points.

American securities were firm, especially United States Steel. The closing was steady.

British Bank Statement.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes:

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Directors of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company yesterday declared the interest on the adjustment income mortgage bonds earned for the six months ended June 30, at the usual rate of 2 per cent. per annum. The interest is payable Oct. 1.

Three seats on the New York Stock Exchange have been posted for transfer: William Rasmus to Benjamin D. Bartlett, George G. Eustis, deceased, to J. Ford Johnson, Jr., and H. C. Hackney to C. Redner Richards. The seats were sold at $55,000 each, the same price as obtained in the previous sale.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Money for War.

There have been no further developments in connection with the suggested establishment here of a $50,000,000 credit by Italy, and the matter may not be carried further than the inquiry which was made as to how bankers in the United States would feel toward a proposition if one were made to them. A reply was sent to the authorities at Rome, and if they deem it worth while, negotiations will be started from that end for the provision of funds. There is plenty of money here for foreign borrowers if the right kind of collateral can be produced.

No Popular Loan Issues.

International bankers say that the United States is not yet ready for a popular bond offering on behalf of any of the belligerents. For that reason, when Great Britain comes into this market for a large sum it will probably be provided through banking credits. There is no denying the fact that comparatively few investors in this country would be attracted by bonds issued directly for the purpose of carrying on war operations. On the other hand, in view of well-informed bankers, nothing could be safer, from the investor's standpoint, than securities issued by any of the nations at war. They take the stand that when the conflict ends and the readjustment of finances takes place the amount of money owed abroad will be so small in comparison with the home loans that any repudiation or surrender of interest will have to be borne entirely by the citizens of the debtor countries. The need for new capital will be so great that care will be taken not to prejudice foreign lenders.

All in the Point of View.

In the financial district it has been held from the first that peace can only come when the Austro-German forces are crushed. For that reason every reverse suffered by the Allies used to mean a reaction in the market. Nowadays, with the public's attention centred on the war issues, a decisive defeat for the Russians is taken as a bull argument on the war stocks, which is to say, under these conditions, on the market. The fall of Warsaw is considered to mean prolongation of the struggle without changing its final result, and the longer the war lasts the more profit to American concerns engaged in the manufacture of war supplies. The worst thing that could happen to the industrial list would be a move on the part of either side for the discussion of terms of peace. As a broker put it, stepping out of the excited crowd trading in the war issues, for a breath of air: "It is a deplorable thing that any one should wish for a continuation of the war, but that is what all of us

HOLD MAJORITY OF BONDS.

Chicago & Eastern Illinois "Regular" Committee Tells of Deposits.

John W. Patten, Chairman of the "regular" Chicago & Eastern Illinois Bondholders' Committee, said yesterday that his committee now held a majority of the total amount of the various issues represented, including more than 50 per cent. of the general consolidated and first mortgage 5s. J. E. Blount, Jr., Vice President of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company of Chicago, has been added to the committee.

The independent Protective Committee for the Chicago & Eastern Illinois general consolidated and first mortgage 5s, consisting of Henry Evans, Chairman; J. H. Bogardus, Herbert H. Dean, Samuel F. Streit, and Frank B. Weeks, is also asking for the deposit of bonds. An agreement filed with the Guaranty Trust Company provides that bondholders may withdraw if dissatisfied with the plan to be formulated by the committee, and limits all charges to which a depositor may be subjected to 1 per cent. of the principal of the bonds deposited.

2,000,000 Rifle Contract Offered.

The acquisition of the Meriden Fire Arms Company plant by the Westinghouse Electric Company's rifle department, the New England Westinghouse Company, is expected to add about 1,000 rifles a day to the productive capacity of the company. At the two Stevens plants, recently purchased, it is expected to turn out between 4,000 and 5,000 guns a day. In addition to the contract for 2,000,000 rifles, the Westinghouse Company has been offered another contract for a like number, to be undertaken when the present order is finished.

U. S. TO RETURN VISIT OF LATIN AMERICANS

SEPARATE GROUPS TO GO

Representative Business Men to Cement Friendly Relations—Secretary McAdoo's Message.

The committee appointed by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to arrange a return visit to the countries of Latin America by representatives of the financial, industrial, and commercial interests participating in the recent Pan-American financial conference at Washington, met and organized yesterday at India House. Eleven members responded to the luncheon invitation issued by the Chairman, James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation, and Chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council.

Those present with Chairman Farrell, were John Barrett, Director-General of the Pan-American Union, Washington; D. P. Black, President Chamber of Commerce, Pittsburgh; D. Y. Cooper, Henderson, N. C.; United States Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, President Southern Commercial Congress, Jacksonville, Fla.; Elliott H. Goodwin, Secretary, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Washington; W. S. Kies, National City Bank; Robert H. Patchin, Secretary, National Foreign Trade Council; Walter Parker, Manager, New Orleans Chamber of Commerce; James J. Shirley, of the T. A. Gillespie Company, New York, and C. T. Williams, representing Edwin Warfield, President, Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore.

It was decided that the return visit shall be accomplished through the medium of separate parties of representative business men, to visit singly or in groups the countries participating in the conference. A single trip to all of the sister republics was dismissed as impracticable.

Nothing Like a Junket.

Suggestions for the chartering of special steamers or the assignment of an army transport were likewise discarded. The sense of the committee was that the visits should be systematically directed to the mutual benefit of the United States and the republics visited and should have nothing whatever the character of a junket.

The personnel of the visiting parties will be built around those members of the permanent group committee appointed to carry on the work of the Pan-American Financial Conference. Secretary Patchin said it is the hope of the committee that the business men engaged in these trips may have a semi-official character. This Plan and Scope Committee was appointed to draft a general program for the visits: James A. Farrell, Chairman; Senator Fletcher, John Barrett, Elliott Goodwin, James J. Shirley, W. S. Kies, and Secretary Patchin.

The conditions canvassed by the committee indicated that the best results would probably be obtained by one visit to the countries on the mainland of Central America, another to the republics of the West Indies and the South American countries bordering the Caribbean, a third to the countries on the west coast of South America, and one or more separate visits to the countries on the east coast of the southern continent.

In a statement issued by Secretary Patchin for the committee it was emphasized that every effort will be made to give all of these parties the same high and representative character borne by the Latin-American delegations to the recent conference.

Sub-Committee to be Named.

"Their size," said the statement, "will be limited, and other circumstances of the visit contingent upon the conveniences of the countries whose delegates to the conference extended the invitation. Sub-committees will eventually be appointed to make the detailed arrangements for each of the visits. Many of the prominent business men participating in the conference at Washington are now assiduously devoting themselves to the duties of the group committees, all working in close conjunction with the Council of Chairmen of the Conference, thus energizing the resources of more business interests than have ever before devoted their attention to the trade problems of the United States and Latin America."

Secretary McAdoo, who was unable to attend the meeting, sent a telegram reading:

"I am satisfied that we have a marvelous opportunity, not only to expand our trade and financial relationships with Latin America, but to establish a political accord and a friendly understanding with those countries which are working for the good of civilization and the world's peace. We must not neglect this opportunity. You can, I know, render highly patriotic and useful service to your country in what you are doing."

Chairman Farrell is expected to call the committee together again within a short time.

DISPUTE MAY DELAY SUBWAY JUNCTION

Estimate Board Changes Contract After Award and Builders Say They Will Sue.

STOPS WORK ON VITAL LINK

The completion of the dual subway system may be delayed for months, and possibly years, through a controversy that arose yesterday between the Board of Estimate on one hand and the Public Service Commission and Holbrook, Cabo and Rollins, contractors, on the other over the form of contract for the section of the Broadway subway between Thirty-eighth and Fifty-first Streets, including the great union station under Times Square, the largest in the whole system.

The matter came up in the Board of Estimate on the application of Thomas F. Conway, counsel for the contractors for reconsideration of the action of the board last week in approving the contract with the provision striken out permitting the contractors and the chief engineer of the commission to agree on a lump sum for extra work.

Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins, as the lowest bidders, received the contract last week for the section in dispute. Their bid being $3,740,913.50. The section is the most important of the Broadway route and is known as the keystone of the whole dual system. The contractors who are now building the short section of the Seventh Avenue subway under Times Square, were ready to begin work when the Board of Estimate passed a resolution, suggested by Tilden Adamson of the Contract Bureau, rescinding the paragraph permitting the substitution of a lump sum or unit prices, for extra work in lieu of a determination based on cost of labor and materials plus 10 per cent.

The contractors refused to accept this change, and in asking that the original contract be allowed to stand, Mr. Conway said his clients would begin litigation, if necessary, that would indefinitely tie up the subway.

Acting Mayor McAneny sided with Mr. Conway.

Acting President Henry Curran and Acting President Dayton of Queens agreed with Mr. McAneny and voted against the approval of the change, but were defeated, as it was supported by Controller Prendergast, Borough President Pounds of Brooklyn, President Mathewson of the Bronx, Acting President Folk of Manhattan, and President Van Name of Richmond.

Mr. Condway said his company would not accept the modified contract, and added that if an attempt was made to readvertise for bids an injunction would be asked.

Later Mr. Conway said:

"There is nothing new about this clause that the Board of Estimate refuses to approve. On the contrary, the records show that contracts exceeding 50,000,000 for subway work have been let containing identical clauses, and they were always unanimously approved by the Board of Estimate."

The same question came before the board yesterday in another subway contract. Warren Leslie, counsel for Rodgers & Haggerty, who got the contract for the third section of the Eastern Parkway (Brooklyn) subway, asked the board to approve the contract, as his clients were willing to accept it with the disputed provision stricken out. Acting Mayor McAneny said the fact that the contractors were willing to accept the contract did not make it legal, and he could not consistently approve any such resolution.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Aluminum Key Chains Are Personal Adornments, Appraisers Hold.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers that aluminum key chains, valued at over 20 cents a dozen, are properly dutiable under the present tariff law at 60 per cent. ad valorem as articles of personal adornment. A. Steinhardt & Brother, the importers, claimed that the merchandise should be given entry at 20 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for "articles or wares not specially provided for composed wholly or in chief value of aluminum." Judge Sullivan held that inasmuch as the articles are undoubtedly intended for personal adornment and are of the value stated above, they were correctly assessed. The protest was accordingly overruled.

The board reversed the Collector in assessing a 50 per cent. duty on a marble altar and statue imported for presentation to the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, Indianapolis. It was held that the Custom House authorities erred in classifying the articles as manufactures of marble with duty at 50 per cent. ad valorem. Representatives of the donors claimed free entry as articles for presentation to an incorporated religious society, or a tax of 15 per cent. under the act of 1909 as "sculptures." Judge Waite denied the contention for free entry on the ground that the importer failed to show that the cathedral is a duly incorporated society, but the claim for entry at 15 per cent. as "sculptures" was sustained.

C. B. Richard & Co. imported alabaster bowls, used for lighting purposes, and intended to be suspended from the ceiling. They were assessed at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem under the tariff as manufactures of alabaster. Entry at 15 per cent. as "sculptures" was claimed. The photographs introduced as evidence indicated that the bowls are carved on the underside, some of them in low relief and some with merely tracings or etchings of figures. Judge Waite said the evidence does not satisfy the board that they are works of art, and that the evidence was not sufficient to overcome the presumption in favor of the Collector's classification. The Collector was affirmed.

Sustaining a protest by A. H. Ringk & Co., the board ruled that cashmere noils are to be considered in the same category as Angora noils, and are entitled to free entry under Paragraph 651 of the 1913 tariff as wool waste. The Collector was reversed in returning the article at 15 per cent. under Paragraph 305 as "hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, and all hair on the skins of such animals."

Henry Otte, Boston, failed in a contention for the free entry of steam trawls. They were assessed under the tariff at 35 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of vegetable fiber. The importer based his claim for duty exemption on the subsections of the tariff law relating to materials "necessary for the construction of naval vessels or other vessels of the United States." Judge Hay said that the record in the case fails to bring the trawls within the meaning of the subsections under which claim was made.

Michael Onato, Los Angeles, was sustained in his contention that wooden statuary for a church was free of duty as articles intended for presentation to an incorporated religious society. The Appraiser made a return at 25 per cent. as a mineral substance, but later reported that wood was the component of chief value. The board held that, as the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury have been complied with, the statuary properly falls under the free list of the law.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The second annual outing of the Southern Travelers' Association will be held tomorrow at Donnelly's Grove, College Point, L. I. This outing will mark the tenth anniversary of the organization, which is made up of salesmen who cover the Southern States with all kinds of merchandise. Indications point to an excellent attendance.

The account of C. Livingston & Son, Youngstown, Ohio, will in the future be handled by Joseph J. Roeder and Alex. Stephens, resident buyers, 303 Fifth Avenue.

Portugal Needs Wheat.

The Portuguese Government has authorized the importation of 200,000,000 kilos—7,348,667 bushels—of wheat, according to a cablegram received by the Department of Commerce from Consul W. L. Lowrie, who is stationed at Lisbon.

Will Issue Spring Color Card.

The Textile Color Card Association of the United States expects to have a card for next Spring out by the middle of October. There will be about forty shades shown on the new card, and they will indicate the tendencies in Spring colors as far as experts from practically all the textile lines are able to determine them. As the prime purpose of the association's work is to standardize colors, and make it possible for the public and the retailers to get the shades they desire, the same process of investigation and comparison by which the Fall card of the association was made up will be carefully followed out.

Submarines and Imported Fish.

The German submarine war zone has been drawn so tightly around Scotland that Scotch herrings are very scarce in the American jobbing markets. Small shipments are arriving rather infrequently, but the prices paid for the herrings being shipped here are so high that no one in the importing trade ventures to make importations on a large scale through fear of heavy losses. Advices received here this week by jobbers say that the fishing area around Scotland is so very limited, and the demand so large, that prices are jumping constantly. It is added that so many fishing vessels, as well as their crews, have been lost that the fishermen are afraid to operate in the usual fields.

The World's Raw Silk Market.

The Yokohama raw silk market is steady at recent quotations and there is business being done both for American and European accounts. Sales for the week there amounted to 3,600 bales, with stocks at 6,000 bales. Communication with Canton is still very irregular and subject to great delay, which renders business difficult. Prices continue firm there. The Shanghai market is higher for China steam filatures, the better grades being sold up for several months. There is also more demand for re-reels, the price of which has advanced. Tussahs are attracting more buyers and are firmly held. Advices received from Milan, by H. L. Gwalter & Co., report the Italian market very strong and advancing. Buying is active. The local market continues active for spot silks, stocks of which are small.

Foreign Goods Not Stored Up.

Jobbers here in many lines of European products are having a hard time to convince some of their customers, particularly those in the interior of the country, that they cannot supply the merchandise called for in the orders they have taken. According to a prominent wholesaler of foreign canned goods, the impression seems to prevail very widely that many New York jobbers are holding back stocks of goods in anticipation of obtaining higher prices as the demand increases. This, he declared yesterday, was untrue. "In the first place," he said, "the jobber hasn't got the goods, while, in the second place, it is unprofitable as a general proposition to store goods. It is a fact that our agents abroad cannot get former lines at any price, while other lines are so high that we cannot afford to buy them."

New Tickets Are Appearing.

Several months ago a man who is familiar with the colored cotton goods situation said that, because of the dyestuffs scarcity, he looked for the temporary abandonment of many well-known tickets, or brands, on these goods. The reason he gave was that the owners of the brands would not want to risk having them injured by selling goods under them that had been dyed, of necessity, with the so-called fugitive colors. His prediction is already coming true. Some of the downtown commission houses are already selling standard colored cotton fabrics, dyed with colors that cannot be guaranteed for fastness, but they are not selling them under the names that have become household words because of the good quality of the merchandise. The "fugitive" fabrics, however, are being sold openly to the wholesale trade as such, and are moving quite well.

Alcohol from Pea Pods.

According to reports that have reached this city from an up-State source, a new use for pea pods has been worked out. It has been found, after considerable experiment, that commercial alcohol can be made from them better than from anything else save grain. A recent demonstration showed that a gallon of alcohol, 98.12 per cent. pure, could be distilled from about 50 pounds of pods. With about 250 tons of pods taken from the peas canned by only one concern in Western New York State last year, it is believed that the supply of raw material for this alcohol will be plentiful. The pods sell in the neighborhood of $1 a ton. About the only way in which the new alcohol differs from the pure grain product is that it cannot be used in anything that is to be taken internally. It is said that distillation can be carried on at a small expense under the process used.

Crude Rubber Prices Easing Off.

Quotations on crude rubber continue to ease off slowly here as the result of prolonged buying inactivity in this market and the softening tendency that has developed in the English market. Upriver fine, the best Para rubber, was held here yesterday at 58 cents a pound, spot, while smoked sheets and pale crêpe, the leading grades of plantation rubber, were quoted at 62 and 63 cents a pound, respectively. In view of the continued large consumption of crude rubber here by the manufacturing interests, considerable wonder is expressed in certain quarters of the market over the lack of buying. By some the opinion is held that necessity will force buyers into the market soon, while others look for little activity along this line until about the middle of September. Prices still seem too high to meet buyers' views for late delivery, and they apparently do not want spot rubber.

Iodine Preparations Advance.

Crude iodine having been advanced about 50 cents a pound by the foreign syndicate controlling the Chilean output, domestic manufacturers have announced a corresponding advance in prices on all iodine preparations, according to Weekly Drug Markets. An advance of 5 cents a pound in chloroform has also been announced, owing to the scarcity and high price of acetone. There is an active export demand for this anesthetic, as well as for iodoform and various iodide salts. Codliver oil is firmer. Sales of the Norway grade were made here at $80 a barrel early this week, and some of the leading holders are now asking $5 above that price. A sharp upturn in quotations for belladonna, both leaves and root, has taken place. Trade in the heavy chemicals used for technical purposes continues active, especially in those used in the manufacture of explosives. Prices for the druggists' quality of opium have been shaded 10 cents a pound.

Better Call for Gray Goods.

There was a better call for gray goods in this market yesterday, though, from all accounts, it was not evenly distributed. Prices continued firm on several numbers at the nominal bases recently quoted, but on other goods, notably 39-inch 80 squares and 68-72s, sales were reported, for spot delivery, at an eighth off listed figures. Some business was reported on 38½-inch 64-60s at 5¾ cents for nearby delivery, and sales of 60-48s in that width were made for shipment during the remainder of this month and next, at 3¾ cents. A fair amount of sheeting business was reported from the bag trade, the day's transactions including sales of 36-inch 4.70s at 3¾ cents, and 40-inch 4.25s at 4¼ cents. Some business was done on drills, but it was not heavy. Specialties had another good day. Nominal prices on staple printcloths follow:

About Silesian Trade.

Writing to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce under recent date, Consul H. G. Seltzer, who is at Breslau, Germany, says that nearly $12,000,000 worth of lumber and wood of all descriptions will be required to rebuild East Prussia, this amount being the estimate of a leading German lumber trade journal. It will be supplied mostly from Silesia, Saxony, Hanover and the Rhine Provinces. Because of war conditions, Mr. Seltzer says that no new wall-paper patterns will be produced this year. The production of this commodity in Germany in the last year has been but one-third normal. He mentions the great increase in acreage in Silesia that has been given to potatoes, as well as the large increases in prices on alcohol and the prospects of a steady advance in hide and leather prices. The mining industry, he says, will show reduced dividends, the coal production, for instance, being about 70 to 75 per cent. normal in the last year. Flax spinners and weavers are busy, being hampered considerably by the shortage of raw material, and prices are advancing. A plan to create German fashions for home and export trade is on foot.

DACIA SUIT IS SETTLED.

Ship Brokers' Action Against E. N. Breitung Is Withdrawn.

As the result of an agreement reached by all parties concerned the suit brought originally in the United States Supreme Court, and later transferred to the Federal District Court by E. V. Novelly & Co., ship brokers, of 18 Broadway, against E. N. Breitung, the banker, as purchaser of the former Hamburg-American liner Dacia, has been discontinued. The terms of the settlement were not stated.

Breitung paid $165,000 for the Dacia, which, when granted American register, left Galveston with a cargo of cotton valued at $750,000 for Rotterdam, Holland. As freightage on the cotton Breitung received $195,000, which netted him a profit of $25,000. As E. V. Novelly & Co. held an option on the Dacia at the time of the sale, and the ship brokers also procured the cargo for the vessel, they sued Breitung for their interest in the deal, which amounted to about $10,000.

On the way to Rotterdam the Dacia was seized by a French cruiser, and last Tuesday the French prize court confirmed the capture of the vessel as a fair prize under the laws of that country, although it is understood the State Department will enter a protest. The cargo of cotton is not involved in the French court's decision.

NEW WOMEN'S COURT PLAN.

Detention Home to Have Sixteen Floors and Cost $365,000.

Plans were filed yesterday for the sixteen-story Detention Home and Court for women whic the city has been preparing to build for more than a year. The new structure will have a frontage of 101 feet and will occupy the plot at 133 to 141 West Thirtieth Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues. The greater part of the plot was formerly occupied by the old Thirtieth Street Police Station, which was torn down about three years ago.

This home will combine the features of a court and a jail, and the detention work will be under the supervision of the Department of Corrections, of which Katherine B. Devis is the Commissioner.

The cost of the building is estimated at $35,000 by the architects, Griffin & Wynkoop. The detention rooms or jail will be on the upper floors. There will be a chapel on the fifteenth floor and a hospital ward, with a large kitchen, on the top floor. There will be open-air loggias on each floor from the sixth to the fourteenth stories, and they will also be equipped with two small dining rooms. The courtrooms will occupy the second and third floors.

RIDDER SUES FOR $250,000.

Staats-Zeitung Owner Says Hearst's American Libeled Him.

Herman Ridder, editor and owner of The New York Staats-Zeitung, yesterday started a suit in the Supreme Court against the Star Company, publisher of Hearst's New York American, charging libel and asking for damages of $250,000.

Mr. Ridder says he was damaged by an article which appeared in The American on May 30, and which said Ridder was engaged in the manufacture of aeroplane parts for England and her allies.

Mr. Ridder disclaimed any responsibility for the supplies furnished to the Allies by the company named, for the reason that Erskine Hewitt had been appointed receiver to the concern, and had sole authority to conduct its affairs.

COTTON ADVANCES ON MIXED REPORTS

PART OF DAY'S GAIN LOST

Bullish Talk on Belief That Spinners' Takings Are Four Times as Much as a Year Ago.

Cotton closed barely steady yesterday, although prices showed a slight net gain for the day. The reaction came after prices had made an advance of 8 to 16 points over the closing level of Wednesday. Liverpool again showed a good undertone, and spot sales reached a total of 14,000 bales. The weather was still dry in Texas so far as the detailed weather reports went, although The Dallas News of Aug. 2 printed dispatches from many Texas points where rains on July 31 and Aug. 1 ranged as high as four inches. These rains fell in the following counties: Coleman, Mitchell, Nolan, Mills and in the San Angelo district of West Texas. This was quite a surprise to the trade, as it was not believed that any precipitation of importance had fallen on those dates.

There is more or less bullish talk in circulation, as it is believed that the statistics from now on will make a relatively bullish showing. For instance, spinners' takings today are expected to be four or five times as large as they were for the corresponding week last season, which, however, represented the demoralized conditions at the beginning of the war.

Further good rains fell throughout the eastern belt yesterday, and conditions in the Atlantic States are probably all that could be asked for at this stage of the season. The reports of the Atlanta Compress Company, compiled Aug. 1, are better than had been expected, and indicate a favorable prospect provided rain came shortly after the date of their compilation. Consequently, the recent precipitation is believed to have made the outlook highly favorable.

F. M. Cordill, traveling crop expert, says that taking the Atlantic States as a whole the average condition will equal last year on Aug. 1 minus the decrease in acreage and use of fertilizer. There is thus far, according to his observation, no evidence of a breakdown in the plant from lack of fertilizer, as fruitage is normal and the plant is in full bloom.

The American Consul at Kobe, Japan, has the following to say regarding the stocks of cotton in Japan:

The warehousemen's report on the cotton consignments in Osaka, dated June 10, gives the whole stocks held as showing an increase of 780 bales over the previous reports, dated June 1, the total amounting to 11,075 bales. This is the result of a dwindling demand from China. The accumulation is particularly heavy in coarse counts. In finer goods also there is a heavy accumulation, but that is almost entirely due to the depressed condition of the domestic textile market. The report of the Associated Cotton Spinning Companies for the opening days of the present month shows that exports to China have increased lately, but that is due to speculative shipments by some exporters on the strength of the reported decrease in stocks at Shanghai. Otherwise trade remains as slack as ever.

Futures closed barely steady.

Spot cotton at New York was good, with middling 9 points advance: middling, 9.40c. Southern spot markets were from 5 to 10 points advance, with New Orleans, 8.69c; Galveston, 8.90c; Savannah, 8⅝c; Houston, 8.90c, and Memphis, 8.75c.

The New Orleans market closed steady.

The Liverpool market opened steady. There was a good business in spot cotton, with middling 12 points advance. Middling at 5.43d. Sales, 14,000 bales; receipts, 5,000 bales. American, none.

Prices at Liverpool closed quiet, but steady.

TO HOLD EMBARGO MEETING.

Importers Will Indorse Wilson in British Controversy.

The Committe of Fifteen which, on behalf of the American importers, originally presented the petition to Secretary Lansing protesting against the British embargo, met yesterday afternoon at the Hardware Club, 253 Broadway, when it was decided that a mass-meeting should be held at the Hotel Biltmore shortly in which all importers and exporters are invited to participate. The object of the meeting is to indorse the efforts of the Administration to obtain relief from the restrictions of the British Order in Council.

This is the Committee of Fifteen: Lee Kohns, of L. Strauss & Sons; Carl W. Stern, of M. J. Corbett & Co.; M. B. Schmidt, of B. Illfelder & Co.; Emil Strobel, of Strobel & Wilken Company; Theodore Bach, of Snow's United States Express Company; William J. Whittemore, of American News Company; George J. Hunken, of Emil Majert Company; Dr. Carl Amend, of Eimer & Amend; J. M. Klauss, of Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co.; Henry F. Samstag, of Samstag & Hilder Bros.; Ainslie Walter, of Butler Bros.; H. W. Braun, of Habicht, Braun & Co.; E. Stratmann, of The F. A. Koch Company; L. A. Repp, of Hoyt, Repp Company; Philip J. Cunningham, of Dezell & Helwig.

COMMODITIES MARKET.

WHEAT.

The wheat market was active and feverish, prices declining 1½@1⅞c early under active liquidation, rallied on covering, but at the close was again easy, with net losses of ⅞@ 1¾c. In the local cash market, No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.22, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, spot; No. 2 hard at $1.28, cost, insurance and freight New York, to arrive; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.14, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.12, cost, insurance and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The better weather over the corn belt caused increased selling pressure in the corn market and prices were easier, closing with a partial rally, although ⅝c to ¾c lower. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 90c lake and rail. Aug. 20 shipment.

OATS.

Country offerings of oats were more liberal in the West on account of the fine weather which, it was said, had improved conditions and permitted renewed threshing. Receipts were still small and there was little pressure on the cash position, and the local cash market was steady with standard quoted at 64½@65c; No. 2 white, 65@65½c; No. 3 white, 64@64½c; No. 4 white, 63¼@64c; fancy clipped white, 67½@68½c; ordinary clipped white, 66@67c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was weak and lower early under renewed selling prompted by continued heavy receipts of hogs at primary points as well as lower prices at the yeards. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 28,000, estimated for Friday, 19,000; Kansas City received 4,500, and Omaha, 7,500.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,326 packages. Trading was fairly active yesterday in the medium grades of creamery, but market quieter yesterday; and while the supply urgently offered is lighter than earlier in the week, buying is not sufficient to closely clear receipts, and the tone was barely steady at the close. Creamery, state, (92 score), 25¼@25½c, higher scoring, 26@26½c; firsts, 23¼@23c; seconds, 22½@23c; thirds, 21@22c: State dairy, finest, 25c; good to prime, 23½@ 24½c; common to fair, 20@22c; renovated, extras, 23@23½c; firsts, 22@22½c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 22@22½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 20¼@21c; seconds, 19½c; lower grades, 18@19c; packing stock, June make, fine, 20c; current make, No. 2, 18½@19c; lower grades, 16@18c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 11,942 cases. The general situation is without material change. High qualities of fresh goods showing a large proportion of new laid are scarce and firm. Average prime and lower grades are still overplentiful, pressing for sale, and of extremely irregular value, the market being especially weak for seriously defective qualities, some of which are going at extremely low prices. Near-by white eggs in light supply, and there is a small proportion of strictly new-laid qualities showing good size and chalk-white color; these are tending in sellers' favor, while the average offerings are selling at very irregular prices. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 23½@25c; extra firsts, 21½@22½c; firsts, 18@20c; seconds, 16@17½c; thirds and poorer, 10@15½c; dirties, No. 1, 14½@15c; No. 2 and poorer, 10@14c; checks, choice, dry, 12¾@14c; fair to good, 12¼@13c; culls and inferior, 8@12c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 31@32c; ordinary to good, 25@30c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 24@30c; Western, gathered whites, 22@25c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery browns, 25@28c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 18@24c; duck eggs, State and near by, Indian Runner, 24@26c.

WATER WORKS STOCK DROPS

Heavy Loss Suffered by the Investors of Hampton, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 5.—Chancellor Backes heard testimony today in the Court of Chancery on the financial entanglements of the Standard Water Systems Company of Hampton, Hunterdon County, for which a receiver had been asked.

John A. Power, President of the company, testified that in his opinion the stock of the concern had a value of $8 per share. He said the people of Hampton had paid $83 per share for it.

Henry Runyon, counsel for Philip L. E. Del Fungo Geira, Vice President of the company, asked how much Power owed a trust company in Jamaica when he took the committee of citizens from Hampton there to show the standing of the company and officers. The court ruled the question out. The only thing that interested the court, according to the Vice Chancellor, was whether the company was solvent.

ANTHRACITE OUTPUT LOW.

Last Six Months' Figures Show Sharply Reduced Shipments.

July was the second month of extremely low anthracite production. It is probable that, when the Bureau of Anthracite Statistics issues the official figures next week, it will be found that not more than 5,000,000 tons of anthracite have been shipped to market. The shipments in July last year amounted to 5,391,857 tons.

Operators state that the market for anthracite has not been so dull in years. Most of the colleries are working only two or three days a week, and there is no immediate prospect of a resumption of full time. The expenses of keeping the mines in condition to work—drainage, ventilation, timbering, repairing replacements, inspecting—are all going on, but the amount of coal shipped to market in the first six months of this year was 1,350,485 tons less than in the first six months of 1914.

SCHWERIN REPLIES TO LA FOLLETTE

Pacific Mail Head Says Statement That Company Will Cease Business Is a Fact.

SEAMEN'S ACT HANDICAPS

He Reiterates That the Steamship Line Cannot Meet Financial Obligations Under New Law.

R. P. Schwerin, Vice President and General Manager of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, has written a letter to Senator La Follette answering an article in La Follette's Magazine entitled: "The Ship Owners' Conspiracy." He says in part:

"You state in your article

Nothing in this measure will work any hardship upon an American vessel as compared with foreign vessels. The purpose of Congress in passing this law was to equalize the cost of operation by setting free the law of supply and demand in order to compel foreign shipowners to come up to the American standard. And Congress gave the shipowners eight whole months in which to prepare for the law.

How are these shipowners employing this time?

Take for illustration the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, most often quoted in the inspired news dispatches and business men's resolutions. The Pacific Mail, according to the claim of Mr. Schwerin, its General Manager, is 'going out of business.' The propaganda put forth by the shipping interests asserts that it is ceasing business because of the handicaps imposed by the seamen's law. This is wholly and maliciously false.

"Permit me to say, as an officer of this company and familiar with its policy, that the Pacific Mail cannot operate and meet its financial obligations under the Seamen's act, therefore it is forced to go out of business. This statement is neither wholly nor maliciously false, but is wholly and fatally true. Further, you state:

The controlling interest in the Pacific Mail is owned by the Southern Pacific Railway. Two years ago Congress passed a law forbidding railroad owned ships to pass through the Panama Canal. To continue in its highly prosperous business, the Pacific Mail was forced by law to reorganize in order to run its ships through the canal. And it was back on Feb. 1, 1913, at a hearing before a Congressional Committee that was considering the Panama Canal act, that Mr. Schwerin predicted the action that his company has now taken.

"Congress passed the Canal Act in 1912. Before a House Committee in 1912, conducting hearings upon the Wilson bill, which was introduced by the present Secretary of Labor, I testified that the Panama Canal bill would put us out of one branch of our business and that your bill • • • which was the subject before the committee at that time, if passed, would put us out of business on the Transpacific Line. These hearings, permit me to state, had nothing whatever to do with the Canal bill, but were hearings upon the Wilson bill, which afterward became known as the La Follette bill. • • • The Wilson bill, as I testified, if passed, would put us out of the transpacific or oriental business, and it now appears that the conditions stated in my testimony are coming true. The testimony is a matter of record, and if you care to look up the facts you can verify the correctness of this statement and the incorrectness of yours."

IN CHICAGO NEXT YEAR.

Display Men, In Final Session Here, Choose 1916 Meeting Place.

The convention of the International Association of Display Men at the Waldorf-Astoria came to a close yesterday with the installation of the newly elected officers and the selection of Chicago as the place for next year's convention. A. J. Edgell, the new head of the association, presided for the first time at the afternoon session. A report was read giving details of the amalgamation of the Canadian Association of Display Men with the American organization. The union of the two bodies was ratified unanimously.

A cablegram was received from Edward N. Goldsman, display manager of Selfridge's American department store in London, to the effect that as soon as the war ends an English branch of display men will be organized. When this is done, it is planned to inaugurate an exchange of photographs of window displays in the two countries in order that members here and in England may have the benefit of the latest ideas in showing goods.

At the morning session, A. L. Powell of the General Electric Company made an interesting address, in which he demonstrated the effect that the colors of light have on merchandise. He showed why lights steal some of the color from a piece of material and why some colors of light intensify, while others modify, the appearance of merchandise. George J. Cowan of The Dry Goods Reporter told of the value of the show-window publicity.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Old Factory Sale in Upper Chelsea District—East Sixty-third Street Residence Sale—Junius S. Morgan, Jr., Leases Murray Hill Home—Bronx and Suburban Transactions.

Few deals of interest characterized the realty market yesterday. The upper east side residential section furnished a sale in Sixty-third Street, east of Lexington Avenue, and plans were filed for a new six-story home at 9 East Sixty-ninth Street for Edward C. Jameson.

In the upper Chelsea zone the old five-story factory structure at 334 and 336 West Thirty-ninth Street was reported to have been sold. It covers a plot 50 by 98.9, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues and was occupied by the Auerbach candy firm before the removal to its new building at Eleventh Avenue and Forty-seventh Street. Title to the Thirty-ninth Street property was held by A. Leopold Auerbach.

East Sixty-third Street Residence Sale

The three-story residence at 162 East Sixty-third Street, a plot 16 by 100.11, between Lexington and Third Avenues, has been sold by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company for Dr. George Draper to a client for occupancy.

$187,082 for St. Brendan Apartment.

The six-story apartment house known as the St. Brendan at 600 West 178th Street, southwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue, 94.11 by 100, was bought in at auction yesterday by the Brendan Realty Company, a party in interest for $187,082. It was sold by Joseph P. Day in foreclosure proceedings to recover judgments aggregating about $195,000.

$60,000 Residence in East 69th Street.

Plans have been filed for a new residence in the Fifth Avenue section, to be erected at 9 East Sixty-ninth Street for Edward C. Jameson. Grosvenor Atterbury is the architect and he has placed the cost at $60,000. The dwelling will be six stories in height, of fireproof construction with a frontage of twenty-eight feet. The facade will be of brick and limestone, containing circular dining room and salon on the second floor, library on the third floor and a play room and nursery on the fifth floor.

A Recent Buyer.

Bronx Sales.

The Coryell Building Company has purchased from the Benenson Realty Company the plot, 75 by 167, on the north side of 176th Street, located 73.2 feet west of Boston Road, for improvement.

The selling company acquired the property about a month ago for $6,500 at a court partition auction sale conducted by Joseph P. Day. Louis Schloss and A. F. Burger negotiated the trade.

Blanche Pitegoff sold to the Galveston Building Company, Phillip Jereschowski, Prop., 1,478 Bryant Avenue, a two-story two-family house, on lot 20 by 100, between Jennings and 172d Streets. The property was given in part payment for the six-story apartment house at 1,479 Hoe Avenue.

Bronx Block Leased.

The triangular block bounded by Boston Road, Jackson Avenue and Home Street, occupied by seven four-story buildings, has been leased for five years by S. Segall for H. & M. Rosenwasser to Jaffe & Schlechten at an aggregate rental of about $150,000.

Brooklyn.

I. Salzberg sold for the N. S. Realty Company to the Fort Greene Realty Company two four-story apartment houses, just completed, on a plot of 60 by 100, situated on the northeasterly side of Twelfth Avenue and Forty-third Street. The Fort Greene Realty Company gave in part payment a plot of seven lots on Jamaica Avenue and Cleveland Street.

Long Island.

The Hessels-Dashfeld Company of Bayside has sold to George Sheffield the block front on the north side of Warburton Avenue, between First and Second Streets, Bayside.

John W. Crawford has sold to Quincy B. Street, a plot 70 by 275, on the north side of Chestnut Street, 250 feet west of North Parsons Avenue, Flushing.

In the Fourth Ward, Borough of Queens, the New York Suburbaan Land Company has sold a plot, 20 by 100, on the boulevard to Miss Catherine Boyce, and a plot, 20 by 100, on Park Avenue to William Deacon.

Westchester County.

The Robert E. Farley organization has sold at Nepperhan Heights plots to Leon Sinagnan of New York City and Mrs. F. R. Morrison of Yonkers on Morningsnde Road. At Battle Hill Park, White Plains, two plots on Newcombe Road have been sold to Frank Lewis, and a plot on Alexander Avenue to Conklin & Hill, builders. At Peekskill-on-Hudson a plot on Union Avenue has been sold to Otto Wuestenhofer of Mount Vernon for improvement with a residence; W. B. Creed of Peekskill purchased a residence site, and Charles Miller of Peekskill added to his holdings on Nelson Avenue.

The Mitchell residence and about two acres of land on South Broadway, White Plains, has been sold to Thomas Simpson of Scarsdale.

Commercial Leases.

The lease was recorded yesterday of the third and fourth lofts in the building nearing completion on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street by the Murray Hill Investing Company to A. & H. Veith, wholesale millinery, now at 622 Broadway. The announcement of the lease was made last week. It is for five years from Feb. 1, 1916, at $20,000 a year.

Huberth & Huberth have sub-leased for the Kissel Kar store at 1,696 Broadway to the Sharp-Read Bay Speedway Motor Corporation, and also leased for Joseph Shenk the store at 1,692 Broadway to F. W. Wright, Inc.

Wright Barclay, Inc., has leased at 461 Fourth Avenue the entire first floor for the 461 Fourth Avenue Company to Paul Gerli & Co., Inc., silks, for a term of years.

Private Dwellings Leased.

Junius S. Morgan Jr., has leased for his city home the four-story residence, 123 East Thirty-sixth Street, between Park and Lexington Avenues, on plot 14 by 98.9. The lease was made for the Draper Estate through the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Co.; in conjunction with J. P. Whiton-Stuart. The same brokers have also leased for Dr. Austin S. Riggs the residence at 135 East Fifty-fourth Street.

Pease & Elliman have leased for the Mrs. J. A. Harriott, to Mrs. Margaret Smith, the four-story and basement house, 20 by 100 feet, 147 West Seventy-fifth Street.

Samuel H. Martin has leased for the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America the dwelling, 326 West Sixty-fifth Street, to Mary Scanlon.

The Houghton Company has leased for Gideon E. Fountain to Alice T. Maltby, the three-story and basement dwelling, 114 West Nine-first Street.

REDFIELD HALTS EASTLAND INQUIRY

Will Wait Until Federal Grand Jury Finishes Its Investigation of Disaster.

BOARD OFFERS SUGGESTIONS

Would Have Naval Architects Pass on Plans of Merchant Steamers Before Construction.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Secretary of Commerce Redfield today announced that no more witnesses would be called in the inquiry into the steamer Eastland disaster, which he had ben conducting, until after the Federal Grand Jury had concluded its investigation.

The Federal Board delivered a preliminary report today to Secretary Redfield, stating that as the investigation was not complete, the board was not prepared to fix blame nor state what agency caused the Eastland disaster. Recommendations were made in effect as follows:

A board of naval architects to pass on the plans for steam merchant vessels prior to construction where the tonnage is more than one hundred.

These vessels shall not be put into service until their safety, seaworthiness and stability have been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the board.

An agency to which appeal from this board may be made.

Where passenger carrying capacity is increased by local Inspectors, said increase must be approved in writing by the supervising Inspector of the district.

Alterations to vessels subsequent to construction must have the approval of the Naval oBard.

The report suggests that Secretary Redfield immediately issue the following regulations:

Increases in passenger-carrying permits must be issued by Inspectors only after personal inspection of which there must be a written record.

All Inspectors are ordered to make "inclining tests" where there is suspicion as to stability, the test to be under the supervision of naval architects provided by the Department of Commerce.

The Secretary will leave for Washington tomorrow afternoon, and will deliver a copy of the report to the President. He said he could not predict when the hearing would be resumed, except that it will be after the Federal Grand Jury has completed its work.

Mayor Thompson today received a letter from President Wilson in which he stated that he would make it his duty to see that the investigation of the steamer Eastland disaster was entirely satisfactory to the public.

The letter is in answer to a communication which Mayor Thompson sent to the President several days ago, which contained a copy of the resolutions passed by a committee of the Chicago City Council, demanding that the Federal Government make a thorough investigation of the Eastland accident, independent of the inquiry being conducted by Secretary Redfield.

The Council Committee plans to begin an official inspection of every excursion steamer running out of Chicago tomorrow.

The State Grand Jury devoted the day to consideration of testimony heard in its investigation of the Eastland catastrophe.

Stability tests for big lake passenger steamers ordered by the city as a result of the Eastland disaster began today when the steel whaleback Christopher Columbus was subjected to an unusual inclining test in an effort to tip it over.

The test was held under the direction of United States Naval Constructor Ackerman. Seven thousand five hundred bags of sand, weighing 100 pounds each, were loaded on the upper decks of the steamer, and the vessel steamed to a point in the inner harbor basin opposite Grant Park shortly after noon, where the work of transferring the thousands of bags of sand to one side of the boat was begun.

The test was a success, according to the experts aboard. The great weight of sand listed the boat only twelve degrees.

CONSULS DENY BOMB RUMOR

None Will Admit Explosives Were Found in His Office.

A report was heard yesterday, which persisted notwithstanding the repeated assertions of police officials that they knew nothing about it, that a highly explosive bomb had been found in one of the Consulates in this city. It was said that the bomb was found two days ago and that the police were working on the case. No verification of the rumor could be had at any of the Consulates.

"I know nothing about it," said Police Commissioner Woods last night; "and if a bomb was found in any of the Consulates the matter has not been reported to the police."

WHITMAN NOT ALARMED.

Does Not Take Threatening Letters to His Wife Very Seriously.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Aug. 5.—Governor Whitman, who arrived Wednesday night at his Summer home on Price's Neck for a rest, is to remain there only until Saturday or Sunday. He will return to Albany and on Monday go to Plattsburg, not to be the guest of Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley, as reported in New York, but to address the Summer camp there. He will, however, see the Superintendent, and with him will inspect one of the State prisons.

Governor Whitman does not take very seriously the threatening letters which Mrs. Whitman has been receiving here. He says they are no more threatening than letters he has received many times as District Attorney or Governor. He thought, however, that it would be worse to have the Summer home guarded by watchmen, as the letters were annoying to Mrs. Whitman, she being alone in the house a greater part of the time.

As to a possible change in the wardenship of Sing Sing Prison, the Governor had nothing to say.

Mr. Whitman passed the day working in his little garden, fishing off the rocks of his estate, swimming, and playing tennis with Mrs. Whitman.

ALLEGED POOLROOM RAIDED

Forty Prisoners Said They Were "Union" Men Voting on a Strike.

Detective O'Connor of the Central Bureau counted forty men entering the door of a house in West Twenty-fifth Street, near Broadway, yesterday afternoon, and he asked the woman of the house who her guests were.

"I rent rooms, and a man came here a few hours ago and hired a room to hold a meeting of the Raincoat Makers' Union," she told him. "They are upstairs now, considering a strike."

O'Connor telephoned to four detectives, and when they joined him he led them to the Raincoat Makers' gathering. The detectives say they found the forty men gathered around two tables, on which were charts of the Saratoga and Canada race tracks, but as the police entered, one of the men at the nearest table arose and said:

"'Gentlemen, we'll now vote on the question of a strike.'

"'No, you don't,' announced O'Connor; 'the meeting's adjourned.' The members of the 'union' were all herded into four patrol wagons and taken to the Night Court on charges of suspicion of being engaged in betting. Magistrate Deuel discharged them for lack of evidence.

SAVES SHIPWRECKED CREW.

U. S. Cutter Seneca Tows Waterlogged Schooner Into Port.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Seneca arrived off Stapleton, S. I., last night towing the three-masted schooner Emma F. Angell of Bath, Me., which was picked up at 2 o'clock 45 miles southeast of the Highlands Light with her sails blown away and her decks awash. The schooner was sighted early in the morning by the steamship Bermudian, and a wireless was sent by Captain Mackenzie, her commander, to the Navy Yard asking that assistance be sent to the schooner.

When the Bermudian went alongside the Emma F. Angell and asked if the crew wished to leave, the ship Captain Grey replied that he and his nine men would stand by the vessel to the last. Her rigging, sails, boom, and topmast were carried away and bulwarks stove in by the heavy gale and seas on Wednesday.

When the Seneca got to her the schooner was barely kept afloat by the aid of a steam pump and her crew had almost given up hope. The schooner was loaded with phosphorous rock and was bound from Cheverie, Nova Scotia, to Norfolk, Va., when she was driven out of her course by the storm.

TOOK DRUG BEFORE MURDER

Slayer of Atlan Hotel Clerk Was Cocaine Fiend, Prisoner Says.

Joseph Bourrett, alias Joe Murray, who was arrested in Hartford, Conn., on Wednesday on the charge of being implicated in the killing of Charles Miller, night clerk of the Hotel Atlan, 159 West Thirty-fourth Street, on March 14 last, made a statement yesterday to Assistant District Attorney Deuel and Inspector Faurot in which he again confessed a part in the murder and implicated Barney Korn, now held in the Tombs on a charge of homicide.

Bourrett blamed his downfall on liquor and drugs. He said he had used cocaine and that Korn was addicted to the drug habit. Just before the crime was committed he wanted to back out, and Korn rcused him to action by saying:

"'What's the matter with you? Are you going to quit? Do you want a shot of cocaine?'"

When Korn was told in his cell of Bourrett's statement, he said it was all a lie. He wasn't even sure that he knew Bourrett, alias Murray, and he asserted that the whole thing was a conspiracy to put the crime on him, Bourrett having said Korn fired the shots that killed Miller.

MRS. LIBBY BURNS, 75, IS NAMED IN DIVORCE

Albert J. Kramer Says His Visit to Restaurateur's Widow Was a Joke.

HAD FRIEND PHONE WIFE

Gives Mrs. Kramer $125 a Week and Lives Alone in Room at Back of Atlantic Garden.

A woman 75 years old was named as co-respondent in a divorce suit in Justice Weeks's part of the Supreme Court yesterday. Mrs. Libby Burns, the aged widow of a restaurateur, was cited in the action being brought by Mrs. Charlotte Zahn Kramer against her husband, Albert J. Kramer, whose father owned the Atlantic Garden on the Bowery.

Mrs. Kramer is the owner of stock in the meat and provisions concern of the Sayles-Zahn Company and lives with her two children at the Sherman Square Hotel. The husband is part owner in the Thalia Theatre and the Atlantic Garden at 50 Bowery. He says he has been compelled to take lodging in a single room at the Elizabeth Street end of this property because of financial reverses that have overtaken him lately. He said yesterday in an affidavit that if his wife is trying to ruin him financially she is in a fair way of accomplishing her purpose.

Kramer Says It's a Joke.

The naming of Mrs. Burns, Mr. Kramer's affidavit said, is a joke on his wife. He is 49 years old and his wife is 35. He says he is surprised that his wife took the matter seriously. His affidavit reads in part:

"Her complaint sets forth that on May 18, 1915, at 247 Lenox Avenue, I was guilty of misconduct with a woman by the name of Burns.

"Since the first of July, 1914, when I turned over to my wife practically every tangible asset I had in the world. I have lived separate and apart from her. She has in her custody my two children and I have lived alone, first at 115 East Sixty-fourth Street, which premises I owned, but lost through foreclosure, and now at 50 Bowery, where I occupy a room in the Atlantic Garden, living entirely alone. My wife has continuously resided at the Sherman Square Hotel, where she occupies an elaborate suite of rooms.

"Since living apart from her, the plaintiff has been continuously having me trailed by detectives in an effort to get evidence of misconduct against me. On May 18, 1915, I decided to put a stop to it if I could.

His Friend Phoned Wife.

"Therefore I spoke to Walter Endemann, whose affidavit is hereto annexed, and told him to ring up Mrs. Kramer on the telephone and tell her she could catch me at 247 Lenox Avenue between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening. I never had the slightest intention of wrongdoing, but I thought that if I could succeed in convincing her that it would be futile for her to trail me about I would secure some peace of mind and rest.

"Mrs. Burns is a woman over 70 years of age and I am 49. I knew that Mrs. Kramer knew Mrs. Burns well, and that Mrs. Burns knew her father, mother, and brothers.

"After Endemann had telephoned to Mrs. Kramer we proceeded uptown, and he again telephoned her. When I got out of the cab I saw Mrs. Kramer and a group of men at the corner of the street. When I entered the premises, a brownstone private house, I met Mrs. Burns and her sister, Mrs. Brown, and shortly after that George Oliver came in and Mrs. Brown left. We talked a while in the sitting room, with the windows wide open and the lights lit, in plain view of the street. George Oliver is over 60 years of age. I knew all the time that my wife and detectives were coming.

Interrupted a Social Party.

"The bell rang. Two detectives entered the house and asked for me, and they were shown right into the sitting room. Mr. Oliver had let them in. Then Mrs. Kramer came, and also Mr. Bradley, who is a bookkeeper for the Sayles-Zahn Company. Mrs. Kramer pointed to me and said:

"'That's my husband.'

"And I pointed to her and said:

"'Yes, and that's my wife. And this is Mrs. Burns, and this is Mr. Oliver, Mrs. Burns's brother.'

"Mrs. Burns demanded an explanation and the party then left. At no time was I alone with Mrs. Burns in the room. That is all the evidence the plaintiff has for misconduct on my part."

Mr. Kramer said he was paying his wife $125 weekly under a separation agreement, and that he has turned over to her at least $50,000 worth of property. He said she was wealthy in her own right.

Affidavits substantiating Kramer's story were filed in court by Mrs. Burns, George B. and Crandall R. Oliver, her brothers, and Walter Endemann.

BANKER J. S. FOSTER WINS.

Lillian Benson Drops $20,000 Breach of Promise Suit.

Miss Lillian Benson, reported to be the daughter of a Bishop, failed to appear before Justice Weeks in the Supreme Court yesterday to prosecute her $20,000 suit for alleged breach of promise to marry her, which she started against Jay Stanley Foster, President of the Bowery Bank. Noah A. Stanciliffe of 185 Broadway, attorney for Mr. Foster, requested the court to dismiss the suit. Justice Weeks threw the case out of court.

PERKINS'S PLEA HOLDS PROGRESSIVES IN LINE

Only a Third of Members in Buffalo Likely to Enter Republican Fold.

BUFFALO, Aug. 6.—C. J. Hamlin, leader of the Progressive Party in Buffalo, failed last night in his efforts to carry with him into the Republican Party any considerable element. He resigned as County Chairman, and after a talk with George W. Perkins refrained from introducing his proposed resolution that Buffalo Progressives go over en masse to the Republicans.

The meeting was held at the Progressive Club and was attended by 102 representatives of the party. Speakers began at 8 o'clock and were still talking at an early hour this morning.

Mr. Perkins confined himself to matter-of-fact statements, the substance of which had already been printed. The ideas of Mr. Perkins are said to be those of Colonel Roosevelt.

After Mr. Perkins's speech Wallace Thayer, former Assemblyman, proposed a resolution, declaring faith in the Progressive Party and determination to stick to that party. The sentiment for the resolution seemed to be two to one.

Aiding Mr. Perkins in his efforts to prevent Mr. Hamlin from carrying Erie County Progressives to the Republican camp were William M. Chadbourne of New York, Robert H. Elder, Chairman of the Progressive Committee of Kings County; Edward Zarembs, President of the Progressive Club here, and other local leaders.

Mr. Hamlin continues steadfast in his determination to go back to the Republicans, and judging from the meeting will take one-third of the party here with him.

On the Hamlin side, giving reasons why the Progressives should quit, were Frederick M. Davenport, candidate for Governor on the Progressive ticket last Fall, and Theodore Douglas Robinson, nephew of Theodore Roosevelt and former Progressive State Chairman.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Resolutions adoppted tonight by the Executive Committee of the Monroe County Progressive Committee express its determination to remain with the State and national organizations of the party.

POLITICS BORES COLONEL.

On Bull Moose Party's Birthday He Has Nothing to Say.

Although yesterday was the third anniversary of the founding of the Progressive Party, Colonel Roosevelt would not say a word about the condition of his progeny. The Colonel came to town to talk over business matters at the offices of The Metropolitan Magazine, When he was reminded that three years ago, on Aug. 5, 1912, the Bull Moose Party was born at Chicago the Colonel looked almost bored.

"Have you any appropriate sentiments to express?" he was asked.

"On the third anniversary of the Progressive Party I have nothing to say."

The Colonel's visitors included his brother-in-law, Douglas Robinson, Joseph Medill McCormick and John T. Mutchteon, the cartoonist. He went to luncheon with Robert Bacon, ex-Ambassador to France. Asked if he had talked politics with Mr. Bacon, a blank expression came over the Colonel's face and he inquired:

"Let's see, what party does Bacon belong to? Oh, yes, I think he is a Republican, but if my memory serves me, I think he voted for me."

Mr. Roosevelt was reminded that George W. Perkins had gone to Buffalo for the avowed purpose of keeping the recalcitrant Progressives there in line. It had even been suggested that Mr. Perkins had gone there at the urgent behest of the Colonel himself, but Mr. Roosevelt appeared not to know anything about it.

"Oh," he said blankly, "has Perkins gone to Buffalo?"

The Progressive Club of the Sixteenth Assembly District last night passed resolutions favcring the nomination of Frank Moss for District Attorney.

FOR $8.50 MINIMUM WAGE.

Massachusetts Board Defines Needs of Women Store Employes.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—A minimum weekly wage of $8.50 for women over 18 years of age employed in department and other retail stores is recommended in the report of a special board to the Minimum Wage Commission today.

Employes within this classification shall have had one year's experience, while inexperienced female workers over 18 years shall receive not less than $7 weekly, according to the board's finding. Minors between 17 and 18 years are to be paid a minimum of $6, and those under 17 years not less than $5.

In the opinion of the board these rates are probably somewhat below the necessary cost of living, but business conditions at present are said not to warrant a higher scale.

The board is composed of three representatives of the public, six representatives of retail establishments, and six employes.

BANKER SELIGMAN SUED FOR DIVORCE

REFUSES TO DISCUSS ACTION

Alleges That Husband Has Long Been Absent from Their Home In Deal.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Julia Seligman, wife of Jefferson Seligman, the wealthy New York banker, began an action for divorce in the Court of Chancery here today. She charges desertion in the bill of complaint which was filed by her counsel.

Mrs. Seligman is now occupying the Seligman cottage in Ocean Avenue, Deal. When asked concerning the suit this afternoon Mrs. Seligman said:

"I cannot talk about it now. Perhaps later on I will."

She was also asked if Mr. Seligman was living at the Deal cottage, and replied:

"Mr. Seligman doesn't live here any more."

Further than that Mrs. Seligman would not discuss the case.

Mrs. Seligman at first asked that the matter be kept out of the papers, but when told that the news had gotten out, she laughed and said:

Mr. Seligman is a member of the banking firm of J. & W. Seligman & Co., with offices at 1 William Street, New York City.

The couple were married on March 2, 1896, by the Rev. Dr. Gotthell, a rabbi, of 838 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Mrs. Seligman was formerly Julia Wormser. The petitioner avers that her husband left her on May 31, 1913, and has never returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Seligman were supposed to be very happy together, and their separation was an unpleasant surprise to their friends. At the time Mr. and Mrs. Seligman had not determined whether or not a divorce should follow, and it was hoped by friends that there might be no action.

Mrs. Seligman remained in possession of the home at 11 East Sixty-ninth Street and Mr. Seligman went to bachelor quarters at 14 East Sixtieth Street.

The wedding in 1886, when Mrs. Seligman was only 17 years old, was a social event, and it was said that Mrs. Seligman's dowry was $500,000. As the only daughter of Isidor Wormser Mrs. Seligman inherited approximately $2,000,000 at his death in 1906, and since then her estate is said to have trebled in value.

Salvationist's Story of Scottish Inheritance with Condition.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 5.—Charles W. Chambers, assistant to Ensign Bell of the Salvation Army for whom he conducted successful gospel meetings in Butler and Pompton, called at a local newspaper office today and announced that he had fallen heir to property worth $125,000.

He said he had heard from lawyers that relatives in North Aberdeen, Scotland, had left him an estate of 19,000 acres, which paid an income in rentals of $4,200.

A condition of the bequest, he said, was that he take to Scotland an American wife when he called for the estate. Chambers, who is known as "Doc," says he has been married three times. All of his wives have died, the last only two and a half months ago.

He left this afternoon, saying he was going to Washington to arrange the details of his journey abroad, and said he would pick up another wife on the way.

URGE JEWISH CONGRESS.

3,000 Working Men and Women Take Steps Toward Organization.

A mass meeting of Jewish workingmen and women was held last night in Cooper Union for the purpose of taking steps toward the organization of a Jewish congress, the purpose of which will be to ameliorate the conditions of Jews all over the world. There were 3,000 men and women present, most of them young.

The following resolution was adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, The tragic conditions of the Jewish people in the belligerent countries imperatively demands the unity and greatest efforts of some Jewish people in its struggle for political and national emancipation and regeneration, be it

Resolved, That is is of great importance to convene a Jewish congress of American Jews democratically represented.

Be it further Resolved, That it is the duty of the Jewish labor class to join the movement for the Jewish congress; be it further

Resolved, That the congress shall deliberate and find means and ways to obtain full political, civic, and national rights for Jews and a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

The speakers were Dr. C. H. Zhtilovsky, who presided; Dr. N. Sirkin, B. Zuchermann, Professor Isaac Hourwitch, and Pincus Rutenberg, one of the leaders of the revolution in Russia in 1906. Mr. Rutenberg has been living in Italy for a number of years and came to this country recently to try to unite the Jewish working men in this movement.

ARREST INTRUDERS IN BED.

Police Find Bundles of Stolen Jewelry Near Snoring Prisoners.

Isaac Finger, a dry goods merchant, who had been spending the Summer at the seashore, came to town with his wife in their automobile yesterday and, when something went wrong with the engine, they decided to go to their home, at 231 West 112th Street, for the night. As soon as they entered they saw that it had been ransacked by thieves. Silver, jewelry, and other valuables were missing, and a broken bar in a rear basement window showed how the thieves had gained admittance.

Patrolman Maroney of the West 123rd Street Station, was summoned, and found the scuttle leading to the roof of the house was unfastened. He went to the roof, found the scuttle of the adjoining house also open, and sent for Traffic Officer McGirk. The officers descended into the adjoining house, the front of which was boarded up in the absence of the family of M. Finkenstein, who is spending the Summer at a beach, and heard snores emanating from a bedroom.

Two men, garbed in Mr. Finkenstein's pajamas, were asleep in his bed. Bundles of silverware and jewelry were on the floor near by, some of which Mr. Finger identified as his. The police seized the surprised intruders and took them to the police station, where they said they were Thomas Slater of 1,485 Parker Avenue, the Bronx, and William Day of 221 East 123d Street. They were held in $5,000 each for examination today by Magistrate Ten Eyck in Harlem Court.

Vacuum Oil Co. Puts Up Wages.

The officials of the Vacuum Oil Company in Bayonne, N. J., announced yesterday an increase of wages for the 800 employes to take effect at once. Those receiving less than $2.50 a day are to get an increase of 10 per cent., and those getting $2.50 or more will receive twenty-five cents a day more. This increase is the same as that granted by the Standard Oil last week to strikers. The Vacuum plant was closed down, but there was no strike among the employes.

AGREE ON TERMS OF MEXICO NOTES

Each of Seven Nations Will Send Appeal to Leaders and State Governors.

MEETINGS TO BE HELD HERE

Second Conference Fails to Settle Important Questions—Lansing to Report to Wilson.

SCOTT GOES TO SEE VILLA

Sudden Visit to Border Said to be in the Interest of American Towns Again in Danger.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Determination on a complete plan for bringing peace to Mexico that will have the support of all the American republics, was not reached today at further conference of representatives of the United States and Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala, who met first at the State Department yesterday at the invitation of this Government and held their second session this afternoon. The conference adjourned to meet in New York at the call of the Secretary of State.

Progress was made, however, at today's session of the Pan-American conference. It took the form of an agreement on the general terms of the appeal to be sent to the warring factions in Mexico. The decision was reached that this appeal should be addressed not only to Carranza, Villa, and Zapata, but to the Carranzista and Villista Governors of the Mexican States.

The appeal, however, will not be made jointly by the seven nations represented in the conferences. Each will act separately. The result will be that Carranza, Villa, and the other addressed will each receive seven communications from as many Governments, couched in language practically similar.

At today's meeting the terms of the appeal were presented and agreed upon and the form adopted will be followed by the United States and the six Latin-American countries, whose diplomatic representatives are parties to the State Department conference.

The problem that remains for solution is the course to be taken by the American nations if Carranza declines to come to an agreement with Villa and should use his superior army against a Provisional Government recognized and supported by the seven Governments concerned.

Parties to the conference insisted that there was no significance to be attached to the adjournment and it was explained the delay would be for a few days only. The selection of New York as the next place of meeting was explained on the ground that several of the diplomatic representatives attending the conference were at resorts near there and it would not only be more convenient for them to assemble in New York, but they found the heat of Washington oppressive and wanted to continue their deliberations in a cooler place, or at least a place that was near to resorts, where they might escape the heat when their daily sessions were concluded.

Although there was failure to agree on a definite plan of procedure in dealing with the Mexican situation, there is no reason to believe that the conference was inharmonious. But some of those present felt that the most careful consideration should be given to any step before it was adopted, so that the Governments concerned might be less likely to raise objection to the program. The obstacle to an agreement on a program is that Carranza is expected to ignore the joint warning of the American nations. The question has arisen, therefore: What course shall be pursued if Carranza is defiant? This question the conference will endeavor to answer when they meet in New York.

General Scott Goes to the Border.

What seemed to be a significant development of the Mexican situation was the departure from Washington for the Mexican Border of Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Chief of the General Staff of the United States Army. General Scott left here this evening for El Paso by way of Chicago. He was accompanied by Lieut. Col. Robert E. L. Michie of the General Staff. General Scott's rather sudden departure followed a conference with Secretary of State Lansing and Acting Secretary of War Breckinridge.

There were reports that General Scott was going to Mexico to attempt to bring Carranza, Villa, and other Mexican factional leaders together for the purpose of having them agree to make peace and establish a provisional government in Mexico City. It was learned, however, that General Scott's journey was the result of the violation by the Mexican combatants of what is known as the Naco neutrality agreement, which he arranged personally last year with the Carranzistas and the Villistas. This agreement provided that there should be no hostilities on Mexican soil opposite the American towns of Naco, Douglas, and Nogales, in Arizona. The agreement has been violated this week by the attack of Carranzista troops on the Villa forces, which hold Nogales, Sonora, opposite Nogales, Ariz., and the War Department has ordered several batteries of artillery to the Arizona Nogales, with instructions to drive back the Mexican fighters if they get so near the international boundary line as to endanger life and property on the American side.

It is believed, however, that while General Scott's present mission is primarily to obtain the revival of the neutrality agreement, this Government will take advantage of his presence on the border to have him use his influence with General Villa for the pacification of Mexico should it be found that his services would be useful. General Scott and General Villa are friends of several years' standing.

One of the reasons for the adjournment of today's State Department conference subject to the call of Secretary Lansing was the desire of Mr. Lansing to communicate to President Wilson the outcome of the two days of discussion. When the conferees meet in New York, and it is expected that they will assemble there early next week, Mr. Lansing will be prepared to submit the views of the President in regard to the various suggestions made yesterday and today.

All those who attended the initial con-

GERMANS CAPTURE TWO AMERICAN SHIPS

Oil Steamers Llama and Wico, for Stockholm, Seized and Taken to Swinemuende.

MALMO, Sweden, Aug. 6.—The American steamers Llama and Wico, bound from America to Stockholm, laden with petroleum, have been seized by the Germans and taken into Swinemünde. The Llama and seized on Aug. 1 near Lillegrundet, and the Wico on the following day near Oere Sund.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 6.—It is reported that the American steamer Wico, which was seized by the German authorities, and taken into Swinemünde, was captured after she had run aground at Rugen. The Wico arrived at Swinemünde in a leaking condition.

The Llama left New York on July 11 for Stockholm, and the Wico sailed from Philadelphia on July 14 for the Swedish capital. Both steamers had been held up prior to this voyage by the British authorities. The Llama was detained at Kirkwall on April 6 while on her way to Copenhagen, but was released. Again in June the Llama, while bound from New York for Copenhagen with a cargo of gasoline and oil, was taken into Kirkwall, but was allowed to proceed.

The Wico, while bound from Philadelphia to Scandinavian ports with oil in June, was taken into Kirkwall, but was permitted to continue her voyage when it was proved that her manifest agreed with information sent to the British Government by the owners. The Captain of the Wico reported on May 18, when the ship arrived in Philadelphia from Stockholm, that he believed he had run down and sunk a submarine in the North Sea on the voyage.

DESERTED HIS CAPTAINCY TO FIGHT THE GERMANS

LONDON, Aug. 6.—How a Captain of the British Army in India left his regiment there and under an assumed name joined the British expeditionary force in France as a private, and as a private died bravely in battle, is the strange incident related in an official statement given out today by the British Press Bureau.

The Captain was H. S. Smart of the Fifty-third Sikhs. On June 4 his removal from the service was chronicled in The Official Gazette, it being for his unexplained absence from India. The statement issued today says:

"Since, it has been ascertained that his action was due to his strong desire to join the force in France. He came to this country and enlisted as Thomas Hardy in the Royal West Surrey Regiment, and, serving as a private, he was killed in action on May 17 at Festubert, where he displayed such gallantry that he would have been granted the Medal for Distinguished Conduct had he survived."

Because of these circumstances Smart, though dead, has been restored to his Captaincy.

SARRAIL NOW LEADS FRENCH AGAINST TURKS

Succeeds Gouraud in Command of Their Forces at the Dardanelles.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—An official report given out by the French War Office today reads as follows:

At the Dardanelles, since the beginning of August, there has been no striking development to report, the activity being confined to intermittent artillery duels and much movement on the part of aviators.

The government has decided to replace General H. J. E. Gouraud, Commander of the French expeditionary force in the Dardanelles, by General Sarrail, who has been named Commander in Chief of the Army of the Orient.

General Gouraud was appointed Commander of the French forces at the Dardanelles in May of this year. A dispatch from Paris, on July 8, said he had been wounded in the fighting on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and that it had been found necessary to amputate one of his arms. He was described as suffering also from fractures of the right thigh and the left leg.

ENGLISH WOMEN FORM AN ECONOMY LEAGUE

Object Is Practice of Self-Denial to Aid Government in the Present Crisis.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—A Women's War Economy League has been formed the object of which is to help the Government in the present national crisis by urging the women of the country to pledge themselves to certain definite restrictions on their expenditure during the war.

"The women of England," the promoters of the league say, "have it in their power, by their efforts at home, to help in winning the victory which our brave men are contending for in France. We know that the victory we pray for depends upon our willingness to bear privation and to practice self-denial, and we feel assured that those who have not scrupled to send their dearest to fight will be ready to save every penny to crown their fighting with success. The example must be set by those who have the widest margin of the unessentials of life."

To reduce in every way possible the expenditure on imported goods and strictly to limit the purchase of everything that comes under the category of luxuries.

To buy as few luxurious articles of clothing as possible.

To resist all efforts to introduce new fashions.

To avoid, so far as possible, the use of motors, except for necessary or charitable purposes.

To give up all unnecessary entertaining, both at home and at restaurants, and

To restrict home consumption to the lowest possible limits.

In no case to employ men servants unless ineligible for public services.

The announcement of the formation and objects of the league is signed by the Duchess of Beaufort, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Ripon, the Marchioness of Tullibardine, Countess of Yarborough, Countess of Pembroke, Countess Mar and Kellie, Viscountess Ridley, Cornelia, Lady Winborne, Lady De Ramsay, Lady Islington, the Hon. Mrs. George Keppel, and the Hon. Mrs. Cyril Ward.

The membership fee is fixed at a shilling. Badges at a shilling each will be issued to the members and any surplus arising from their sale will be given to the British Red Cross fund. The honorary secretaries of the movement are Lady Juliet Duff and Mrs. [illegible] Lindsay.

$250,000,000 BUBBLE CHARGED IN ARREST

WAS INDICTED IN ATLANTA

CO-OPERATIVE IDEA USED

Southrons Told Manipulators Were Robbing Them of $120,000,000 a Year Because They Failed to Unite.

Charged with using the mails to defraud on a gigantic scale by the formation of a fraudulent co-operative society for the sale of cotton in which Southern farmers were to be stockholders, Philip C. Wadsworth, a Texan, was arrested yesterday at the brokerage offices of Raymond, Pynchon & Co., 111 Broadway, by Post Office Inspectors Mayhew and Martin on a warrant procured by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Edwin M. Stanton.

Wadsworth organized the Cotton Growers' Co-operative Society, an Alabama corporation with a capital stock of $50,000,000, in April, 1912.

It was stated that there was to be a bond issue of $200,000,000 and the total reserve was $250,000,000. The warrant on which Wadsworth was arrested was obtained by Prosecutor Stanton on an indictment returned by the Federal Grand Jury at Atlanta, Ga., in March last, in which it was charged that the charter of the Cotton Growers' Co-operative Society, which had its general offices in the Third National Bank Building in that city, had been fraudulently obtained, no part of its capital stock having been subscribed for when the application was made, and that it was never intended to have a bona fide capital stock of $50,000,000. It was further charged that the representations made by Wadsworth, who managed, operated, and controlled the society, in letters mailed at Atlanta, were false and made with the intention of defrauding W. J. Speights of Buchanan, Ga.; W. B. Lovett of Luthersville, Ga.; H. A. Childs of Butler, Ga.; J. H. Mizie of Buchanan, Ga., and other investors.

When arraigned before United States Commissioner Clarence J. Houghton, Wadsworth, who said he lived in Texas City, Texas, demanded an examination in removal proceedings. The hearing was set for August 26 and Wadsworth's bail was fixed at $2,500. He was paroled in the custody of his counsel, Arthur C. Fullman, of 302 Broadway, until today to furnish security.

The indictment charged that Wadsworth in the literature sent through the mails represented that it was intended to appoint in each of the counties of the cotton belt a superintendent and supervisors who were to be paid $3,000 a year each and would have an opportunity to make other profits. The superintendent and supervisors, according to the indictment, were to be the leading farmers, business men and bankers in the 800 odd counties and, acting as agents for the corporation, they would have the cotton placed in bonded warehouses and the growers would be paid on the basis of fifteen cents per pound, net, for middling cotton. Three-quarters of this sum, the indictment stated, Wadsworth represented was to be paid in cash and the remaining quarter was to be invested in proposed seven per cent. debenture 20-year coupon bonds and preferred stock of the co-operative society.

It is further charged that on June 1, 1912, Wadsworth represented that the corporation had made sufficient progress to warrant him in announcing that enough work had been done in obtaining representatives in the counties of the cotton belt, and that sufficient cotton was being collected to assure growers a market price of 15 cents a pound.

Wadsworth, according to the indictment, represented to the cotton growers that because they had failed to come together they were "easy marks" for the manipulators who were robbing them to the extent of $120,000,000 a year. The letters and other literature of the society, the indictment explained, were printed in an attractive way and contained his name as President, that of John M. Green as Vice President, A. C. Weber as Secretary and Treasurer, and James L. Anderson, of Anderson, Felder, Roundtree & Wilson, as attorney.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 6.—Hooper Alexander, United States District Attorney here, said tonight that efforts would be made to bring Philip C. Wadsworth to Atlanta from New York for trial about Oct. 1. Wadsworth was indicted here about three months ago.

INSURE AGAINST 3-YEAR WAR

London Underwriters Issue Policies for Peace by Sept. 30, 1917.

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—A fairly large insurance was effected in the London market yesterday providing for the payment of total loss, should peace not be declared between Great Britain and Germany by Sept. 30, 1917.

A good deal was written at four guineas per cent., but afterward five guineas per cent. was being paid.

DAVENPORT QUITS THE BULL MOOSE

SAYS PARTIES MUST UNITE

Announces Defection After Other Progressives in Conference Renew Their Party Fealty.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—The Progressive Party in this State tonight was deserted by the man who was its standard bearer in the gubernatorial fight a year ago. Frederick M. Davenport, in a statement made public tonight declared that he would return to the Republican ranks and asserted that the time had come when all good Progressives should do the same.

Chauncey J. Hamlin of Buffalo, who was Mr. Davenport's running mate on the ticket, has already recanted, as has Colonel Roosevelt's nephew, Theodore Douglas Robinson, who, as Chairman of the Progressive State Committee, conducted the Bull Moose fight in the State last year.

Mr. Davenport arrived here tonight after some thirty Bull Moose, who had been here for a conference, had departed. He said that his decision was due to observations made in the course of six months' journeying in States, both in the East and the West. The time had come, Mr. Davenport said, when the fight for Progressive principles should be conducted within Republican party lines.

"In many Western States and in most of the States in the East," Mr. Davenport said, "there is no real Progressive Party strength left at all. In Washington and Kansas, for instance, the Republican Party machinery is bad and inefficient and government is in the doldrums because of the great loss of fighting blood in 1912. Progress will cease, halt in those States unless the two great groups once more coalesce. In Illinois the path of patriotism and hope is in the union of the anti-Lorimer Republican forces with the two hundred thousand Progressives of 1914. The time is ripe for that.

"In California Johnson and his men can work with any party. They could control the Republican Party in one fight if they went into their primaries. And those are the great party Progressive States of the last two years.

Calls Barnes the Issue Here.

"In New York the outstanding issue is the continued control of Barnes and his backers. All the Progressives have ever said and more has been recently proved before the Syracuse jury and out of the mouth of that distinguished Republican expert, Elihu Root, in the Constitutional Convention. Even if New Yorkers were the dullest people on the earth, which they are not, they would be able to catch their cue from so illuminating a proceeding as the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit.

"And Mr. Root's characterization of the State as having been for years on a plane with that of Venezuela put the finishing touch on the declaration of any Progressive that I have ever heard of.

"But the decent Republicans of the State are hopeless in their fight to oust Mr. Barnes from his National Committeeship and his grip on the machinery unless the Progressives of the State of New York, who were formerly Republicans, enroll again generally in the Republican primaries to aid in the accomplishment of so patriotic and fundamental a purpose. And my judgment is that the great majority of the Progressives would do precisely that thing this year in the belief that the Syracuse trial will make New York a great battle ground of political principle in 1916. The revolution of 1912 cleared the air in American politics and has been of enormous value to the country. But the day of construction has come again and I for one propose to enroll for the contest in the Republican primaries for 1916."

Mr. Davenport has been looking over the situation in Pennsylvania, where he said Governor Brumbaugh was making good in a Progressive way, although a Republican in faith, and added that the Progressives there could best serve the true Progressive cause by enlisting to fight for his renomination in the Republican primaries.

Mr. Davenport comes from Clinton, where Mr. Root has a Summer home and has voted for many years. When in the State Senate Mr. Davenport on more than one occasion was the spokesman of Mr. Root when the latter took sides with Governor Hughes in his fight with the old guard Republican bosses.

Perkins Addresses Conference.

An address by George W. Perkins was the feature of the conference of the Bull Moose leaders held before Mr. Davenport's arrival here. Resolutions were adopted pledging unswerving fealty to their party and urging others who are dissatisfied with conditions in other parties to come into the Progressive camp.

Harrison Deyo of Yonkers, who made public such news as was given out after the meeting said that no conferee even suggested returning to the Republican fold.

Mr. Perkins in his speech insisted that the United States should prepare for peace by changing the tariff and also prepare for war.

"When the war broke out," he said, "we all know that because of the Wilson tariff our business was undergoing depression and thousands of men were being thrown out of work. The large war orders this country received from Europe have enabled us to put these men back to work. When the war stops this war business will stop. These workmen will again be out of work. The soldiers of Europe will go back into the factories and we will have a large amount of Europe's gold.

"Europe has got to get back that gold, and her easiest way to get it back will be to put her soldiers to work manufacturing goods that unfortunately under the present Wilson tariff she can sell to us so much cheaper than we can make them under our usual wage scale, and she will get back her gold.

ASSAILS DAVIS RULE AT ISLAND PRISON

State Commission Charges Department of Correction with Neglect and Indifference.

WANTS WARDEN DISMISSED

Arraigns Conditions and Suggests Reforms — Discipline "Harsh, Severe, and Repressive."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—The removal of Patrick Hayes as Warden of the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island is recommended by the State Commission of Prisons as the result of its investigation of conditions at the institution, which was begun on July 14. In its report, which was made public today, the commission says that the administration of the penitentiary is severe, harsh, and repressive.

It also finds that the Department of Correction is directly responsible for the administration of the penitentiary, and "has shown at this institution neglect of sanitary precautions and indifference to the physical, mental, and moral welfare of the prisoners."

The commission finds that sanitary conditions are faulty, healthy prisoners are doubled up in cells with those who are diseased, and cleanliness is not observed.

The commission found twenty-three things to criticise adversely and many recommendations to make for the betterment of conditions, including the retirement of Warden Patrick Hayes.

It was on July 15, while the investigation of the penitentiary was in progress, that Governor Whitman halted the work of the commission to have it make a report on conditions at Sing Sing. The investigation was resumed on July 22 and was finished on the following day. The witnesses examined included Commissioner Katharine B. Davis of the Department of Correction, Warden Patrick Hayes, Dr. Effler, head physician, and various guards and prisoners. The report is signed by five of the Commissioners, the other two making separate statements. Those who sign it are Henry Solomon, President, New York City; Richard M. Hurd, Syracuse; Sarah L. Davenport, Bath; Leon C. Weinstock, New York City, and James T. Murphy, Ogdensburg.

Under the law the Supreme Court may issue orders to enforce the recommendations of the Prison Commission. In beginning the report, the commission says:

"In view of the prospective removal of the penitentiary the investigation did not lay stress upon the bad physical conditions, except as a basis for recommending amelioration by changes in administration."

Findings of the Commission.

The commission reports these findings:

1.—That the administration of the penitentiary is too severe, harsh, and repressive.

2.—That over a thousand prisoners are confined two in a cell, with an air space of about 180 cubic feet, which is a grave menace to health.

3.—That healthy prisoners are doubled up in the cells with prisoners having tuberculosis and other diseases.

4.—That healthy prisoners eat and work with prisoners having tuberculosis.

5.—That prisoners in the primary and secondary stages of tuberculosis are not provided with special diet.

6.—That all prisoners are confined in the cells about 14 hours every working day, about 36 hours over Sundays and holidays, and about 60 hours when a holiday immediately precedes or follows a Sunday—except for meals and attendance at religious services.

7.—That prisoners are confined in the cells from one hour to an hour and a half each working day after the noon meal.

8.—That the cells are insufficiently fumigated.

9.—That the blankets are not kept clean.

10.—That prisoners are not allowed daily newspapers.

11.—That prisoners have not sufficient facilities for cleanliness.

12.—That prisoners are not supplied with night shirts, sheets, or adequate underclothing.

13.—That prisoners are not allowed to purchase sanitary articles such as soap, tooth brushes, and hair brushes.

15.—That prisoners are punished for the violation of rules of which they have no knowledge.

16.—That the punishment cells, known as "coolers," are not equipped with a bed and that the prisoners sleep on the stone floor with only one double blanket, and received only a slice of bread and water twice a day.

Indefinite Terms of Punishment.

17.—That no definite time of punishment is fixed for imprisonment in the "cooler" in accordance with the nature of the offense, and that the prisoners under punishment are confined there in some cases up to ten days or until released by the Warden.

18.—That the punishment includes confinement in the "cooler," loss of privileges, and sometimes also loss of commutation.

19.—That prison guards on various occasions have struck prisoners with clubs and with their fists.

20.—That on two occasions a hose of about fifty-pound pressure was played upon prisoners who were making a disturbance in their cells.

22.—That no outdoor recreation is allowed to the prisoners.

23.—That the Department of Correction is directly responsible for the administration of the New York Penitentiary at Blackwell's Island, and has shown at this institution neglect of sanitary precautions and indifference to the physical, mental, and moral welfare of the prisoners.

What the Commission Recommends.

The commission as a result of its investigation makes these recommendations:

1. That the Warden be retired.
2. That doubling up in a single cell

GERMANS INVEST NOVO GEORGIEVSK; RUSSIANS RETIRE FROM IVANGOROD AND SEND CIVILIANS OUT OF KOVNO

Cannon Salute in Berlin for Warsaw's Fall; Press Say the Allies Will Minimize Victory

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Field artillery went into action down Unter den Linden today, and after evolutions before the palace the guns were unlimbered, and with their muzzles pointing toward Russia, they fired 101 shots in celebration of the fall of Warsaw. This was the first time such a thing had been done since the war began, and the roar of cannon in the heart of Berlin attracted a huge throng.

Little news is available yet concerning the entry of German troops into Warsaw, except the scanty official bulletins and this official commentary in the afternoon papers:

"The forts of Ivangorod were destroyed by the Russians, but the Warsaw forts are intact. The Russians at present hold the right bank of the Vistula. We certainly do not want to overestimate the possession of these two fortresses, for our main object remains of course the destruction of the enemy's armies, but the occupation of Warsaw and Ivangorod clearly shows how the Russian Army is broken."

The fall of Warsaw will be no nine-day's wonder here. Few Germans are talking about it any more, and the main interest is as to what will happen next. A rumor is current that Kovno has fallen, but this is not confirmed.

The editorial rejoicings over the fall of Warsaw do not begin to approach in volume the recent criticisms of the American note, and make rather tame reading. One thought crops out in all the editorials—that the Allies will seek to minimize the loss of Warsaw, and will try to persuade interested neutrals that it really marks a big strategic victory for the Russians, but that Germany can well afford to let the facts speak for themselves.

The most interesting comment is the Tageblatt's speculations as to Poland's future. It says:

"Germans in Warsaw and Austrians in Ivangorod are facts that stand out as milestones in the war's development. Perhaps they mark the beginning of a new period in Russia's retreat from Europe. It is true that the occupation of Warsaw is a service rendered in the interest of Western European civilization, despite the fact that old and cultured proud peoples like the French and English made themselves the helpers of the now conquered Cossack rule.

"The Germans again guard the threshold over which Cossackism expected to sweep over the west, and the name of Hindenburg guarantees that no Nikolai will soon come that way again. The driving of the Russians out of the Polish capital must make a deep impression on all Poles."

PEACE RUMORS IN HOLLAND

London Paper, Which Tells of Them, Thinks They Come from German Sources.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—Private information enables me to say that the coming Papal document concerning peace will be more definite than the former. The Pope will address himself especially to the neutral countries, invoking their cooperation. He is in consultation now as formerly with all members of the Sacred College on this question and telegrams and letters have been dispatched from the Vatican to the Nuncios and foreign Cardinals. Certain monarchs have already replied to his recent letter and their replies will be published in the Osservatore Romano. A high ecclesiastical personage said to me yesterday.

"The intervention of the Pope is not premature. Everywhere the war is languishing. The German advance in Poland is inconclusive and all the belligerents are wearied, especially those who appear to be victorious. Thus the Pope chose the proper moment to utter his first word of peace, which will be followed by words more energetic and efficacious."

PEACE TALK IN HOLLAND.

Stories Current That Certain Neutral Countries May Start Movement

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Daily Chronicle says this morning:

"The Central News correspondent in Amsterdam, which is the chief outlet of German communications, designed to appeal to the outer world, refers to a Dutch report about certain neutral States, which are disposed to make efforts towards peace.

"It is a curious fact that there has been the same kind of talk every time any considerable German success has been gained. Ever since the fall of Warsaw came to be regarded as likely, a number of symptoms of some such action have manifested themselves in Holland.

"In circles where the feeling is against Germany these efforts arouse the greatest distrust and are regarded as moves, ostensibly designed to serve the cause of peace, but in actual fact made with the purpose of helping the cause of Germany.

"The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, a paper which displays special kindliness toward Germany, has just issued an article on the peace prospects. It gives a general outline of the causes of the war, and adds the opinions from a diplomatic source abroad that England might have accepted the hand, held out by Germany to Sir Edward Grey in such friendly fashion.

"The writer of the article goes on to direct attention to England's battlefield adversities and then permits himself to express the hope that Great Britain will finally have sufficient common sense to listen to the voice of reason and not the voice of chauvinism.

"'There is no reason to suppose,' he says, 'that Germany will impose conditions that will make an understanding impossible.'"

SEES GRAVE PERIL TO ALLIES' CAUSE

London Morning Post Says Russian Situation Calls for England's Greatest Efforts.

GREAT DANGER IN THE NORTH

Times Military Critic Argues von Buelow's Advance Is Most Menacing.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Morning Post in an editorial on the Russian situation, says:

"We would warn the country that the situation is serious. Whatever professional apologists may say, it is certain that Russia has not fallen back from Warsaw for any other reason than the urgent dictates of necessity.

"The great enveloping movement of the German armies on the north is not yet over. It is at present being developed. It is a movement most dangerous and formidable, and it will take all the wariness and skill of the Grand Duke and the magnificent steadiness of the Russian infantry to escape the toils set for Russia's armies by the great strategists who direct the German offensive.

"The cause of the Entente Powers at present is on knife-edge. There is no assurance anywhere save only in that faith which presses forward through dangers without looking to the right hand or the left. We are in front of a situation where the only safety lies in doing the very utmost of which a nation is capable."

Menace of von Buelow's Advance.

That the greatest danger to the success of the attempted Russian retirement is the German General von Bülow's advance in the Baltic provinces, is the view of The London Times military correspondent in an analysis of the situation.

"It is only by acting strongly in the north," the correspondent adds, "that a decisive German victory can be anticipated, and as the German situation demands a decisive victory we must assume that Germany will seek it with tireless energy.

"General von Bülow will not take energetic action for some little time yet, probably not until the other German armies are all in line east of the Vistula and in contact with the Russian rearguards throughout the line.

"Von Bülow has the railroad to Libau at his disposition and probably has connected Shavli by rail with the East Prussian territory northeast of Tilsit. If he is to act energetically toward Vilna his left flank must be secure, and probably for this reason he has pushed his cavalry up to the River Aa, thrusting back the Russian column into the marshes southwest of Dvinsk.

"The immediate business of the Grand Duke Nicholas is to break clear from the armies which are in contact with him, but the threat of von Bülow's army is most menacing of all, and it has not yet in any way been dealt with."

BRITISH "PROTECTING" US.

One English Writer's View of Our Power on the Seas.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Morning Post's naval correspondent, discussing the question of maritime supremacy, says:

"We are told that American private feeling, as distinct from diplomatic opinion, is jealous of the full exercise of her maritime rights by Great Britain. Has America then gained nothing from the control of the seas exercised by this country? The German fleet is still in being and remains a formidable menace to civilization.

"Had the British fleet been defeated, how many merchant ships would America have now? Those vessels of her mercantile marine which were not shut up in port would be at the bottom of the sea. Were the British fleet to be defeated and the war to end, thenceforth America would use the seas only by permission of Germany."

BIG RUSSIAN FORCE IN PERIL

FORTRESS TO HOLD OUT

FIERCE FIGHTING ON NAREW

Hindenburg's Attempt to Flank New Fortified Line Has Been Checked.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—With the exception of the great intrenched camp of Novo Georgievsk, the Russians have evacuated the whole line of the Vistula River. Ivangorod, the southern fortress, having fallen into the hands of the Austro-German Army, the Russians are now making their way eastward to the Brest-Litovsk line.

The decision of the General Staff to leave the garrison in Novo Georgievsk is announced in Petrograd dispatches. The object is to deprive the Germans of the use of railway communication and of the Vistula River for bringing up supplies for their armies.

Novo Georgievsk is situated at the junction of the Vistula, Narew, and Wkra Rivers, to the northwest of Warsaw. It has two powerful bridgeheads, and an enceinte surrounded by powerful forts, containing eleven and twelve inch batteries. It is calculated by military observers here that an army corps can hold out there for many months, as the camp is protected by massive earthworks, which doubtless have been enlarged and improved since the Russians were compelled to begin their retirement.

The Germans are still hopeful of being able to capture a large force in the salient running out from the fortress, which a Berlin dispatch says has been surrounded on three sides, leaving an opening in the rear scarcely twelve miles wide, through which is the Russians only avenue of escape.

Great Experiment in Defense.

The laying of siege to Novo Georgievsk may prove one of the most interesting operations of the war, as it doubtless will show whether earthworks are less susceptible to the fire of high explosives than are cupola forts.

Of the retiring Russian armies the official reports say nothing. The Russians, however, destroyed the bridges over the Vistula and took other means to place obstacles in the way of their pursuers, while others of their forces continue to offer stubborn resistance to the Germans and Austrians south and north who are trying to force a ring around them.

The general opinion here is that the Russians commenced their retirement in time to escape this inner ring, but they have yet to reckon with the wider outflanking movement from Lomza, which, if successful, would turn the Brestlitovsk line.

An even more serious menace seemingly is General von Bülow's advance in the Baltic provinces. While according to Petrograd, the Germans have been thrown back immediately south of Riga, they have made a further advance east of Poniewesch toward the Dvinsk-Vilna-Petrograd Railway.

Some critics believe this move means that the Germans, unless they succeed in smashing the Russian Army, intend to make an effort to advance further into Russia and endeavor to force Emperor Nicholas to accept a separate peace. With the history of previous invasions of Russia before them, however, it is believed in other quarters that the German staff would hesitate at such a tremendous undertaking.

From Berlin, by way of Copenhagen, comes a report that the Russians are preparing to evacuate Kovno, having sent out a great part of the civilian population already.

Nut Cracked, Kernel Missing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Warsaw has fallen into the hands of the Germans without a fight as a result of their strategic moves, cleverly combined at distances of from 100 to more than 300 miles away from the capital.

To that extent, therefore, the occupation is a real success for Germany. It is not a victory, but at least the Germans have now gained, by indirect use of force, what they failed on several previous occasions to win by direct force of arms. The Russian armies remain intact, however, and therefore the Germans are no nearer attaining the main objects of their Russian campaign.

Warsaw when entered by the Germans was not, of course, the Warsaw of a few months ago. It had been leisurely and thoroughly stripped of everything valuable, particular care having been taken that nothing made of copper or brass should fall into German hands. The church bells had been sent to Moscow. All factory machinery had been removed and set to work elsewhere, far away in the interior. Even in cases in which destruction by explosion had been determined on care was taken first to remove all copper and brass parts. The railway stores and engineering and fitting shops have been removed into the interior. In short, the Germans having cracked the Russian nut at Warsaw, find the kernel missing.

The Austrian General Staff has trumpeted still more the empty success at Ivangorod, where the Russians have withdrawn to the right bank of the Vistula, after totally destroying all the defensive works and bridges behind them. Ivangorod is an ancient fortress built of brick and useless against modern weapons. When the Austro-German armies attacked it last October they were thrown back from earthwork defenses hastily constructed far outside the perimeter of the fortress proper. In fact, Ivangorod fortress, one of those condemned five years ago, has served in this war merely as a bridgehead defense, its main strength being in field works erected before it.

The capture of Warsaw and Ivangorod has not altered the strategic situation, for the Germans are still faced with the problem set them by the Russians at the outset. The Russian armies getting away betimes retain full freedom of movement, while opposing to the German invasion the same problem as on the Vistula, but another hundred miles deeper into the vast spaces of all the Russias.

Russians Relieved at Army's Escape.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Russian public has been prepared for the evacuation of Warsaw for some time past, but the pain of yielding up this fine city even to temporary German occupation is none the less keenly felt and no attempt is made here to minimize the moral significance of what has happened. The military necessity for this step is obvious. It is better that Warsaw should be abandoned than that the Russian Army, one of whose aims will be to recover Warsaw, should be surrounded.

On the whole, the retirement from Warsaw and Ivangorod in present circumstances is rather a relief. The prevailing feeling here during the last few days has been that if Warsaw is to be abandoned it would be well if it were done quickly, so that no hitch at the last moment might lead to catastrophe. It is now plain that the whole operation of the retirement has been effected with remarkable strategical skill. The Germans have only won the Polish city at the cost of fierce fighting and very heavy losses and their main objective, the Russian Army, has slipped out of their clutches.

The struggle is by no means over. The Germans will now probably throw redoubled energy into their operations in the Baltic provinces, but the Russians have at any rate accomplished one stage of their very great and complex task with a success that considering all the circumstances, is simply astonishing.

Warsaw has been completely emptied of such stores as might be of military value to the enemy. The Russian police remained in the city until the last minute, retiring with the troops. A Polish civic committee was to administer the town until the Germans asserted their authority. A number of Polish politicians and other prominent citizens, who were reported to be on the German proscription lists have left Warsaw, but those who are identified with purely benevolent work and in no way connected with politics have remained to guide the population through the days of trial that are now beginning.

Polish leaders, with whom I have spoken, fear that under the German regime Warsaw runs great danger of famine. They expect that the Germans will confiscate for their own use the bulk of available stores, leaving the Poles only a minimum.

Thousands of Polish refugees are making their way into the interior. Poland is a desert with blackened ruins. Her case is worse than that of Belgium. The agony of Belgium was short and sharp; that of Poland is long and protracted with armies again and again sweeping to and fro across the land. Yet, in spite of this terrible suffering, the Polish leaders affirm their persistent faith in the cause of the Allies and believe that in the end the agony will prove not to have been in vain.

Warsaw Forts Little Damaged.

BERLIN, Aug. 6, (via London, Aug. 7.)—The forts of Warsaw have fallen virtually undamaged into the hands of the Germans, according to information reaching here. The defenses of Ivangorod, however, were destroyed by the Russians before their retirement. The garrisons of the two fortresses appear to have completed the evacuation without material loss and to have carried away a large part of the stores and munitions of war accummulated in Warsaw for the armies of Polond.

Some disappointment is expressed among the German people at the failure of the Teutonic forces to make an imposing bag of prisoners and guns in Warsaw, but military experts here do not share this feeling. They point out as the real significance of the capture of the two fortresses that the Russians thereby have lost the fortified base of operations which gave them such immense advantage in the earlier movements in Poland and that this advantage now has been trasferred to the Germans, who can utilize it either for defensive strategy or to facilitate a further offensive campaign against the Russian Army.

Chance of a Big Capture.

If prisoners and guns are desired, there is still a chance of making a considerable capture, the military writers say, for the Russians, crowded within the long salient running out to the fortress of Novo Georgievsk, are in a precarious position. With German armies on three sides, the mouth of the sack from which they must escape is scarcely a dozen miles wide, and from the north General von Galiwitz's army has broken through the defensive lines and is pressing irresistibly down toward the Narew River.

No indications of an evacuation of Novo Georgievsk by the Russians have been received here, and Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in chief of the Russian armies, perhaps may intend to leave the garrison in this fortress, which is really stronger and more important than Warsaw, to stand a siege.

The Russians still hold the eastern bank of the Vistula at Warsaw and command the crossing here which is so important in facilitating the orderly retreat by the the railroads and chausees which converge at this point.

No details of the capture of Warsaw beyond the meagre official reports have been received. A number of German war correspondents arrived in the vicinity of the Polish capital a few days ago, but have not yet been able to send any dispatches.

HINDENBURG'S HOSTS CHECKED BY RUSSIANS

German Enveloping Movement from the North Halted by Counter Attacks.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6.—Ivangorod has been abandoned, and Novo Georgievsk, the great fortress and intrenched camp nineteen miles northwest of Warsaw, is the only fortified position on the Vistula-Neva line now in possession of the Russians, and that is invested. Grand Duke Nicholas's plan included the retention of this stronghold by a large force, which has been left to shift for itself and prevent the use by the Germans of the Vistula and of the railroad connections the fortress commands for bringing up supplies.

The immediate causes of the evacuation of Warsaw, according to a War Office statement issued this morning, were "the advance of the enemy in great force on the roads toward Ostrov from Ostrolenka and Rozan, on the one hand, and the presence of large forces of the enemy, who had broken across the Vistula River between Ivangorod and Warsaw, at Maizievitze."

The War Office also commented on the effect of Warsaw's capitulation on the northern front as follows:

"The enemy is slowly advancing, but against great opposition on the part of the Russian armies, in the Narew and Lomza directions.

In the vicinity of Riga the Germans received a severe check on the Missa River. They were forced to withdraw to Ekau, several miles to the southward.

Official Report of Latest Fighting.

Tonight the following official report of the latest operations was issued:

There is no appreciable change in the situation between the Dvina and Niemen Rivers. We yesterday repulsed the Germans.

There was desperate fighting throughout the night of the 4th and all of yesterday on the left bank of the Narew on the Rozan-Ostrolenka-Ostrov roads. A series of vigorous counter-attacks by our troops held up the enemy along an extended front. At a distance of about 10 versts (about 6¾ miles) from the river we captured several hundred prisoners. Violent fighting continues.

Warsaw was evacuated in order to save the town from the effects of a bombardment. The fruitless attempts of the enemy to extend the zone in his occupation is only being continued in the region of Matzievitze.

Between the Vistula and the Bug the battles of the 5th to the east of the military road from Travniki to Vladova were most stubbornly contested. The enemy concentrated the fire of his massed artillery and our troops were obliged to retire a little to the north.

There is no change in the situation on the right bank of the Zlota Lipa or on the Dniester River.

War Office Official's Explanation.

A War Office official, reviewing the situation today, said:

"The day before the evacuation we already had abandoned the old brick fortress of Ivangorod on the left side of the Vistula. We still hold the right bank fortifications, but, inasmuch as this fort has lost its importance with the abandonment of the left bank of the position, strictly speaking, the only fortified point in our hands at present is Novo Georgievsk.

"According to information at hand the enemy has been making every effort to envelop the position, and the fortress has been left to its own resources, to which end it had long been prepared.

"Our armies in the forward theatre of war are gradually moving back to the positions assigned to them, thus giving these armies the important advantage of a shortened front and also of bringing them nearer to the fortified line of Kovno, Grodno, and Brest-Litovsk.

"The retreat was carried out not under immediate pressure of the enemy, but in consequence of a decision taken, notwithstanding some instances in which our armies were having partial successes, often being able to force the enemy backward. With the occupation of new positions on the left bank of the Bug and in the direction of Vladimir-Wolynsk and Kovel it is believed that a serious barrier to the enemy's progress against Brest-Litovsk has been erected."

Other Abandoned Cities Set on Fire.

A letter from Warsaw dated Tuesday, Aug. 3, received here today, says the towns of Jirardoff, Groitzi, and Blonie all were in flames when the Germans reached them. The invaders are said to have been forced to fight fire so persistently in the advance to the Vistula River that the Teutonic armies were preceded by detachments of military firemen.

The loss of Warsaw had long been discounted in Petrograd, and it caused no excitement. The newspaper commented on the fall of the Polish capital without emotion, referring with regret to its loss as a temporary necessity. They are unanimous in affirming that Russia's determination to pursue the war to a victorious end has been strengthened by the enforced evacuation. The Rech says:

"As long as the army is intact we can face the future confidently."

RAINS IMPERIL RUSSIANS.

Austrians Think Position of Foe Between Vistula and Bug Precarious.

AUSTRIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 6, (via London.)—The position of the retreating Russians between the Vistula and the Bug Rivers has grown more precarious as a result of the heavy rains of the past few days.

The marshes in their rear hold the rising water, confining the movements of troops exclusively to a few roads. The retreat, therefore, is encountering increased difficulties.

The Russians are sacrificing men recklessly, trying to retard the German and Austrian advance through counter-attacks which, however, invariably are unsuccessful.

The impression here is that many prisoners will fall into the hands of the Teutons before the Russians reach their new positions.

RETIRING RUSSIANS MAKE A STIFF FIGHT

Often Turn on Teuton Hosts and Deal Hard and Unexpected Blows.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—A dispatch to The Daily Chronicle from Petrograd says:

"It is difficult to write in cold blood of the fearful struggle in Poland. It is well known that the Russian supplies of ammunition are greatly inferior to those of the Germans. The latter's batteries roar unceasingly, their shells plough up whole acres, and the smoke of their bursting darkens the sky.

"It is a marvel that human beings can live in such a hell, yet the Russian soldiers fight in it. They retire but slowly and gradually, and again and again, when the German machinery of death is at full blast, they rush to attack and deal blows as terrible as they are unexpected.

"It has been thus in that fierce wrestle on the Narew, which is now at last drawing to a close. It was thus on Tuesday night north of Lublin and Chelm. There has never yet been such a terrible battle on the Russian front.

"All day long on the thirty-five mile front from the Dratow Lakes near Lenzna, north of Lublin, to Bald Hill on the road between Chelm and Vlodawa, the closely packed batteries of General von Mackensen and Archduke Joseph deluged the Russians with iron and flame.

"The Russian trenches were destroyed, but in the shell pits the Czar's soldiers found new positions ready made and took refuge there. Then when night came they rushed down on Mackensen's phalanx and drove it into headlong flight.

"This success will not permanently check the German advance and the pity of it is that such a victory should be merely a stage in a retreat and not the turning point for a Russian advance. At any rate, it is a pledge that as soon as the munition work, which has now been taken up with such energy by the Russian nation, bears fruit nothing will stay the impact of the Russian armies.

"The combination of a German advance from Rozhan, on the Narew, with another German advance from the north between Kovno and Lomza, has caused the Russians to retire from Ostrolenka and the neighborhood of the Skva.

"The troops in front of Warsaw have retired, in accordance with the general plan, to the line of forts, and at Ivangorod the Russians are drawing in closer, preparatory to a general withdrawal, not only from the fortress, but from the Warsaw region generally. The Polish operation is almost completed and the machinery from the Warsaw factories has been brought to Moscow."

RIM OF FLAMES AT WARSAW.

Capital Half Encircled by Fires and Smoke Just Before Evacuation.

ZURICH, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Munich Nachrichten contains a telegram from a correspondent, eight miles from Warsaw, stating that on Thursday at dawn the Polish capital was half encircled by flames and giant columns of smoke. He ascribes this to the burning of bridges and munition stores by the Russians before evacuation.

The Berlin Tageblatt states that Russian aviators bombarded day and night the advancing German troops during the past week. The strong boxes of Russian State banks and other institutions were transferred inland on Tuesday. The population is described as calm.

REPORT IVANGOROD TAKEN.

Teutonic Forces Are Said to be Northwest of the City.

BERLIN, Aug. 6, (via London.)—The Russian fortress of Ivangorod was captured by the Teutonic armies yesterday.

In Courland, in the vicinity of Popel, northeast of Poniewesch, and near Kowarck and Kurkie, northeast of Wilkomiers, cavalry fighting took place and went in our favor.

On the Narew front, south of Lomza, in spite of stubborn resistance offered by the Russians, the German army made further progress. Between the mouth of the Bug and Nasielak, siege troops have broken through from Novogeorgievsk into the enemy's position south of Blendostwo and have advanced in the direction of the Lower Narew.

As mentioned in the daily report issued yesterday, the Russians after they had been driven out of the outer and inner lines of the Warsaw forts, evacuated the town and have withdrawn to Praga, on the right bank of the Vistula.

Our troops, which penetrated across the Vistula, took some positions of the enemy. Russian attacks were without success. Field Marshal von Mackensen is continuing the fight in pursuit of the enemy.

Northeast of Novo Alexandria the enemy was driven out of his position by Austro-Hungarian troops, and near Bawin, north of Chelm, he was driven out by the Germans.

VIENNA, Aug. 6.—This official statement has been issued here:

Northwest of Ivangorod our allies have made progress.

Between the Vistula and the Bug Rivers the pursuit battles continue.

In East Galicia the situation is unchanged.

OFFICIAL STORY OF REJOICING.

Berlin Streets Like an Ocean of Flags, Says Overseas News Agency.

BERLIN, Aug. 6, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Overseas News Agency today gave out for transmission abroad the following account of the storming of Warsaw by Bavarian troops.

"Bavarian troops under command of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, the 70-year-old veteran of 1866 and 1870-71, stormed the outer and inner forts of the Russian stronghold on both sides of the Vistula River and reduced Warsaw yesterday.

"As soon as the rumor of the great event was circulated through the city the telephone wires were burdened with eager inquiries, addressed to the Government authorities.

"Immediately after the news was confirmed the Berlin streets resembled an ocean, with their lustily waving flags. Church bells furnished a bass voice in the great chorus of joy and gratitude for the unparalleled achievement of the brave armies who have been chasing the Russians from position to position since last May.

"The reduction of Warsaw was announced by an official of the General Staff in a few sober words. The victorious Prince telegraphed his official report to his royal brother at Munich, who conferred upon him the highest Bavarian order, the Grand Cordon of Max Joseph.

"Ivangorod's fall after the capitulation of Warsaw was expected, and the former fortress was taken by the Austro-Hungarian troops.

"Correspondents at the front report that General von Woyrsch massed troops, bridge material and pontoons on trains opposite Nowo Alexandria, which caused the Russians to throw their best troops and reserves toward that town. At night twenty pontoon trains, hidden under straw, and the troops moved down the stream. The engineers quickly threw four bridges across the many branches of the Vistula, and within a few hours the troops had crossed the river and surprised the Russians on the other side. They thus encircled Ivangorod from the north and cut the connecting lines to Warsaw."

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Amsterdam correspondent of The Exchange Telegraph Company sends the following:

"A Berlin dispatch states that General von Kessel, military commander of Berlin, ordered a salute of sixty victory shots fired at noon today in honor of the taking of Warsaw."

Great Demonstration in Vienna.

ZURICH, Aug. 6.—Dispatches from Vienna state that the public manifestations of joy over the fall of Warsaw, which were intensified by the later news of the occupation of Ivangorod by the Teutons, far exceeded any jubilation since the outbreak of the war.

Public buildings and private houses were decorated with flags, and great crowds promenaded the streets. The Ringstrasse in front of the Ministry of War was blocked by people cheering the armies of the central allies. The demonstrations continued until the early hours this morning.

COMMENT ON WARSAW'S FALL.

Berlin and Vienna Press Hails It as a Vital Blow to Russia.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—There is serious disappointment in Germany at the failure to crush the Russian Army. Major Moraht alone of all the critics suggests that Warsaw in itself is an empty victory.

The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says:

"Within twenty-four hours the enemy has received two blows which will not be less painful for him, although he and his friends declare we only aim blows at the air. We know that song of old. We heard it first in the mouths of the English when impregnable Antwerp was taken. As soon as our adversaries see they can no longer hold especially important points, they declare them to be worthless."

The Morgen Post says: "By taking the positions of Warsaw and Ivangorod and places lying between them, the Germans obtain a strong defensive position which under certain circumstances could be defended with proportionately small forces for a continuation of war operations. A new base has been made from which the march to the east can be continued on a broad front."

The Cologne Gazette adds these interesting details:

"The passing of the whole Vistula line into our indisputable possession renders it impossible for the Russians to attack again at Ivangorod. The Russians left behind very considerable stocks of flour. Radom was entirely undamaged and after the entrance of the Allies the factories immediately recommenced work. Novo Alexandra, on the contrary, has been very much damaged by fire."

According to messages from Vienna the capital of the Dual Monarchy is overjoyed and declares the capture of Warsaw represents the failure of the strongest military power in the entente.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 6, (via London.)—"A lasting Russian offensive is no longer to be expected in the near future," says Major Moraht, military critic of the Berlin Tageblatt in a review of the situation in Poland.

"Henceforth, as soon as our attack begins, the Russian defense must crumble because it is no longer adequately supported by rifles and machine guns. We doubt the possibility of reorganizing the Russian Army during the present war."

POLES TRUE TO SLAV FLAG.

Leader, in Stirring Speech, So Tells Russian Council of Empire.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says:

"At a meeting of the Council of the Empire today the fall of Warsaw evoked expressions of condolence from Russian members and a stirring speech by M. Chebeko, a Polish member.

"'The present event affects our country and all Poles to such an extent that it requires nerves of iron to bear the suffering sent us by Providence,' said M. Chebeko. 'We Poles today feel the profound fraternal sympathy of the Russian people for unhappy Poland, but in the midst of this misfortune we recollect the long series of historic facts that have welded the Poles into a people morally and distinctly a Slav type from which it is henceforth indivisible.

"'Permit me to declare that the Polish people are not crushed, but are free by reason of their powerful national consciousness, which shall ever find a worthy place in the Slav family. The Polish people will struggle with you to the last breath. They will never betray the Slav flag.'

"These sentiments were listened to intently by the members of the Council, and the feeling of the Russian members was expressed by Count Bobrinsky, President of the Constitutional-Conservative Party, as follows:

"'We bow before the Divine will, but the greater our misfortune the more intense grows our resolution to wage the war to the end. We weep at the loss of the Polish capital, but Russia does not say good-bye to Warsaw—merely au revoir.'"

LOMZA OFFENSIVE MENACES.

May Threaten Bialystok and Brest-Litovsk, Says Correspondent.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—"The Russian War Office has set aside $25,000,000 to help pay the cost of the removal of Warsaw mills and factories to the interior of the Empire," says the Petrograd correspondent of The Times.

"The Warsaw retreat is less the direct outcome of engagements on the Blonie line and in the Novo-Georgievsk region than the result of the strategic situation as a whole. In the region of Ostrolenka and the mouth of the Skwa the enemy threatened to cut our rear communications and deprive us of the opportunity of regrouping, while by their offensive in the Lomza district, which is beginning to overshadow even the Vistula front in strategic importance, the Germans are striving to effect a deep envelopment of our forces on the Vistula River. Should this offensive be further developed it possibly will be directed against Bialystok and Brest-Litovsk from the north. It is quite likely that Field Marshal von Mackensen will transfer his troops from the Chelm district to co-operate in this attempt. Another factor was the auxiliary operation on both banks of the Vieprz against Lukow, intended to cut the Ivangorod-Lukow line.

"Today's news warrants the conclusion that the fate of Riga is sealed. The country on this side of the Mussa, where fighting is proceeding at present, does not afford the Russians a line capable of stemming the enemy's advance, but is suitable merely for rearguard actions. The River Dvina is intrinsically a more formidable obstacle, but as Riga is situated on both sides of the river it does not afford opportunities for effective defense.

"Two corps of General von Bülow's army have already reached the Mussa. The evacuation of Riga is in full swing. The streets are packed with dense crowds and the stations are besieged with those auxious to leave.

"The evacuation of Mitau was effected by the Post Office employes and the police last Saturday. German residents were greatly delighted at the arrival of their countrymen. They had made no secret of their sympathies."

DESTROY BIG BELLS OF RIGA.

Russians Saw Them in Pieces to Remove Them from Baltic Capital.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6.—Ten thousand persons have been leaving Riga, the Baltic capital, daily for a week.

Among the objects most carefully removed from the evacuated territory are churchbells, many of them often too large to remove whole without erecting special frame work. In such cases the bells are sawed to pieces. Such was the fate of the 300-ton bell in the Warsaw Orthodox Cathedral.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The British Consulate at Riga, the Russian seaport which is being evacuated by the civil population, has been placed under American protection, according to the Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company.

The situation around Riga is not entirely cleared up by the dispatches from Petrograd appearing in this morning's newspapers. No details have been received of the fighting which the Petrograd official communication declared had led to the hurried retreat of the Germans from the River Missa to the Ekau River.

Yesterday it was assumed by the military experts that no serious attempt would be made to defend Riga, and even now it is merely claimed that the Russian success will delay for some days the German approach to the city.

"The German force which has been driven from the Missa," says The Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent, "was not aimed directly at Riga, but attempted to force a passage of the Dvina higher up the river."

There is no definite news of operations against Riga from the sea.

MAY ABANDON KOVNO.

Russian Governor and Bank Said to Have Left the City.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent sends a report he has received from Berlin that the Russians are busily preparing to evacuate Kovno, on the Niemen.

According to this report, the Governor has already removed his offices and staff to Novo Alexandrovsk, 100 miles northeast, and the branch of the Imperial Bank has been removed to Vilna. During the week the whole population has been leaving Kovno. The removal of the wounded from the hospitals is progressing rapidly.

Kovno, a fortress of the first class, is the capital of the Government of the same name in Northwest Russia. It has been stated that Kovno was to form the northern head of the new Russian line of Kovno, Grodno, and Brest-Litowsk. The city has a population of 75,000 to 100,000.

NOVEL VIEW OF RETREAT.

One British Correspondent Sees in It a Centrifugal Movement.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—Telegraphing from Petrograd, the correspondent of The Morning Post says:

"What Russia appears to be effecting now is a manoeuvre that is best understood by recalling the sea tactics of the old sailing days. A small flotilla, threatened by a superior force, but confident of its sailing powers, baffled the enemy by separating to all points of the compass to reassemble at an appointed rendezvous.

"The Russians are now beginning this centrifugal movement, by which they will have several powerful armies always tempting the Germans yet deeper into fathomless Russia."

RUSSIAN MUNITIONS PLAN.

Refugees to be Set to Work—Moscow as Factory Centre.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 6.—Prince Shakhovskoy, Minister of Trade and Commerce, today presented a report, which was approved by the Council of Ministers, suggesting the intensive utilization of such refugees as are skilled laborers in the production of military stores.

According to the plan of the Minister employment bureaus will be opened in the important centres east of the evacuated zones to distribute hands where they are most needed.

City administrations and public-spirited citizens are expected to assist in the distribution of the workmen and care for the women and children.

A large plot of ground near Moscow has been assigned as sites for munition factories. A military and industrial committee and the Zemstvos Municipal League will share with the Government the expenses of rebuilding and reopening the factories.

VIOLENT CANNONADES ON WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Bombardments of considerable intensity have been the feature of today's fighting on several sections of the western front, particularly in Artois, in the Western Argonne, and in the forest of Apremont. German night attacks near Souchez and on the heights of the Meuse were frustrated, according to French official reports.

Following is the official communication issued in Paris tonight:

There have been artillery actions in Artois, between the Somme and the Oise, and in the Valley of the Aisne.

In the western part of the Argonne the enemy has bombarded our trenches during the whole of the day with shells of all sizes. Our artillery and our trench guns have returned this bombardment.

In the forest of Apremont there has been a lively cannonade.

The day has been quiet in the Vosges.

The afternoon communiqué is as follows:

In the Artois district there were during almost all last night a series of engagements with hand grenades around Souchez. In front of Neuville-St. Vaast a German attack was easily and quickly checked.

In the Argonne the fighting with bombs and other explosives, supported by artillery actions, took on greater intensity during the night, particularly in the neighborhood of Hill No. 213. In the region of Fontaine-aux-Charmes and in the direction of St. Hubert, to the west of Hill No. 213, the Germans endeavored to move out from their trenches, but they were at once checked by our fire.

On the heights of the Meuse, at Bois Haut, the enemy delivered two attacks, each of which was without success. Our assailants were driven back with hand grenades and by the fire of our infantry.

In Lorraine the Germans during last night bombarded the village of Embermenil, as well as our positions around Reillon. Two German aviators have thrown down on the village of Fraize, in the valley of the River Meurthe, a total of ten bombs, killing two women and one soldier.

In the Vosges the night passed quietly.

Fighting on and south of Lingekopf continues.

By means of our anti-aircraft guns four enemy aircraft were obliged to land. One was burned and one was shot down. One French hydroaeroplane and its occupants fell into our hands.

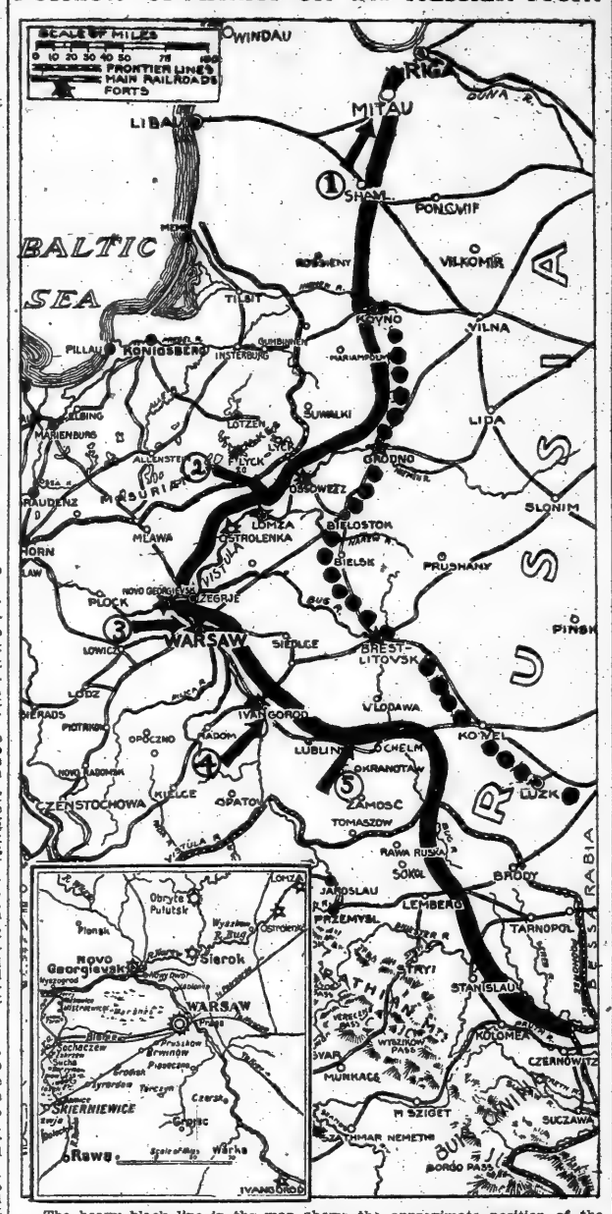
Position of Armies on the Russian Front



The heavy black line in the map shows the approximate position of the Austro-German armies since the occupation of Warsaw. The dotted line shows the new fortified front to which the Russians are now retiring. The insert shows the relation of Novo Georgievsk to Warsaw and how by its situation at the junction of the Vistula, Narew, and Wkra Rivers and on the railroad running to the East Prussian frontier it can prevent the use of these for the transportation of supplies to the German Army. The arrows mark the position of the five great armies that have been rolling the Russians back.

TELLS HOW HE SANK WARSHIP GOLIATH

Turkish Torpedo Boat's Commander Crept Up Warily, Evading British Patrols.

REPLIES TO SIGNAL FLASHES

Gains Time to Approach Enemy—Then Fires Three Torpedoes at Close Range.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 10, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Captain Lieutenant Rudolph Firle, Commander of the Turkish torpedo boat Mauvenet-I-Millet, which sent the British lineship Goliath to the bottom of Motto Bay, off Sid-el-Bahr, in the Dardanelles, has told his story of his exploit to The Associated Press correspondent, amplifying with some interesting details the earlier accounts.

Captain Firle is a man of 33 years, but looks no more than 26. He is a Rhinelander, slight in build, and speaks English almost without foreign accent. The torpedo boat he commanded was one of four vessels of the same class which were transferred from German to Turkish ownership several years ago. Before her change in ownership she was known as the S-165. When asked to relate his experience in sinking the Goliath, Captain Firle said:

"The British ships off the Dardanelles entrances were causing the Turkish troops near Sid-el-Bahr some trouble. It was decided that something would have to be done to remove a little of the one-sidedness of the affair.

"Shortly after midnight, May 12-13, the Mauvenet-I-Millet slipped through the Turkish minefields and approached the British fleet of warships and transports which was lying in and south of Morto Bay. As we passed one of the last promontories the British fleet, with every porthole lit and projector playing, gave all the impression of a large city—let me say like Kiel on Regatta Day.

"The British ships had on that day kept up the bombardment of the Turkish positions until after 11 o'clock at night. On the way down I held a council with my two lieutenants as to the time of night we were to make our attack. We thought at first that the noise of the bombardment, which was then still going on, would aid us. Later we decided to wait until the weary crews had turned in, expecting that after so strenuous a day's work they would be too tired to exercise more than a perfunctory vigilance. It was proved shortly afterward that this theory was correct.

"We continued down the strait at a leisurely gait of from seven to eight knots an hour. I ordered this because I wanted to get as close to the British as possible before they would discover the presence of an enemy's craft. Driving a torpedo boat's machinery at full tilt causes a great deal of noise, and, what is worse, blows too many sparks out of the funnels.

Evades Patrol Boats.

"It was about 12:30 midnight when I saw ahead of me the outlines of two British destroyers. They were patroling the strait. I am sure they must have seen us. But our low speed evidently fooled them. They held to their course and I let our craft glide through between them.

"Beyond the destroyers we sighted eight torpedo boats, churning through the Eserkoi Bay in pairs, each two keeping in a sort of echelon position. I admit that things began to look very interesting. But the eight torpedo boats, like the two destroyers, kept looking after their business, whatever that may have been. So on we went at the same speed.

"Just as we rounded the northern promontory which helps to form Morto Bay, the Silhouettes of two British lineships came into view. I held the torpedo boat for the bow of the nearest, and kept this course until we were close to her. Naturally, I expected to have my boat detected each instant and have a few shells come her way. Nothing of the sort occurred, however.

"To have a torpedo strike squarely it is necessary to have its course run as closely at a right angle to the side of the target as possible. This obliged me to steer to port in a slight curve, because I had decided to torpedo the British lineship on her starboard side, which was nearest to the open water through which our craft would have to escape.

"Our craft was discovered just as her broadside became visible to the lookouts on the British lineships. A night signal flash began to work. Its long and short blinkings spelled out what ordinarily is the Morse letter 'O.'

Answers His Enemy's Signal.

"I wasn't quite prepared to give an intelligent answer to that, but felt that the inquiring was for me. I got to work with my own night lantern, and also spelled 'O,' taking it for granted that a repetition of the signal on my part would at least delay some other action or prevent for a few moments the making of another inquiry.

"The ruse succeeded. After a few seconds' delay the signal man on the Goliath again flashed 'O.' I replied with the same number of dots and dashes, and now come within 350 to 400 yards of the British vessel, amidships, made up my mind to fire the three torpedo tubes. The third 'O' of the Goliath's signal man came more speedily than the preceding one. I launched one torpedo, then number two and three—ten seconds apart.

"The first torpedo hit the Goliath well forward. I saw a blinding flash and a cloud of smoke. Before the second torpedo struck—near the forward mast—the vessel had already listed to starboard.

"By the second torpedo an explosion in the interior of the Goliath was caused.

"Before the third torpedo hit the vessel was as good as totally lost.

"We started on our return trip with a little better speed, but kept the fires down, because I didn't want to have the sparks from the funnels show where we were."

German Manufacturers Protest Against Levy of Middle-Aged Men.

ZURICH, Aug. 6.—According to private reports from Berlin the calling up of the untrained landsturm, between the ages of 42 and 45, in various towns, is meeting generally with vigorous opposition on the part of manufacturers, who have held several conferences with the military authorities.

Until now these classes have been called only from the rural districts.

SEAPLANE FIGHTS AIRSHIP

Tries Vainly to Drop Inflammable Bombs on Italian Dirigible Raiding Near Trieste.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TURIN, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—At present the uplands held by the Italians north of Monfalcone afford them but a meagre advantage against the enemy's left flank, because these positions are at the mercy of the Austrian twelve-inch batteries on Mount Quesceto, northeast of Duino. This last-named vantage point still subjects Monfalcone to shell fire, and the dock yards, hospital, barracks, and other public buildings have suffered considerably.

The Italians, however, continue to inflict grievous losses on the enemy, effectually dispersing masses of infantry relief forces marching from the south and east toward the battlefield.

It has been ascertained that the obstinate night assaults against the wrested peaks of Medetta and Mounts Quesalta and Scharnitz in the Carnic Alps, east of the Monte Croce Pass, cost the attacking columns far dearer than the official reports estimated at the time. Mountain crevices and chasms have been seen wedged with corpses. While the troops were gathering in the forts on the right bank of the Adige the Austrian commander at Roveredo, who had installed himself in the historic castle, was busy sowing with artillery every available steep and razing every building that might obstruct the path of his mortars.

The city outskirts wear already the aspect of ruin and desolation.

ROME, Aug. 6.—The following official statement from the Italian General Headquarters, dated Aug. 6, has been made public here:

There are no events of special importanc from any part of the front on which to report.

On the Carso Plateau, however, we have been able to make further progress. We have taken 160 prisoners, one of them an officer.

Last night one of our dirigibles bombarded the enemy's encampments around Lako Doberdo. It was shelled by artillery, but returned safely to its shed.

Another dirigible bombarded with great effect the railroad junction of Opcina (northeast of Trieste). On its way back it was attacked by an Austrian seaplane, which dropped inflammable bombs without effect. Our dirigible succeeded by its fire in putting the Austrian to flight and returned to our lines undamaged.

The daily repeated attempts by the Italians to attack always terminate in complete failure. Where the Italian infantry assumes an attack the movement either is repulsed by our artillery or thrown back with heavy losses by our infantry. Even well-trained guns and thorough artillery preparations have proved unavailing in altering this course of events.

Thus failed on the night of the 5th and yesterday several attacks—one directed from Sagrado and another against the heights of Podgora, where the field was covered with the bodies of Italians. There were also unsuccessful attacks on the Piava sector, and in the Kean district.

An Italian captive balloon was shot down near Monfalcone.

In the Carnian Aips our troops in the vicinity of Monte Paralva occupied some favorable height positions on Italian territory.

Inside the valley of the Ortler district, (Tyrol) one of our patrols attacked a hostile half company, causing it considerable losses.

ITALIAN AIRSHIP LOST.

Falls Into Sea Near Pola and Crew of Six Is Captured.

ROME, Aug. 6.—An official statement issued by the Italian Government today says:

Last night one of our dirigible balloons flew over the Austrian fortress of Pola and threw bombs on several points that previously had not been bombarded.

For reasons which it has been impossible to establish the dirigible fell into the sea, and its crew, consisting of three officers and three men, were made prisoners.

NO TREATING AT LIVERPOOL.

Liquor May Be Sold Only During Five and a Half Hours a Day.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Aug. 7.—Treating has been made illegal in a new and drastic order regulating the sale of liquor in saloons and clubs here. Credit also has been abolished.

The period in which liquor may be sold is limited to five and a half hours a day.

POPE PREPARES NEW PEACE PLEA

offered by a Swiss newspaper, has drawn from its readers a number of original suggestions.

One suggestion is that all members of reigning German houses should be put into the front line trenches, accompanied by all the Deputies of the Prussian Diet, the directors of Krupps' and the members of the Pan-Germanist Association. In the trenches on the other side should be put members of the Action Francaise, Camelots du Roi, and the editors of French nationalist papers. The originator of this suggestion says that the first volley fired after all these gentlemen had been placed in position would insure a speedy and satisfactory peace.

A French-speaking Swiss woman proposes that Swiss wives and mothers band themselves together under the Federal flag and call to the battle fields women from all the belligerent countries. The whole army is then to march along the front from the Vosges to Arras and interview the generals of the three great armies, demanding the restoration of husbands and sons serving in the ranks.

No fewer than forty-five competitors who appear to be advocates of peace to the knife favor the formation of an army of neutrals which shall force the combatants to listen to reason.

To overcome the diffidence of the belligerent to make the first proposal it is suggested that one competitor that each belligerent should submit its proposals in a sealed envelope. When all have submitted their proposals the envelopes will be opened simultaneously.

To prevent the outbreak of a similar war in the future one competitor recommends the general and total prohibition of sports, the use of alcohol, gambling, and all other excitements tending to encourage a bellicose state of mind.

Another competitor recommends that governments should send all their subjects abroad at public expense in order that they may broaden their minds by travel among foreign peoples.

SWEARS BRITISH SHIP FLEW AMERICAN FLAG

Wireless Man Also Says the Masconomo Impersonated the Texas in War Zone Last March.

The German Information Service of this city gave out an affidavit purporting to be signed by the American wireless operator of the British steamer Masconomo accusing the commander of disguising that vessel to represent the American steamship Texas, and of flying the American flag through the war zone last March. The German Information Service announced that the affidavit was given out by order of the German Embassy, and that a photographic copy of it had been submitted to the State Department.

The copy of the affidavit, purporting to bear the signature of the operator, Paul Richard Fenner, with the name of H. C. Hinds, notary public, does not say where it was sworn to, the day it was made, or the address of the notary. In part, it reads:

On Nov. 3, 1914, I, Paul Richard Fenner, left San Francisco on the British tank steamship Masconomo, filling the office of radio operator on that vessel.

Our first port of call was Kuchinotsu, Japan, and we arrived there on the Masconomo on Nov. 30, 1914, to take coal. On Dec. 24, Thursday, we arrived at Bombay, India, our second port of call. In Bombay the Masconomo discharged her cargo of kerosene, and here our Captain received orders to proceed to Dutch Sumatra ports to load benzine for the United Kingdom. After calling at Sabang, Saturday, Jan. 9, 1915, for Dutch medical inspection and taking cargo at two other Dutch Sumatra ports, we coaled at Singapore, Strait Settlement, and on Tuesday, Jan. 19, left Singapore to proceed to England and way ports.

The Masconomo stopped at Colombo, Ceylon, to take coal, on Jan. 26 and 27, then continued to Suez via the Gulf von Aden and the Red Sea. Friday, Feb. 12, we arrived at the entrance of the Suez Canal, and on Sunday, the 14th, we left Port Said for Algiers, Algiera. Monday, Feb. 22, we again took coal, and left on the following day.

On Monday, March 1, all the names Masconomo on the Masconomo were obliterated. Also on this same day two large signs were painted on canvas with the name Texas on them. Wednesday, March 3, we arrived at the Nab Lightship to take on the St. Helen's pilot. On the suggestion of the Captain and by the sanction of the pilot the signs Texas were hung over the side of the ship and the American flag was hoisted on the after flagstaff.

Thus, on Wednesday, March 3, 1915, the British ship Masconomo was falsely representing the American tank steamship Texas, which, they said, looked similar to the Masconomo, and proceeded over the very spots in the English Channel where the German submarines had blown up and sunk other ships.

I, Paul Richard Fenner, a native-born American citizen, feeling that it is my duty to my country to have it informed about cases such as the above, in view of the fact that United States vessels have been torpedoed by German submarines and realizing the delicate situation now existing between the belligerent nations and our country, do solemnly swear that the above statements are correct and true in every particular, and that this oath is taken freely, without mental reservation for the purpose of evasion, so help me God.

(Signed) PAUL RICHARD FENNER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this — day of June, 1915.

Notary Public.

JEWISH CORPS FIGHTS TURKS

Has Rendered Gallant Service in the Dardanelles Campaign.

The following in an extract from a letter which The Day, the Jewish daily, has received from General Ian Hamilton, Commander in Chief of the British expeditionary force at the Dardanelles:

"It may interest you to know that I have here fighting under my orders a purely Jewish unit. As far as I know, this is the first time in the Christian era such a thing has happened. The men who compose it were cruelly driven out of Jerusalem by the Turks, and arrived in Egypt with their families absolutely destitute and starving.

"As a simple matter of sport, a corps was there raised from them for voluntary service with me against the Turks, whom they naturally detest. These troops were officially described as the Zion Mule Corps, and the officers and rank and file have shown great courage in taking water and supplies up to the fighting line under heavy fire. One of the private soldiers has been specially recommended by me for gallantry and has duly received from the King the Distinguished Conduct Medal."

ALLIES' ENVOYS PRESS SERBIA

Ministers of Quadruple Entente Call on the Premier to Urge Decision.

WANT BALKANS IN LEAGUE

Representations Believed to Have Related to Concessions to Bulgaria.

NISH, Serbia, Aug. 6, (via London.)—Another step in the effort which is being made to bring about a Balkan agreement so that Bulgaria, Rumania, and Greece may be mustered on the side of the Entente powers was taken here today by the Ministers of Russia, Great Britain, France, and Italy, who made collective representations to Nikola Pachitch, the Serbian Premier.

An official communication issued concerning the meeting says that the Ministers' representations were of the friendliest character and were made "in the hope of avoiding friction between the Balkan States and in establishing an entente between them, thus bringing nearer the final success of the Allies in the war."

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The reconstruction of the Balkan League, the key of which is Bulgaria, and its cooperation with the Allies would far outweigh in importance the loss of Warsaw, says The Daily News, which takes hope in the conference at Nish.

The editorial urges the justice of Bulgaria's demands for the territory inhabited by her people, which was ceded to Serbia, Rumania, and Greece by the treaty of Bucharest, and adds:

"It will be a fatal discredit to western diplomacy if the opportunity as offered today is not turned to profit."

These representations made by Ministers of the Quadruple Entente powers to the Serbian Premier coincide with the pressure brought to bear on the Greek Premier, M. Gounaris, on Wednesday, when the British, French, Russian, and Italian Ministers at Athens made united representations regarding the political situation in the Balkans.

The discussion with Serbia presumably related to territorial concessions which that nation might make to Bulgaria to insure the latter's adhesion to the cause of the Allies.

GERMAN CASH TO BULGARS.

Balkan Nation Will Also Escape Paying a Debt to France.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"Information has been received here of the signature of a convention for the second part of the Bulgarian loan for 250,000,000 francs, ($50,000,000,) with the Disconto Gesellschaft. Sixty million francs will go to pay off the Bulgarian treasury bonds issued previously to that banking institution. With 60,000,000 francs more the Bulgarian indebtedness to France is paid by the debt being taken over by the Disconto Gesellschaft, and the German Government issuing an embargo on its payment to France. The remaining 130,000,000 francs are placed at the disposal of the Bulgarian Government in cash.

Big Nitrate Shipments from Chile.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Aug. 6.—During the first year of canal traffic just ended, 651,948 tons of nitrate passed through the Canal from Iquique. Chili, en route to the United States. This is for the use of manufacturers of war munitions, and is the largest amount of one commodity to be shipped through the Canal.

Queen of Sweden in the Red Cross.

BERLIN, Aug. 6, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—A dispatch from Karlsruhe to the Overseas News Agency says: "Queen Victoria of Sweden has written a letter to her brother, Grand Duke Frederick of Baden, gratefully accepting the high honor conferred upon her in electing her Majesty an honorary member of the Red Cross Association."

DYNAMITE HIDDEN ON BOARD ARABIC

NEWS KEPT FROM PUBLIC

Private Detective Found the Explosive Concealed in First-Cabin Retiring Room.

Following the receipt of a cablegram announcing that the White Star liner Arabic arrived safely at Liverpool yesterday afternoon, the Bureau of Combustibles allowed the fact to become known that two sticks of dynamite had been discovered on board the liner on July 27, the night before she sailed from New York for Liverpool.

The dynamite was discovered at 11 o'clock by a private detective employed by the line, who found it concealed under a settee in the women's retiring room in the cabin accommodation amidship. He carried the explosive to his chief on the pier, who sent it to Inspector Owen Eagan the next day. While there was no fuse, detonator, or wiring attached to the dynamite, it was so old that it had deteriorated, the Inspector said, and the glycerine released in the process had made the explosive extremely sensitive to percussion.

Examination showed that it was what is termed "60 per cent." dynamite. Inspector Eagan carried the two dangerous sticks carefully packed in cotton wool to the Sixty-seventh Street plant of the Bureau of Combustibles, where it was exploded in a sand pit.

When the police were notified of the discovery on the Arabic it was requested that the matter should not be made public, because it would scare the passengers. A thorough search of the liner was made by detectives before she sailed on July 28, but nothing more was found in the way of explosives.

After denying that any explosives had been found on the Arabic, the offices of the White Star Line late yesterday afternoon finally admitted that the report given out at the Bureau of Combustibles was correct. One of the officials stated that every care had been taken to see that no strangers went on board the ships while they were in port, and none but passengers allowed on board sailing day. The piers were guarded by detectives, and every piece of baggage searched before being sent on board.

During the month of May fire bombs were found on nine freight steamers chartered by the French and Fabre Lines to carry war munitions to Europe, but nothing had been discovered since until the finding of the dynamite on the Arabic. It is believed that it was secreted on board by some workman who had access to the cabin. Bargemen and longshoremen had been suspected of placing the fire bombs on the freight steamers, like the Kirkwald, Bankdale, Lord Erne, and others, but they could not have gone to the cabin of the Arabic, the officials of the line said.

LIKE CARREL'S ANTISEPTIC.

British Professor Has Independently Obtained Similar Results.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The reports from Paris of Dr. Alexis Carrel's discovery of an ideal antiseptic have aroused great interest in medical circles here, where it was known that progress along apparently identical lines with those followed by Dr. Carrel and Henry Dakin had been made by Professor Lorrelin Smith, formerry professor of pathology in Manchester University and now head of a similar department at Edinburgh. The result of Lorrelin Smith's researches was described in The British Medical Journal of July 24.

Acting for the British Medical Research Committee with Drs. Drennan, Retch, and Professor Lorrelin Smith found that hypochlorous acid was a much more potent germicide than hypochlorites and after investigation of the matter devised a method in which the free acid could be safely used as an antiseptic. The British observers found that the gas was most conveniently prepared by the action of carbonic acid on bleaching powder in the presence of a small quantity of water. The method on which Dr. Carrel is working independently was also arrived at.

OREGON SENATOR FAVORS BIGGER ARMY

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 6.—In my opinion, there should be a law passed reorganizing the army and placing it on a more efficient footing by increasing it to at least 125,000 enlisted men. The War College and the General Staff, acting on instructions from the Secretary of War, are now at work on a plan of reorganization to put the army upon a more modern basis. The result of their examination will soon be embodied in a report to the Secretary.

In addition to this, some method should be adopted for training the young men of the country. The first move should be to compel every institution receiving Congressional aid to embrace military training as a part of the curriculum, and by co-operation with the States all State institutions receiving State aid might be induced to adopt military training as part of their course. In this way a strong and effective force of young men might be trained in military methods and the use of arms.

Some method should be adopted for keeping in touch with the men who are discharged from the army, so that in case of emergency they might be called on. I do not care to speak for the navy, but I feel that it ought to be maintained in the highest state of efficiency. I do not apprehend war, but we ought to be prepared for every emergency, and that, too, without the maintenance of a large standing army.

GEORGE E. CHAMBERLAIN,
Senator from Oregon.

PEARY URGES PREPAREDNESS.

Says It Must Be Our Watchword to Insure Future Eminence.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 6.—Before a gathering of Rotarians, representing many Eastern States, Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary today made an eloquent and forceful plea for preparedness for war in the United States. Admiral Peary expressed his conviction as follows:

"Never before in our history has there been a time so pregnant with far-reaching possibilities as the present. If we can escape the vortex of the present world disturbance, what is to prevent us, when the fierce currents have subsided, from beginning an era of unexampled prosperity and growth, the like of which no one can prophesy?

"If, in spite of our wish and efforts, we are drawn into the struggle, we are having an opportunity to add to our own inherent strength the priceless experience which others are buying at infinite cost of blood and treasure as no nation ever had before.

"Of one thing we may be sure. The world expects now a solution in war's fiery retort will in crystallizing put the United States in a position commanding beyond our imagination. But to insure our splendid future our constant thought and effort must be preparedness, preparedness, preparedness.

"We need to be appalled to the fact of our national inferiority in means of defense, to say nothing of offense. We should begin now with a system based on those of Switzerland, Australia, and New Zealand, with improvements and modifications suggested by their experience and our particular case.

"We need aeroplanes—the modern eyes of war—submarines, and battle cruisers of the largest, swiftest, and heaviest armed type. The present successes of submarines have made some think we need only submarines. That is an erroneous idea.

"Probably never again will geographical conditions of inclosed seas of contracted area and the close proximity of the belligerents be so favorable to submarines as in the present struggle. Certainly they alone are not sufficient for us, where conditions are so different, lying, as we do, between two broad oceans with our possible enemies at long range.

"Some feel we should prepare only for defense. There is no defense so effective as a vigorous offensive. A battle cruiser squadron of the largest and swiftest type, with its accessories of destroyers and hydroaeroplanes, is the long arm with which to destroy an enemy's commerce or drive it from the sea, to strike smashing blows at his home coasts, to make his transport service impossible, and to destroy his fighting ships unless assembled in powerful battleship fleets.

"Submarines will be the guard and battle cruisers the counter for us in naval warfare. Or if we take a simile from fencing, submarines will be our parry and battle cruisers our deadly thrust.

"Aeroplanes are vital to our safety. Eighteen months ago the aeroplane was a sport, an experiment, a mine for the inventor and mechanical engineer. Today it is as vital to our defense and safety as air to the lungs of a warm-blooded animal."

CALLS ON GERMANS TO GO INTO POLITICS

COUNTS ON THE IRISH VOTE

The Fatherland, the pro-German weekly of which George Sylvester Viereck is the editor, announced yesterday it would take an active part in the Presidential campaign next year. The paper frankly asserts that it will support no candidate whose sympathies in the present war are on the side of Great Britain. The Fatherland also says it hopes to see many Germans elected to office next year.

In an advance notice handed out yesterday The Fatherland says with reference to the Presidential and Congressional campaigns of next year:

The motto of Germany has ever been: "In the midst of peace prepare for war." Our motto shall be: "In the midst of war prepare for peace." For, after peace has come, our labors will have only begun. The melting pot of America has been stirred mightily by the events in the world. It has been stirred profoundly by the brazen attempt of the Anglo-Saxon element to stifle the free expression of all Americans whose sources of inspiration are not exclusively found in London. When peace comes much that has been destroyed must be built up again. There are wounds to be healed, but there are also principles that must be maintained at any cost. Today the world is an inferno. We must help to make it a pleasant place to live in. The primary function of The Fatherland must be to interpret the nations to each other. We must teach the Germanic element and the Anglo-Saxon element to be friends, but without sacrifice of our dignity. Just as Germany was asleep when the world was divided, so the German-Americans failed to seize their political opportunities in the new world. They are not opportunities merely, but duties. For us there is no New Fatherland to give it the best that the old Fatherland has given to us. It is not enough to build universities, breweries, and museums. We must assert ourselves in politics. We must bring back to America a sense of Americanism for the sake of which we or our fathers have deserted the old world.

The statement adds "that we shall uphold no candidate who takes orders from London" and that "we do not want a pro-English President," and furthermore that "we do not want a pro-English Congress." It also states that it does not want a "pro-German Congress."

Attacks the Administration.

The principal article in The Fatherland today will bitterly arraign the Wilson Administration.

"The evil advisers of the President," it will say, "admit that he has lost the German-American vote and a substantial portion of his Irish support. * * * They are of the opinion that many Republicans, especially in the New England States, will make up for the defections of the German and Irish electorate."

Continuing, it is charged that Colonel Roosevelt has betrayed the Progressive Party and is playing "into the hands of the Anglo-Saxon war mongers," and that in his speeches Colonel Roosevelt has made himself "the advance agent of the war trust." The charge is made that certain unnamed United States Senators, who are described as high in the councils of the Republican Party, have assured "that if England should weaken the United States would surely come to her assistance."

Secretary McAdoo is referred to "as the mouthpiece of Wall Street" in the Cabinet, and it is pointed out that Secretary Lane was born in Canada and Secretary Wilson in Scotland.

As to the possibility of war between the United States and Germany and the attitude of the German-Americans in such an event, the Fatherland will make some startling assertions. Here is one of the statements:

A war between Germany and the United States would be a duel between an elephant and a whale. Patriotism would not respond strongly because our country would not be in danger. The comparative idleness of a war between Germany and the United States may recommend it all the more to certain theoretical minds. In case of a conflict between the two countries ference yesterday were present in Mr. Lansing's office, when the second meeting was begun shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon. In addition to Mr. Lansing, they were Ambassador da Gama of Brazil, Ambassador Naon of Argentina, Ambassador Suarez of Chile, Minister Calderon of Bolivia, Minister de Peña of Uruguay, Minister Mendez of Guatemala, and Paul Fuller, the New York lawyer, who served as a special agent of President Wilson for the investigation of conditions in Mexico. The conference lasted for more than two hours. At its conclusion it was announced by the State Department that no statement would be made as to what had taken place.

Envoys Fail to Agree.

Prior to the conference at the State Department the diplomatic representatives of the Latin-American countries had a meeting at which they discussed the attitude that they should assume toward various suggestions that had been made. That there was no general agreement among them was indicated by the proceedings at the subsequent State Depart ent session. After the adjournment this afternoon Ambassador Suarez left Asbury Park, where his family is spending the summer. Ambassador da Gama will return to Long Branch tomorrow. Ambassador Naon will then rejoin his family at Buena Vista Springs, Penn., and the other diplomatic representatives will go to the summer resorts, where they have established their legations for the hot season.

Yesterday's agreement that the United States, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala should join in an appeal to the Mexican factions to compose their differences and set up a provisional Government in Mexico City was not disturbed by anything that developed at today's conference. On the contrary, the willingness of all the Latin-Americans to co-operate heartily with the United States in taking this course was apparent. But the issuance of an appeal to Carranza, Villa, and Zapata—even if the joint communication took the form of a solemn warning along the lines of President Wilson's significant statement of June 2—is something radically different from a warning that would be in the nature of an ultimatum which the Governments concerned would, as a means of preserving their own honor and dignity, be obliged to back up by the adoption of radical measures. The representatives of the Latin-American nations, or at least those among them who took part in the discussion, desired to know what would be the next step required if any or all of the factional leaders declined to heed the demand that they get together and re-establish peace in their stricken country.

The United States Government, while determined to exert all its influence toward restoring law and order in Mexico, is not prepared to consider armed intervention as a means to an accomplishment of its object, and it was indicated today that armed intervention might be the only course to carry to a successful conclusion a Mexican program that contemplated establishing a provisional government which did not have the support of the fighting forces of all the factions. As the matter appeared to some of those concerned, Carranza would not accept the proposal of the American Governments that he join with Villa and Zapata in composing their differences and setting up a central provisional authority in Mexico City. The plan of the United States Government contemplates that, in the event that any factional leader rejects the reiterated warning, an arrangement shall be made with the other factions under the terms of which those factions shall organize a provisional government which will immediately receive the active moral support of the United States and other American nations through formal recognition and the placing of an embargo on the shipment to Mexico of arms and ammunition intended for the enemies of the recognized authority.

Doubts of the Envoys.

All this is well enough, in the opinion of some of the State Department conferees, but what assurance is there, they ask, that the recognized provisional government will be able to retain its position with the Carranza forces arrayed against it? Carranza, it is admitted, has the superior forces. He is in control of Mexico City and is managing to keep open communication through Vera Cruz, the principal port of the republic. In these circumstances, it is asked, is it wise for the Governments of the South American countries to attempt to maintain a central authority in Mexico City by no other means than granting formal recognition and seeing that its enemies do not get any war munitions? This problem has given foor for thought to the conferees and they are expected to devote their intellects to it between now and the next week's meeting in New York.

The story was circulated today that some of the Latin conferees were reluctant to approve any plan of procedure beyond the issuance of the appeal or warning to the factional leaders to get together until they ascertained whether the United States had a candidate for Provisional President, and who he was. This story was denied, and there is good reason to believe that in spite of the failure to conclude the business that brought them together, the conferees showed a harmonious spirit and made progress toward a satisfactory conclusion.

The Carranzista agents are still actively at work in the effort to create the impression that the only solution of the Mexican problem is the recognition of the Carranza Government. While this contention is said to appeal to one, at least, of the Latin members of the State Department conference, it is denied that it has assumd any important aspect in the conferences.

One significant development of today's conference was that sufficient progress had not been made to cause some of the Latin diplomats to communicate with their Governments with a view to obtaining instructions as to the course they should pursue. As the situation stands, a definite plan of procedure, beyond sending an appeal to the factional leaders to compose their differences, is not to be determind on, if at all, until after there have been further conferences in New York.

Want All Classes Represented.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—While all the participants in the Pan-American conference on Mexico are in sympathy with the President's plan to induce the military factions to enter another peace conference, and have signified their willingness to co-operate with it to the fullest extent, the South Americans are not sanguine of success unless some way can be found for elimination of the military leaders and recognition of all classes in Mexico.

It is realized that there are questions of vast moment, when considered in the light of Mexico's international obligations and the responsibilities of the nations which are preparing to sponsor her rehabilitation, that cannot be determined in any brief conferences, but must be the subject of deliberation.

Foremost is the extent to which the claims of the military chiefs shall be considered, and what concessions between them can be arranged. It was generally believed that General Scott, in whom General Villa has expressed confidence and to whom he often has turned for advice, will outline to the northern chieftain the need of consideration for the other factions. This was taken to indicate that some of the conferees were impressed that the military successes and the extent of territory conquered by General Carranza would entitle him to a greater measure of consideration than General Villa has been inclined to admit.

Another point is the extent to which the business and industrial element, sometimes called the cientificos, must be taken into consideration. It is urged in their behalf that most of them have not been identified with any military activity. A preliminary conference at the Argentine Embassy, which was attended by Eduardo Iturbide, former Governor of the Federal District of Mexico City, and generally accredited a representative of the upper class of Mexico indicated that this view was given weight especially by the three Ambassadors of the A B C powers, who dealt with this subject at the Niagara Falls Conference last Summer.

PRESIDENT KEPT POSTED.

Satisfied with the Progress of the Mexican Conferences.

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 6.—Developments in the Mexican situation occupied President Wilson's attention today. He was in communication with Secretary Lansing regarding the conference held in Washington with South and Central American diplomats, and the sending of Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff of the army, to the Mexican border to confer with General Villa and other leaders.

There were indications that the President's plans regarding Mexico were rapidly taking shape, and that he was satisfied with the progress being made by Secretary Lansing. Word of a raid by Mexican outlaws on the village of Sebastian, Texas, and the killing of two men was communicated to the President. He was informed that United States cavalrymen had been ordered to the scene of the trouble.

VILLA OFFICIAL EXECUTED.

State Treasurer of Chihuahua Said to Have Been Put to Death.

EL PASO, Aug. 6.—Arrivals from Chihuahua City today declared that Sebastian Vargas, Jr., State Treasurer of Chihuahua, was executed on Wednesday on orders from General Villa.

According to Villa officers who are responsible for the report, Vargas, with Sylvestro Terrazas, Secretary of the State Government, left the capital with their families in automobiles for the border. At Moctezuma, ninety miles south of Juarez, they were arrested on orders of General Villa, it was said, and returned to the capital. There Vargas was executed. The fate of Terrazas was not reported.

SAY CARRANZA CHIEF WILL SHELL NOGALES

Villa Defender Defiant When Called Upon to Surrender Border Town.

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 6.—An ultimatum sent today by General P. Elias Calles, Carranza commander laying siege to Nogales, Sonora, to Governor José Maytorena, Villa chieftain, demanding immediate surrender of the town, was answered by the firing of two shells in the direction of the Carranza camp at Santa Barbara, nine miles distant.

A brisk engagement between outposts followed. It ceased at nightfall, but fighting may be resumed in the morning. Carranza adherents here said that Calles was certain to make good his threat to bombard the town.

The Carranza army at Santa Barbara consists of 3,000 infantry, 1,000 cavalry, many machine guns, and two large field pieces.

Frederick Simpich, American Consul, filed a protest with Governor Maytorena against sanitary conditions in the Mexican town. He said beeves were slaughtered by Yaqui Indians within ten feet of the Consulate and that the American flagstaff was used as a hitching post for mules and horses of the garrison.

CARRANZA AIDS MERCHANTS.

Reports Loan of $500,000 to Start Up Business Again.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Reports of improving conditions in Mexico City came in dispatches to the Constitutionalist Junta here today. Minister Jesus Acuña, head of the Department of Foreign Relations in the Constitutionalist Government, in an extended account of the situation, said that additional troops had entered the city following the arrival on Wednesday of General Pablo Gonzales. The Carranza forces were 8,000 stronger and more troops were expected to arrive during the week. The incoming troops were quartered in the national barracks and in camps at strategic points about the city.

Yesterday it was stated General Gonzales had advanced to the merchants of the city $500,000 with which to pay salaries and make needed emergency payments so that business might be resumed and the people settle down to a peaceable and confident attitude toward the new régime. Everywhere the stores had been opened and business was beginning to wear the old-time aspect of activity. Prices in consequence of the arrival of the Carranzista army fell at once and the condition of stringency was at once relieved.

The price of bread was cut in half the first thing after General Gonzales took charge of the city and the new Government began yesterday to sell bread at less than cost in order to help the very poor to live. Meat still remains high in price as in the case of other staples, but the prospect is, with the resumption of railroad shipments and the movement of supplies under the protection of the new Government, there will be a prompt reduction and demands will be fully met. Supplies are coming in steadily and they have already had an effect on prices.

Every effort possible has been taken to prevent any lawlessness by the troops, and stringent orders have been issued against looting private property, seizing animals, and quartering soldiers and occupying private houses. To make the orders effective the penalty attached for infraction is death. Every detachment of the army in the city was formally drawn up and had the orders read to it. In order to relieve as quickly as possible those who were very destitute, free soup kitchens were started yesterday by General Gonzales, and these are being patronized by thousands.

Governor Lopez de Lara has issued a proclamation guaranteeing to all citizens and to all foreigners equal rights and protection without regard to political or religious affiliation. General Gonzales and Governor de Lara, both state that thus far there has not been a single violation of the orders issued for the safeguarding of property and of the lives and liberty of the people of the city.

The Constitutionalists headquarters tonight received a telegram from A. Aguaya, Commissioner of the Treasury Department of the Constitutionalist Government, now in the Mexico City, who says in part:

"The scarcity of articles of prime necessity has disappeared completely since the capture of this city by the Constitutionalist forces commanded by General Pablo Gonzales, who immediately after his entrance gave special attention to the task of ameliorating the situation of the poor classes by establishing eighty relief posts conveniently located, where corn, beans, flour, sugar, and lard are being delivered. Government stores have 150 carloads of the above articles, and trains with more foodstuffs are constantly arriving from Vera Cruz, whence they are being sent with regularity by First Chief Carranza. Hunger has disappeared completely. Banks, stores and industries, which were inactive during the occupation of the city by the reactionaries, resumed their normal activities the day following the arrival of General Gonzales."

American ships might be torpedoed and American volunteers might die in the British trenches, but on the whole little American blood would be shed. But why should any American blood be shed or any American interest be jeopardized? We ourselves would be most seriously affected, for such a war would create a rift in our citizenship that even time could not heal. Racial antagonisms would lead to results which the mind shudders to dwell upon. These things are inevitable. We cannot, as Mr. Ridder once said, make war against any of the great nations of Europe without making war upon ourselves.

Counts on the Irish.

Another statement in the same article dealing with the possible attitude of Irish-Americans reads:

Even if you could silence twenty million Americans of German birth or descent, can you silence the voice of Ireland? If the last Irishman succumbed to a bayonet there would be enough sturdy Americans who would rise in revolt against tyranny. The only solution would be to place one-half of the American people in concentration camps and to suspend the Constitution indefinitely. That is a little more than even the pro-Ally press is prepared to demand. We submit to autocracy in our Government because most of us do not realize to what extent we have ceased to be a democracy. Let the people realize what decisions are made behind the closed doors of the Cabinet and the gates will be forced open by the spirit of '76. Mr. Morgan may have sold himself to England. He cannot sell the American people.

The article closes with an expression of its appreciation of the remark credited to Vice President Marshall that "the Lusitania was British soil," and adds that "if we are dragged into war," among those who will be heard from presumably in the ranks of the army are ex-Secretary of State Bryan, Senator La Follette, ex-Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania, and several others.

WANTS AMERICAS TO UNITE.

Defense League Official Proposes a Formal Alliance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 5.—A Pan-American Doctrine, to supersede the Monroe Doctrine, which, if accepted, would lead to the establishment of an offensive and defensive alliance between the United States and every republic of South and Central America, and between these republics, will be advocated at the Conference on National Defense, to be held here from Oct. 4 to Oct. 7 under the auspices of the National Defense League. This conference will follow the Grand Army Encampment. The new doctrine is suggested by Winfield Jones, Secretary of the National Defense League. "If the United States should be forced in the future to pour out blood and treasure in maintaining the Monroe Doctrine," Secretary Jones explained today, "it would be equitable that all Pan-American countries should engage to assist the United States with their full naval and military powers. The interest of one is the interest of all in maintaining the political integrity of a single one of these republics. The new Pan-American Doctrine would expand the Monroe Doctrine far beyond its original meaning, would supersede it altogether for something better and stronger.

"An offensive and defensive alliance of all the Pan-American republics with the United States, and between themselves, would enormously increase the resisting force of the countries of the Western Hemisphere against a foe from any quarter."

COMPLAINT BY BERNSTORFF.

Ambassador Resents Story That Germans Sent Huerta to Mexico.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Morning Post's Stockholm correspondent says the customs authoritics at Malmo have detained seven sailing ships and six lighters which arrived there from Copenhagen with American wheat and flour. They were held on the ground that the cargoes were intended to be transhipped and forwarded to Luxemburg.

A license permitting these cargoes to go to their destination will not be granted.

PACKERS RENEW BLOCKADE PROTEST

OFFER A COMPROMISE

Suggest That England Allow Trade with Neutrals Equal to That In Peace Times.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—At an important conference this afternoon between representatives of American meat packers with Chandler Anderson of the State Department, the whole situation growing out of the British blockade as affecting the American meat trade with neutral countries near Germany was discussed. The conference will be continued tomorrow, when a formal statement may be issued, but representatives of the packers admitted this evening that, while they had hoped for an amelioration of the conditions imposed upon them by the blockade, they had no information to support their hopes.

As the packers outlined their grievances, the burdens of the blockade have increased rather than diminished. Earlier in the war they were allowed to make shipments to Holland by billing them to the Overseas Trust, but more recently that trade has been destroyed by the impossibility of communicating with the trust. The use of the wireless is no longer posible, say the packers' representatives, while apparently cable communications are held up by the British censor.

The packers had some definite proposals to make to the State Department, although that phase of the discussion was not concluded this afternoon. One of their proposals, although its acceptance from their point of view would involve heavy sacrifice, is for Great Britain to permit the continuance of exports of packing products to Holland and Scandinavia up to the limit of normal shipments in time of peace.

Great Britain, in her notes to the American Government, has already hinted at such an arrangement, but the State Department has coll

AMERICANS AGAIN FIRE ON HAITIANS

One Native Killed at Port au Prince When Office of Port Is Seized.

ENTIRE CITY CONTROLLED

Navy Department to Rush 850 More Men—Caperton Reports Outbreaks at Three Places.

PORT AU PRINCE, Aug. 6.—American naval forces today took possession of the office of the port, the National Palace and the Haitian gunboat Pacifique, which arrived at Port au Prince this morning.

During the movement to take the office of the port the Americans opened fire on the Haitians and killed one man.

The occupation of the Office of the Port and the National Palace gave the Americans the last positions held by the Haitians. The populace has been thrown into consternation by the operations of the Americans.

The President of the Senate, in the name of the nation, today cabled Solon Menos, Haitian Minister to the United States, a new protest against the occupation of Haitian territory by the American naval forces.

The American authorities have notified the diplomatic body and the Consuls that Colonel Cole of the United States Marine Corps, commander of the American expeditionary forces, is intrusted with the maintenance of order and the safeguarding of life and property.

Captain Edward L. Beach, Chief of Staff to Rear Admiral Caperton, remains in charge of the work of settling any differences of an administrative nature which may arise with the Haitian authorities.

Dr. Rosalvo Bobo, leader of the revolution, arrived here today on board the United States refrigerator ship Celtic. On landing he was cheered by the populace.

A meeting of the National Assembly has been called for Sunday to elect a new President.

Take Over Control of Cape Haitien.

CAPE HAITIEN, Aug. 6.—The American battleship Connecticut arrived here today from Port au Prince and has landed men. The American authorities have taken over the control of Cape Haitien. American marines are disarming the people of the city, and the forces of the revolution have received orders not to enter the city limits.

A number of Haitians, who are candidates for the Presidency, including Dr. Rosalvo Bobo, the leader of the revolution which resulted in the recent capture of Port au Prince and the death of President Guillaume, have left here for Port au Prince to be present at the forthcoming election by the National Assembly of a new President.

Acting upon orders issued by the American authorities, 800 revolutionary soldiers today sailed away from this port on board the dispatch boat Nord Alexis. They are going to Port au Prince.

The local Committee of Safety, not having been recognized by the American naval authorities, has been obliged to disband.

To Rush Reinforcements.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The Navy Department announced today that an additional force of 850 marines will be sent to Haiti as soon as possible. They will leave Philadelphia on Monday or Tuesday on the cruiser Tennessee, and will carry with them 75 machine guns. This will make the total American force on the island about 1,900 men, including a battalion of 300 bluejackets from the Connecticut.

The marines from Philadelphia will be accompanied by Colonel L. W. T. Waller, now in command of marine barracks there. Colonel Waller will be in command of the entire American force in Haiti, and will act under the general direction of Rear Admiral Caperton.

The announcement of this important reinforcement for the expeditionary force in Haiti confirms a previous report that the American occupation of the island would last at least until order is restored on a basis that promises ensuring tranquillity. The department's announcement of the reinforcements explains that they are sent "in order that the duty of the men now in Haiti may not prove too trying under tropical conditions." This is taken to mean that troops already landed will remain ashore indefinitely.

The department desires that the reinforcements reach Haiti as soon as possible. It was explained that the reason why the Tennessee would not sail from Philadelphia sooner than Monday or Tuesday was that she needed to take on stores and coal at New York before putting to sea.

Reports from Admiral Caperton today said that while conditions at Cape Haitien were quiet, there were three outbreaks elsewhere in the island—at Petit Goâve, Miragoane, and Jacmel. He also reported that a mob was theatening the Custom House at Gonaives. He has dispatched the little gunboat Osceola to maintain order and protect the Custom House.

At Port au Prince American forces have occupied Fort National without resistance, finding large quantities of munitions stored there. Colonel Cole is in charge of the military occupation at Port au Prince, with Captain Beach conducting civilian negotiations growing out of the military occupation of the city.

More reassuring are the political advices contained in Admiral Caperton's dispatches. These report that General Blot, who commanded the troops of the Government recently overthrown, had withdrawn from the country, leaving Cape Haitien for Santo Domingo on Aug. 4. The troops of General Bobo have met no further resistance in the north, and are now marching on Port au Prince, where they are expected to arrive in six days. General Bobo's representatives have promised Admiral Caperton that the revolutionary army will disarm in the environs of Port au Prince.

The reports of General Bobo's successes in the interior and his friendly purposes toward the American authorities encourage officials here to hope that some settlement, for the time being at least, may be accomplished.

The commission which visited Cape Haitien to conduct peace negotiations sailed from Cape Haitien today on the Jason.

GUARDING ITALY'S $500,000.

A Deputy Sheriff is guarding $500,000 deposited in a Wall Street banking house by representatives of the Italian Government who intend to use it to buy war supplies, according to Charles J. Hardy of the law firm of Hardy, Stanclifte & Whitaker of 165 Broadway, who appeared before Justice Weeks in the Supreme Court yesterday.

Lawyer Hardy endeavored to persuade Justice Weeks to release the funds by vacating an attachment granted in a suit to recover $495,000 brought by Fiss, Doerr & Carroll, wholesale dealers in horses, against Major Gennaro Salinas, one of the Italian purchasing agents just arrived in this country. The Justice reserved decision.

The horse dealers assert, through their attorney, James A. Lynch, that Major Salinas contracted to buy from them all the horses needed by the Italian Government. The complaint sets forth that instead of buying the horses through Fiss, Doerr & Carroll, Major Salinas arranged through A. C. Miller, a broker, for the purchase of 11,000 horses for $2,085,000.

Half of the 11,000 horses had been shipped from the West to a large horse camp at the Empire City race track, near Yonkers, when Fiss, Doerr & Carroll heard of the Miller arrangement and immediately brought suit. The animals were sold to the Italian Government for $195 a head, the firm asserts, and it wants $495,000 as its commission.

In asking that the attachment be vacated yesterday, Lawyer Hardy told Justice Weeks that the contract, if there was any contract between Fiss, Doerr & Carroll and Major Salinas, was a "jug handled affair."

MME. CARTON DE WIART WOULDN'T GIVE UP HOME

Refusal of German Demand a Possible Reason for Subsequent Punishment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ZURICH, Aug. 6, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The full story of the treatment of Mme. Carton de Wiart, wife of the Belgian Minister of Justice, by the Germans is published in the Gazette de Lausanne from the pen of her intimate friends.

It seems that Mme. Carton de Wiart, who had risked unpopularity by befriending distressed German women stranded in Brussels at the outbreak of the war, came into conflict with the German authorities at a very early date. Some German officers declared their intention of taking up their residence at the Ministry of Justice, whereupon Mme. Carton de Wiart replied that it was her home, and that physical force would be required to eject her.

The Germans shrank from the idea of brutal expulsion and contented themselves with occupying the basement of the house with a force of thirty men and placing sentinels at the entrances to scrutinize all visitors closely. In spite of many vexatious restrictions and insults, Mme. Carton de Wiart proceeded with her work of charity and encouragement until she was arrested toward the end of May last. For seven hours and a half she underwent in the Senate Chamber a cross-examination from her military judges. Replying always with perfect calm and suavity to their questions, she admitted frankly that she had given news to Belgian mothers of their sons serving in the Belgian army, and that—a more serious offense in the eyes of her judges—she had distributed copies of Cardinal Mercier's pastoral letter.

Condemned to three months and a half imprisonment, she was snatched from her young children and sent to Berlin. Baron von Bissing, the German Governor of Brussels, then moved into the house whose legitimate occupier had, by his orders, been sent sent to the prison of Moabit, near Berlin.

Having imprisoned the mother, the Germans began to harass the children. Two of them, girls hardly in their teens, were summoned before the Kommandantur and severely reprimanded for having dared to wear small medallion portraits of the King and Queen of Belgium. Other Belgian children, in protest against this incident, at once began to wear similar medallions, the sequel being that the Governors of the various towns issued as recently as last week a proclamation in which all Belgians were forbidden to buy, sell, carry or display Belgian colors, portraits of members of the Royal Family, or patriotic or political inscriptions. A fine of 5,000 marks ($1,250) or imprisonment for five years is the maximum penalty for a breach of this regulation.

FUND FOR FRENCH VICTIMS.

Chamber Votes $24,000,000 for the Purchase of Wheat and Flour.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The Chamber of Deputies today passed a bill carrying an appropriation of 120,000,000 francs ($24,000,000) to be used in the purchase of wheat and flour for feeding the civil population. The limit of such purchases is fixed at 200,000,000 francs. ($41,800,000).

The bill authorizes Prefects under the control of the Minister of Commerce to requisition wheat and flour in France and empowers the Minister of Commerce to make purchases in the colonies or abroad and to distribute supplies according to the needs. The measure also creates an Advisory Committee.

The new Under Secretary of War, Joseph Thierry, who is called "Minister of Supplies," speaking in favor of the bill, frankly admitted that there had been waste and disorganization in purchasing army supplies, but he assured the Chamber that reorganization was well under way.

An attempt by the Socialists to attach to the bill a rider, creating a Government monopoly of grain, was defeated by a vote of 364 to 138.

FRENCH NAMES FOR ROSES.

Matin Insists That German Designations Be Dropped.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Under the heading "Unbooche our roses," the Matin appeals to French horticulturists to remove German names from the lists of flowers. In recent years the Germans have produced several new varieties from crossing French roses—the Frau Karl Druschki from a cross of the Merveille de Lyon and Madame Caroline Testout and the Farben Königin from crosses of La France roses. Among French roses are the Kronprinzessin Victoria, Grossherzogin Louise, Kaiserin Augusta, which, says the Matin, "ought to be changed with the same promptitude as the Rue de Berlin became Rue de Liége"

URGE BRITISH TARIFF TO BAR OUR AUTOS

American Cars Sweeping the Market While English Plants Are Busy Making Munitions.

MANUFACTURERS IN DISMAY

Imports of Motors from Here This Year Already $7,000,000 in Excess of Last Year's Total.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Agitation is going on among British motor car manufacturers to check imports of motor cars from America, which since the beginning of the war have been increasing rapidly. While during 1914 approximately 10,000 cars were imported into England from America, the imports since the first of this year already have amounted to more than 15,000, while hundreds of automobiles which were ordered months ago are overdue.

All this surplus of cars, or nearly all of it, manufacturers here say, means that because of the war America has been able to encroach on the British product. The British manufacturers have been unable to turn out the usual supply because many of their factories have been transformed into munitions plants, with the result that while doing a patriotic service to the country they are being crowded out of their legitimate business. So alarmed have the British manufacturers become over the prospect of their trade being drawn away by American makers that they are urging the British Government to take the matter up.

Arthur Fell, M. P., responding to the persuasions of the British manufacturers, announced himself in favor of Parliament putting a heavy duty on American made cars, so that the purchase of them here would be at a price practically prohibitive. Mr. Fell goes so far as to suggest that under the Defense of the Realm act it might even be advisable to forbid the purchase of any American cars while the war is on. He assumes this attitude, he explains, on the ground that some drastic expedient is necessary to save an industry that British manufacturers for the last ten years have been working to develop. Mr. Fell points out that British makers of cars had difficulty in competing with foreign made cars for years and that before they put cars on the market that found ready sale, French, Italian, and American makers had made great inroads in the trade. Now that the Britons have established a flourishing industry, he says, the exigencies of war threaten to knock the props from under it.

Mr. Fell asserts that inasmuch as nearly $8,000,000 was paid out by British purchasers of American cars last year, and that this year the figure has already run past $15,000,000, it is obvious that the buying of American made cars means a considerable flow of gold to America. Mr. Fell urges that to shut down on American imports of motor cars is one way in which the Government can appreciably diminish the gold outflow it so ardently desires to check. He has submitted his proposals to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

An official of the Ford Motor Car Company, of which Henry Ford of Detroit is the head, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that, while there was no doubt that American cars were being bought more extensively than before the war, it was a situation that could not actually be avoided.

"While our own increase in sales is not due so much to the war purchases as to the expansion of our business here," he said, "it is a fact that nearly all American automobile makers are greatly profiting by the shortage in British cars. The reason simply is that cars have got to be had for war and other purposes and that British firms, because of the unfortunate circumstances due to the war, are unable to supply them. America, therefore, is the only country to which Great Britain can turn for cars. If a high tariff is put on American cars it only means that Great Britain will have to pay more for each car for the cars it must buy. There is no getting around it. Great Britian has to look to America for nearly all of the heavy war motor trucks now, since its own factories that used to make them are turning out munitions. It can be the same with nearly all the other automobile war output.

"As to what the future of the British automobile industry will be after the war, it is hard to say. Naturally it is hard for British makers to realize that the flood being swept from them, but there is no way of overcoming it now. After the war, undoubtedly the whole trade will be readjusted so the British maker once more will come into his own."

3. That all prisoners having tuberculosis be separated from healthy prisoners in sleeping, and advanced cases be separated in eating and working.

4. That tuberculous prisoners be transferred to Hart's or Riker's Island, and those not transferred be kept in cells and be supplied with proper diet.

5. That convalescent prisoners unable to work be formed into an invalid company and allowed out of doors with an officer.

6. That the cracks in the cells be cemented, the interior of the cells painted white.

7. That nightshirts or sheets and underclothing when necessary be furnished to the prisoners.

8. That the prisoners be allowed in the corridors or in the exercise yard after the noon meal, and be not confined in their cells, and that visiting hours be changed to Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

9. That the prisoners be permitted to receive daily newspapers.

10. That family photographs and pictures of a proper character be allowed in the cells.

11. That the prisoners be allowed to write one letter weekly at the expense of the institution and as many letters as they desire at their own expense.

12. That there be fire drills in the nonfireproof workshops.

13. That a stricter standard of cleanliness be set in the laundry, and that a steam sterilizer be provided.

14. That copies of a new set of rules be printed and put in every cell and on placards in the corridors and that knowledge of the rules be conveyed to all non-English-speaking prisoners.

15. That wooden floors be placed in the punishment cells.

16. That prisoners undergoing punishment be allowed half a loaf of bread twice a day and all the water they desire to drink twice a day, and be allowed to wash and to exercise in the punishment corridor.

17. That the period of confinement in the "cooler" be limited to five days, and that loss of privileges and of commutation be graded in accordance with the nature of the offense, and that the aim of punishment should not be to break the spirit of the prisoners.

Orders "Hosing" Abolished.

18. That "hosing" the prisoners with a high-pressure fire hose be abolished.

19. That short-term prisoners be not treated more harshly than men at the State's prisons, and that every effort be made not to degrade them.

20. That the school be better developed and some technical and higher instruction be provided, possibly by inmate teachers.

21.—That entertainments of an educational and reformative character be provided on occasional evenings, and that prisoners be permitted to play musical instruments in their cells subject to the discretion of the Warden.

22. That an exercise ground inclosed with a temporary fence be provided for the recreation of prisoners and that they may be allowed to use it at least one hour every working day, also Sunday afternoons and holidays.

23. That the administration realizes that its full duty is not done where prisoners are simply kept from escaping and live the usual routine of prison life, but that systematic and sympathetic efforts be made for the physical, mental and moral improvement of the prisoners to the end that they may issue from the penitentiary better men.

Views of the Minority.

Commissioner Frank E. Wade of Buffalo and Dr. Rudolph F. Diedling of Saugerties did not sign the report. Commissioner Frank E. Wade agrees with the findings and recommendations except the twenty-third finding, concerning which he says:

"I disagree with the twenty-third finding and believe that the Commissioner of Correction is not responsible for the faults of administration as appears by her testimony at the investigation."

Dr. Diedling excepts to the first and eighteenth recommendations, agreeing to all others, concerning which he says:

"I do not concur in the first recommendation 'that the Warden be retired' for the following reasons: I believe Warden Hayes to be a capable prison official whose experience extends over a period of more than fifty years.

"Whatever defects in the management of the penitentiary were revealed during the investigation are attributable to the Commissioner of Correction rather than to the Warden, as this institution is under the direct administration of said Commissioner who has sufficient power to correct all abuses, such power extending to the right of removal of all officials, including the Warden, and the fact that the Commissioner of Correction has not used these powers to correct abuses in existence is sufficient proof that the Warden has had the Commissioner's approval in all his acts and that such of these as are now complained of as abuses were performed with the knowledge and consent and under the direction of said Commissioner.

"To the recommendation 'that hosing the prisoners with a high-pressure fire hose be abolished,' I would add 'except as a means of quelling a riot or insurrection among the prisoners.'

"My reason for wishing these words added to this recommendation is because I think the use of a stream of water from a fire hose is a more humane and sensible method of quelling a riot or insurrection than the use of clubs or revolvers."

DR. DAVIS AWAITS REPORT.

Reserves Comment, but Says Recommendations Are Not Binding.

A summary of the report of the State Commission on Prisons was read last night to Commissioner Katharine B. Davis. She said she did not consider it courteous to the commission to discuss the report until she had received an official copy.

"Will you remove Warden Hayes, as recommended by the report?" Dr. Davis was asked.

'I am not bound at all by the recommendations of the commission," was the Commissioner's reply.

"As soon as I have digested the report I will make a statement," she continued. "I have nothing more to say about it now."

VANITIE BEATS RESOLUTE EASILY—TENNIS

CUP YACHT VANITIE OUTSAILS RESOLUTE

A. S. Cochran's Sloop Wins by Margin of 9 Minutes and 31 Seconds, Corrected Time.

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Mass., Aug. 6.—In what is considered the supreme test of sailing, windward work, Alexander Smith Cochran's Vanitie today defeated the syndicate cup defender Resolute by 10 minutes 55 seconds actual time and 9 minutes 31 seconds corrected time. It was in a run of thirty-three miles from the Brentons Reef Lightship, off Newport Harbor, to a mark set in the dumping ground in Buzzards Bay, off Falmouth, Mass. The race was a dead beat to windward of twenty-one miles from Brentons Reef Lightship to the entrance to Buzzards Bay in a light easterly wind of about eight knots. This softened a bit just after the competing craft passed West Island, and shifted to east-southeast, increasing to about twelve knots as the racers entered the mouth of the bay. There they found a fair tide running and were able to lay their course direct to the finish, giving both a close reach for the last twelve miles of the run.

When the two racers started at 11:10 o'clock the skies were gray and the clouds low lying, with just a trace of the dense fog of early morning left in the offing, where a flotilla of torpedo boats and destroyers were manoeuvring, barely visible in atmosphere that seemed thick with impending rain. Vanitie, with Cornelius Vanderbilt and W. Butler Duncan in the cockpit, was first at the lightship. Resolute followed a few minutes later with Robert W. Emmons, 2d, and Charles Francis Adams, 2d, directing her movements. Both yachts had club topsails, staysails, jibs, and baby jib topsails set.

Vanitie was first to cross the line, 26 seconds after the whistle announcing the official time for the start, with Cornelius Vanderbilt at the tiller. Thirty-eight seconds later Resolute was away. Vanitie went across on the port tack with Resolute on the starboard tack trying to get to windward of her rival. Vanitie held to her course, while Resolute, after standing off for nearly two minutes, came about. Vanitie thus had the windward position. This, as well as her lead of close to a minute, she held from that point to the end of the run, having the best of it at every stage of the race, and making the time allowance of 1 minute 24 seconds she had to concede to her rival a handicap of no consequence.

Just about a quarter hour after the start the two big sloops could be seen coming together in the offing, and at 11:37 Vanitie came about for the first time and crossed Resolute's bow, apparently a half mile in the lead.

From that point on Vanitie gained on Resolute with every tack, even when four or five miles off shore the wind softened as Sakonnet Point was passed, and left whatever of benefit there might have been in that shift in Resolute's favor. But Vanitie settled down to her work as if she liked it, just as she did in Thursday's race, when the wind was so much stronger and with but little windward sailing to do. With every mile covered Vanitie increased her advantage, standing up more stiffly and footing faster than Resolute.

When it was certain that Vanitie would win and the race had become a stern chase for Resolute, the fleet of about twenty-five steamers which had been following closely the big single-stickers made for Buzzard's Bay, the manoeuvres of the skippers, Vanderbilt and Adams, having lost much of their interest. These were at anchor in the bay when the victorious Vanitie swept majestically across the line at 3:15:18 and was greeted with a chorus of whistles from the craft anchored in the harbor to welcome the cruisers of the New York squadron, some of which had come through from New York and New London for the trip through the Cape Cod Canal tomorrow. The noisy salute may not have been strictly in accord with yachting etiquette, but it was a spontaneous outburst of sailors' enthusiasm. A Vanitie victory is a popular one with them.

Resolute crossed the line at 3:26:51 and the chief interest in the day's run was over.

The race between the other sloops and schooners seemed forgotten in the contest between the big sloops which resulted in such a decisive victory for the Cochran boat and the verification of the belief that in windward work in a stiff breeze she was as good, if not better, than her rival for cup defense honors. Somewhere during the run Mr. Vanitie's gave over the tiller to Mr. Duncan and allowed him to sail the craft, on which both have spent so much time and energy, across the winning line.

The fleet today raced for cups presented by the Alumni Association of the United States Navy. Seven schooners competed and W. E. Iselin's Enchantress won by 41 minutes from C. B. Hendrix's Radiant. In the race for the Sloop Cup, ten starters, H. P. Whitney's Barbara won from Samuri by 40 seconds. In the race for the New York Yacht Club "fifties" Barbara won over Samuri, the Whitney boat covering the course in 5:31:48, and the Dodge craft crossing the line just 40 seconds behind her, a remarkably close race for a run of 33 miles. R. N. Ellis's Iroquois was third, beaten 3 minutes and 31 seconds; Pembroke Jones's Carolina was fourth, G. F. Baker's Ventura fifth, J. P. Morgan's Grayling sixth, and J. M. MacDonough's Spartan last.

E. W. Clark's Irolita won the race for schooners of Class D, the corrected time of the competitors being, Irolita, 6:03:22; Radiant, 6:15:40, and Vagrant, 6:34:21.

In the several special races included in the day's run, Enchantress defeated Irolita, the latter in turn defeating Queen Mab, Barbara also defeated Kalinga in their special races.

The fleet which is anchored tonight in Sippican Harbor, will leave at 5:20 o'clock tomorrow morning for the eighty-mile trip through the Cape Cod Canal and then for a run to Marblehead in competition for cups offered by Commodore George F. Baker.

POLE CHALLENGES ABERG.

Zbyszko In Shape Again After a Hard Season.

Fully recovered from the physical breakdown he suffered after wrestling with Alex. Aberg for more than three hours in the final of the international Graeco-Roman tournament at the Manhattan Opera oHuse, Wladek Zbyszko, the undefeated Polish wrestler, is in New York eager for a chance to demonstrate his superiority over the champion. After spending several days in a local sanitarium, following his match with Aberg, Zbyszko went to Old Orchard, Me., and while there he underwent a successful operation for an obstruction in the nose. It was this obstruction which caused him so much trouble in the Aberg bout, Zbyszko said yesterday, because it interfered so materially with his breathing. The young Pole appeared in superb condition yesterday, and said he never felt better. He had a try-out bout with George Sanders, the Bavarian, at Buffalo on Wednesday night, and was returned an easy winner in two straight falls.

Zbyszko is willing to oppose Aberg at any time and in any place in the near future. He is supremely confident that he can beat the big Esthonian, with whom he wrestled three hours and forty minutes to a draw. This bout was the greatest ever seen in New York, and at its terminus, which was by mutual agreement of the contestants, both men were on the verge of collapse. The youth of Zbyszko counted against him in this grilling match, and for two days after it he was in a mighty shaky condition. Then came his stay in a sanitarium and his subsequent vacation in Maine.

It was planned some weeks ago to bring the rivals together in Madison Square Garden, and arrangements were practically completed, but Zbyszko was not in condition to wrestle, and the exhibition had to go over. Aberg is still in New York and has been keeping in condition by working out in local gymnasiums.

MARSTON IN GOLF FINAL.

Baltusrol Player Will Be Opponent of Tiffany in Mohawk Match.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Maxwell Marston of Baltusrol will play in the final match tomorrow of the Mohawk Golf Club tournament against Gilman P. Tiffany, the Mohawk Club champion. Indications point to a heavy course, as rain began falling late this afternoon; but both made an 89 in the qualifying round Wednesday on a soggy course, and this should not prove a great handicap to either player. Tiffany had little trouble in winning today's matches, defeating C. L. Watkins of Baltusrol in the third round this morning, 5 and 3, and Harry C. Kayser of Scarsdale in the semi-final round this afternoon, 3 and 2.

The gallery followed Marston, little interest being taken in Tiffany because it was generally conceded he would win. Marston had a hard task in the third round, this match proving to be the best of the tourney. He was opposed by C. T. Lansing of the New Knickerbocker Club, Englewood, N. J., and won by only 1 up. Lansing, who has been playing with the Cornell team, held him until the eighteenth hole, and was in the lead three times. The first five holes were halved. Lansing won the sixth, but Marston squared matters in the seventh with a birdie 3, featured by a twelve-foot putt. The eighth was halved, and Lansing won the ninth. Lansing missed his putt for the tenth and lost the hole, squaring the match again. The eleventh was halved, but on the twelfth Lansing made a birdie 2, with a twenty-foot putt from the edge of the green. This made him 1 up for a third time. The next four holes were halved, and on the seventeenth Lansing was a bit nervous, overran the hole, and lost, squaring the match again. On a pretty 3 Marston won the eighteenth and final hole. The scores follow:

Marston —	Out—	4	3	6	5	4	6	3	5	5—40
	In—	4	5	3	5	4	3	5	4	3—36—76
Lansing —	Out—	5	3	6	5	4	4	4	4	3—39
	In—	5	5	2	5	4	3	5	5	4—38—77

Third Round—Marston beat Lansing, 1 up; Lewis beat J. Frank Shanley, Mohawk, 5 and 2; Tiffany beat C. L. Watkins, Baltusrol, 5 and 4; Harry C. Kayser, Scarsdale, beat Fred O'Connell, Fitchburg, Mass., 5 and 4.

Semi-final Round—Marston beat Lewis, 6 and 5; Tiffany beat Kayser, 3 and 2.

McNAMARA'S GOLF BEST.

Boston Professional Takes Philadelphia Open Title with 296.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Aug. 6.—Thomas McNamara, the Boston professional, with a total of 296 strokes for the 72 holes, today won the open golf championship of Philadelphia. Taking 73 for the morning round and 75 in the afternoon, a total of 148 for 36 holes, McNamara duplicated his score of yesterday when the first half of the tournament was played.

James Barnes of Whitemarsh and C. H. Hoffner of the Philadelphia Country Club tied for second with cards of 303, while E. W. Loos, Pocono Manor, and James Thomson, Philadelphia C. C., with 304 each, divided fourth and fifth money. Fred McLeod of Washington was sixth with 305.

J. J. McDermott, former national title holder, dropped out in the morning round, as did eight other players, leaving forty of the original forty-eight to finish the final round.

The tournament was played on the links of the Philadelphia Country Club at Bala. A heavy rain early in the day made the course slow and soggy.

YALE "SOPH" GOLF VICTOR.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—De Witt C. Balch of the Cincinnati Country Club, a Yale sophomore, today won the junior amateur championship of the Western Golf Association by defeating Moritz H. Loeb of the Idlewild Club, Chicago, a Cornell sophomore, 2 up and 1 to play in the final round. The match was hard-fought throughout. They alternated in the lead until the thirteenth hole when the match was all square. The fourteenth and fifteenth holes were halved and Balch won the sixteenth, seventeenth and the match. The match was played over the Midlothian Club course. The score:

Balch, out		5	5	4	5	5	4	5	5	5—43
Balch, in		5	5	4	7	4	3	5	4
Loeb, out		5	5	4	6	5	4	5	5	4—44
Loeb, in		6	4	4	5	4	3	6	5

Albany Boxer Makes Good Showing.

Willie Green, an Albany welterweight, made a favorable impression on local boxing enthusiasts last night at the New Polo Athletic Association in Harlem, when he easily outpointed Sailor George Volk in the main ten-round bout. This was the Albany boxer's first appearance in a local ring, and for the greatest part of the ten rounds he was the aggressor and landed more effective blows, so that at the finish he was entitled to the honors by a wide margin. The weights were Green, 140; Volk, 136.

The semi-final event, scheduled for ten rounds, in which the principals were Joe Masces of the east side and "Smiling Willie," a west side boxer, ended in favor of the latter in the second round, when the west side boxer landed a hard right on his opponent's jaw, which sent Masces to the floor of the ring for the fatal ten-second count.

Joe Mass, a former amateuh boxer, outpointed Fred Seidel of Nutley, N. J., in the opening ten-round contest.

Local Boxing Bouts Tonight.

Matt Wells, the lightweight title holder of England, who recently returned to the United States, will box with Schaeffer of the Bronx in the feature exhibition of ten rounds tonight at the Fairmont Athletic Club. Tommy Robinson has been substituted for Mike McTeague and will box ten rounds with Johnny (Kid) Alberts. McTeague met with an injury while training.

The Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn will stage three ten-round bouts tonight. The main event will bring together Terry Mitchell and Johnny Dohan. Willie Jackson of Harlem and Joe Gooney of the east side and Willie Brown of the United States Navy and Young Mundy of New York will appear in the other boats.

Smith-Hemple Buot Postponed.

The ten-round boxing bout between Gunboat Smith and Jack Hemple has been postponed until Aug. 18. Manager Jim Buckley notified Manager Jimmy Johnston of St. Nicholas Rink that Smith's hand, which he injured in his bout with Tom Cowler, was causing the boxer considerable trouble, and the postponement was arranged. Happy Littleton and Johnny Howard will be substituted on Aug. 11. The other bouts for this show will be Harry Thomas of England and Al Thomas of Brooklyn and Paul Freda of New Jersey and Andy Cortas of New York.

Welnert and Savage Sign.

Maplewood Golf Reaches Finals.

MAPLEWOOD HOTEL, N. H., Aug. 6.—Mrs. James Boyd and Mrs. Otis Fredenburg of New York won the final positions in the ladies' handicap golf tournament here today by defeating Mrs. B. Rosewell and Miss H. C. Fredenburg of New York, respectively, by 1 up and 2 and 1.

M'LOUGHLIN DOWNS TENNIS CHAMPION

Californian's Terrific Drives Too Much for Williams in Longwood Singles Final.

Special to The New York Times.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 6.—Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco obtained permanent possession of the famous Longwood tennis bowl today, when he defeated R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Harvard, the national champion, in the challenge round of the tournament on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club 8 sets to 1 at 6—3, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2. The match will go down in tennis history as the greatest played in the oldest tournament under the auspices of the National Association, and by winning, the California player proved that no mistake was made when, although beaten at Newport by Williams last year, he was rated the best tennis player in the United States.

McLoughlin, had he displayed any such tennis in the national championship last year, when Williams astounded the tennis world by whipping him for the honors, as he did today, he would never have been humbled. Experts declare that there never has been a match like it between the champion and runner-up which resulted today. No important match probably has been played under worse conditions of weather and turf. A drizzle all afternoon and the courts were in bad shape. In spite of this fact the two greatest tennis players in the country battled for an hour and a half.

The spectators were not disappointed when the match closed, because it was replete with thrills from the opening until the closing set. So bad at times were conditions that the blacked ball when it came in contact with the net would cause a spray to be sent forth which when the players were playing close caused them some trouble.

The Harvard player was nervous throughout overlooking the fact that the court was soft and slippery, and thus many points he dropped were due to that fact. McLoughlin was steady at all times, which had more to do with his victory than anything else. He abandoned his dashing net-assaulting game entirely and scrambled after the ball. In doing this he displayed a varied repertoire of strokes larger than his opponent.

Williams presented a straight fast ball and rarely volleyed. McLoughlin served every kind of a twist known to a champion tennis player, and mixed them up to perfection. He drove, chopped, undercut, patted, volleyed, and smashed. It is doubtful if he ever showed better generalship, working every minute like he did when he was a champion himself one year ago. Williams played a beautiful game only in spots, displaying his famous forehand and backhand drives which won his many points—no less than nine more than McLoughlin tallied, but McLoughlin showed that he could adapt himself entirely to the needs of the unusual occasion and he made few spectacular placement.

Williams was handicapped, as the heavy ball on a slippery court caused it to bounce and twist around, which interfered with hard driving. The additional weight of the ball pulled his low-flying drives closer to the net, no less than a dozen times hitting the top and falling over for points.

McLoughlin captured all of his own service games and broke through Williams twice, in the first and final games—the set went to him at 6—3. Williams, through his opponent's errors, ran up a lead of 3—1 in the second set, and then fell down in starting for a deep drive, and then followed a complete reversal.

In six games which followed McLoughlin was the master, losing but three points, scoring eight earned points to two errors, and forcing Williams into a mire of errors, the last three games going to him at love. Williams rallied for eight games after that, which caused many to think he was reaching the game he showed last Fall. Williams took the third set, 6—2, but the "Comet" came back in the fourth and showed the form displayed in the first and second sets and took the final set, 6—2. It took but eight games in the last set and it was over. Point score and summary:

Bowen Maine Tennis Champion.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 6.—Joseph T. Bowen of Chicago today won the Maine lawn tennis championship tournament on the courts of the swimming club. He defeated Allister McCormick, also of Chicago, in a five-set match, 2—6, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1, 6—3.

MAJOR TO PLAY VEYSEY.

Connecticut State Tennis Championship Reaches Final Round.

NORFOLK, Conn., Aug. 6.—Cedric A. Major and A. J. Veysey will play the final round here tomorrow for the tennis championship of Connecticut and the Bridgeman Cup. In the semi-finals today, Veysey sprung the surprise of the tournament when he defeated Vanderbilt B. Ward, the Central States champion, at 2—6, 6—4, 6—4. Major won from H. A. Plummer, 7—5, 6—4. Ward was far below his form and, in addition, appeared too confident until it was too late to change the result. He won the opening set, 6—2, and was on a fair way to make it a straight set victory, when Veysey

GIANTS FALTER AT CRITICAL MOMENTS

Two Errors and a Wild Pitch Aid Redlegs in Their 3 to 2 Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 6.—With no batsman out in the last half of the ninth inning and three Redlegs on the bases, Tom Clarke, in the rôle of a pinch hitter was pitted against the fading pitching mysteries of one Pol Perritt of the Giants this afternoon. The Red backstop hit safe, sending a run across the pan, thus breaking up a real ball game, which the pennant-chasing McGrawites dropped by the score of 3 to 2. That ninth inning ended in a manner which reflected no credit on the Giants. After Griffith hit for two bases, Wingo drove one to Perritt, which the latter did not throw, either to third in an effort to head off Griffith or to first base in order to retire Wingo, and the result was that both runners were safe and Perritt was credited with an error. Williams was then passed purposely. Mollwitz was the next man on the Red roster. "Zip," as he is known to the local fans, has not been hitting in the pinches. So Herzog sent Clark to bat for Mollwitz. Clark drove one to left field, which under ordinary conditions would have been an out. But as the bases were full and Griffith on third would have scored anyway, even if Clark's fly had been caught, the ball rolled to the left field wall. Griffith romped home with the winning tally and Clark got credit for a single.

Perritt's trouble began early in the contest, when through his misplay as well as a bad throw by Burns, the locals obtained a lead of two runs, which the visitors were able to even up, but not overcome.

The Reds got their two in the third round on two hits, a wild pitch, and an error. The Giants got one in the fourth and one in the sixth, earning each tally.

Perritt's hurling was on a par with that of Toney, and had it not been for a series of misplays in the third round would undoubtedly have been returned the winner. But Pol was wild in that round, and this, aided by Burns's bad throw, gave the Reds the edge. Williams walked and was forced by Mollwitz. Toney singled, and Mollwitz scored when Burns threw wild to the plate, the ball going to the stand. Toney reached third on the play. Lobert threw out Wagner, but Perritt uncorked a wild pitch and Toney scored.

The Giants got one of these two runs back in their half of the fourth inning. Snodgrass walked for a starter. Doyle hit into right, sending Snodgrass to third. Doyle tried to make two bases, and was thrown out. Fletcher flied to Kelly and Snodgrass scored. Merkle singled over third and stole second. Lobert popped to Mollwitz for the third out.

To open the sixth, the round in which the Giants scored their only tally, Snodgrass was deprived of a two-base hit, at least, when Groh knocked down his terrific drive and threw him out at first base. Doyle doubled to centre. Fletcher beat one out, Doyle taking third, whence he scored on Merkle's fly to Griffith. Fletcher stole second base, and Lobert was purposely passed. Brainerd tapped one in front of the plate and Wingo touched him out.

Cincinnati fans believe that Merkle should have been playing in the outfield before this. They point out that his fielding is of the natural kind, and judging from his playing in this city, he surely has been out of place playing first base. Again to-day he shone in the outfield. The score:

Pierce Shuts Out Braves.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Pierce shut out Boston 2 to 0 today in a pitchers' duel with Rudolph, Chicago making it two straight from the champions. Pierce, although generous with his passes, pitched airtight ball in the pinches. Only three scattered hits were made off him and only one man reached third base. Chicago gathered five hits off Rudolph, one in the second, followed by an infield out and a wild pitch, scored a run, and two more in the third inning scored another tally. Wilbur Good was credited with three of the locals' hits. Score:

Wards Weeding Out Players.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 6.—Announcement was made here tonight that Pitcher Harry Billiard of the Hartford Colonial League team has been recalled, and that Outfielder Phil Chouinard has been served with a ten-day notice of release by the Wards of the Brooklyn Federals. Chouinard, it is said, will leave the Hartford team at the expiration of that time. Pitcher Somers of the New Haven Colonial team, it is understood, has also received a ten-day notice of release from the Brooklyn Federals.

Johnson Has Narrow Escape from Defeat, but Senators Win Twice.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Washington won its fourth consecutive game from Chicago today, taking both ends of a double-header, 8 to 6 and 6 to 3. Johnson blanked the visitors in the opener until the eighth inning, when six hits, a pass, and two errors resulted in six runs. Washington duplicated this performance in its half, pounding Wolfgang and Faber for six hits, which, together with Eddie Collins's error, netted six runs, and brought Washington's total up to eight. The second game was a free-hitting contest, in which Ayres outpitched Russell. Scores:

'IRON MAN' COOMBS OUTPITCHES DOAK

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 6.—Brooklyn today played the kind of ball they play at home and had little trouble defeating the Cardinals, 3 to 2. The score really does not indicate how badly the Cards were outclassed. The Superbas were superior in all departments and did just about as they pleased after the opening of the second inning, when Cutshaw singled to left and started a little batting rally that brought in two runs.

Like yesterday, Brooklyn players had very little difficulty in hitting the ball. This time, however, they bunched their hits and made them count, a striking difference from yesterday, when most of the hits did very little good.

Getz was the real star, getting three hits out of four times up, although the credit of winning the game goes to Cutshaw, whose single in the eighth brought in Wheat and scored the winning run.

"Iron Man" Coombs pitched for Brooklyn and showed Willie Doak, who was in the box for St. Louis, a few things that should be in every pitcher's curriculum.

Three hits, including a double and a squeeze play, brought in two markers for Brooklyn in the second inning. Cutshaw opened with a single to left and Stengel doubled out to the same territory. Getz rolled a slow bounder down the third base line and beat it out as Cutshaw scored and Stengel ran to third. O. Miller bunted for the squeeze play and was out, Stengel scoring.

The Cards scored one run in the second inning and another in the sixth, tieing the score.

Since Robinson and his team arrived in St. Louis rumors of a trade have been floating around. Robinson always has admired Dan Griner, the pitcher, and if the proposed deal is closed Griner will leave town with the Superbas when they depart Saturday night. Ed Appleton is the pitcher the Cards will get if Robinson can make Huggins see the light. Griner, a right hander, has been pitching well this season. The score:

Mayer Saves Game for Phillies.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—Pittsburgh lost to Philadelphia today, 5 to 4. McQuillan was hit freely and had to give way to Kantlehner. The home team failed to get a hit until the sixth inning, when two singles and a base on balls resulted in two runs. In the ninth the locals rallied and had two runs in and one needed to tie when Mayer relieved Demaree and stopped further scoring. Score:

ASTOR AUTO CUP RACE.

Vincent Offers Trophy for Opening of Sheepshead Bay Track.

When the Sheepshead Bay Speedway opens on Oct. 2, the 350-mile inaugural race will be for a perpetual automobile trophy which was offered yesterday by Vincent Astor, the event to be known as the Vincent Astor Cup race. This trophy will take its place beside those other events which have won international reputations, the Vanderbilt Cup, chronicled in song and story; the Grand Prize, which has brought out some of the best in automobile competition; the Paris Matin-THE NEW YORK TIMES trophy, noteworthy as an event of the extreme long-distance character, and the Colby trophy competed for just outside Chicago. Henceforth there will stand beside these the Vincent Astor Cup, and the conditions seem to indicate that it may be the incentive to higher speed than even the pace that has been set in other races. In addition to the trophy the Speedway management offers $50,000 in cash prizes for this event.

Originally it was intended to have the first race known as the merican Cup race, but with the offering of the Astor Cup it was decided to make this the first race over the big Speedway, and the American Cup race will be contested at a later date.

That the Astor Cup race will produce great speed is indicated by the conditions, which are that no car shall be eligible to compete for the trophy unless it is capable of making an average speed of eighty-five miles an hour.

POLO WON BY AIKEN.

Redbirds Defeat Point Judith Wanderers, 11 Goals to 7.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 6.—In spite of threatening weather, a fair-sized crowd of society folk turned out this afternoon to see the second special polo match for the Gladstone Cup, which was played at Point Judith Polo Club.

The opposing teams were the Aiken Redbirds and the Point Judith Wanderers, the former winning by 11 to 7 goals. The winning team had two goals by handicap, but, as the score indicates, they did not need this allowance, and would have defeated their opponents on the flat. While the Wanderers appeared the stronger team on paper, they did not play up to their top form, except in flashes, while the Redbirds gave a fine exhibition of aggressive polo and were always on the ball.

In the opening period the Point Judith team started with a rush and for a time it looked as if they were going to carry everything before them. Stevenson made the first point in less than two minutes. Thirty seconds later Crane added another. Just before the period closed, Cooley, with a brilliant long shot, scored for the Redbirds.

The Southern quartet showed some pleasing teamwork in the second period. Both Gordon and Cooley were kept well fed by the other players, which resulted in their making several fine shots at their opponents' goal, which only missed the mark by inches. Finally Cooley and Fleishmann tallied before the session closed. Just before the whistle blew H. Le Whitney was struck on the head by the ball, and for a few moments it was sthought he was seriously injured, but after a few minutes' delay he continued in the game.

The only foul was registered against Coogan, in the third period, when he crossed Gordon. The same player made the two fouls registered against his side. At half time the score stood 7 goals to 3¼ in favor of the Redbirds. The line-up and summary:

AIKEN REDBIRDS.		POINT JUDITH WANDERERS.
L. Gordon	2	P. Stevenson	2
J. C. Cooley	3	John M. Bell	3
M. C. Fleischmann	2	Joseph Crane	5
H. Le R. Whitney	2	Jay Coogan	0

Goals earned by Aiken Redbirds,9; allowed by handicap, 2; lost by penalty, 0; net score, 11. Goals earned by Point Judith Wanderers, 8; lost by penalty, 1; allowed by handicap, 0; net score, 7. Individual goals—Cooley, (3,) Gordon, (4,) Whitney, Fleischmann, Crane, (3,) Stevenson, (3.) Fell and a Wanderers' pony. Penalties against Wanderers—Coogan, a half and two quarters. Referee—W. E. Hopping.

FEDERAL LEAGUE.

No Hit for Rebels Off Schulz Until Ninth—Buffalo Wins.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Buffalo won the first game of the series from Pittsburgh today, 4 to 0. Schulz held the visitors hitless for eight innings. Their only hit, in the ninth inning, was made by O'Connor, who drove a two-bagger over first base. Score:

St. Louis Bats Hard and Wins.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 6.—St. Louis won today's game, 5 to 1. Suggs started in the box for Baltimore, but was relieved in the third inning. Bailey was also touched up rather lively, and Crandall twirled good ball throughout, the majority of Baltimore's hits coming with two out. Chapman's homer was a long drive over the left field fence. The score:

Complaint Against Burk Weak.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—The temporary injunction granted Tuesday restraining the Pittsburgh Federal League Baseball Club from either playing or employing Sanford Burk, the pitcher who jumped from the Indianapolis American Association team to the local club, was continued until next Thursday, when the case came up before Judge Ambrose S. Reed in Common Pleas Court here today. The Court was of the opinion that the original bill of complaint as filed by attorneys for the Indianapolis team was vague, and doubted if there was sufficient complaint to warrant the Court making the order permanent. Over objection of counsel for the Federal League the Court permitted the complaint to be amended and then granted the representatives of the Indianapolis club until Thursday to answer the amendment.

Jennings Wants More Pitchers.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—Manager Jennings of the Detroit Americans, it was learned today, has made an offer to Manager Rickey of the St. Louis Americans for either Pitcher James or Pitcher Hamilton. Jennings, it is understood, offered a large sum for James, but Rickey would not consider a deal for him without consulting President Hedges of the St. Louis Club. Rickey, it is said, offered Pitcher Hamilton to Detroit for $5,000 and Players Jacobs and Heilman of the Detroit Club. Jacobs at present is playing as an outfielder with the San Francisco Club. Jennings is also after Ayres of the Washington Club, and expects to make an offer for him when he reaches the national capital on Saturday night.

MR. WILSON AND NATIONAL DEFENSE.

The incorrigible Bryanites, the professional and amateur pacifists, and the rest of the illuded who blink the facts, hold that, in case of need, which they choose to believe improbable, the long work of providing the United States with adequate military and naval defense can be done somehow, miraculously, in a day, apparently by the sudden, spontaneous rising of "the people," untrained, unarmed. But among Americans of intelligence and foresight there will be strong approval of President WILSON'S determination to formulate and to recommend to Congress a program for the enlargement and increase of the army and navy. After the reports and estimates, soon to appear, of the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy have been thoroughly pondered, Mr. WILSON means to confer, on his return to Washington, with the Chairmen of the military and naval committees of the Senate and House. He will seek—and his powers of temperate, convincing statement and triumphant suasion are famous—the hearty co-operation of these Chairmen and committees. When Congress meets the plan will be ready, and, as the session goes on, he will strive to overcome the opposition, whether springing from honest misapprehension in his party in Congress or from misinformation tinged, it may be, with soured ambition and personal malice outside, to the performance of a too long neglected, inescapable, instant duty.

It is unfortunate that Mr. HAY, Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, is, or lately was, averse to a sufficient increase of the army. It is unfortunate that Mr. KITCHIN, of Mr. DANIELS'S North Carolina, the probable successor of Mr. UNDERWOOD as Chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means and leader of the majority, is, or lately was, averse to a liberal policy of battleship construction. It is unfortunate that too many members of Congress would rather throw away money on a public building at Boggs's Four Corners or the improvement of the "navigation" of Tadpole Creek than vote for an imperious national necessity. It is not wholly unfortunate, it may turn out to be fortunate, that the dethroned and discredited BRYAN, saturated with pretty, cicenic sentiments, and burning with mischief, will utter the several million words that arise in him in opposition once more to a vital interest of his country.

It would be fruitless to reason with the master of unreason. Men like Mr. KITCHIN and Mr. HAY, however, and all the moderate and sensible men, will presumably listen to reason. Public opinion will speak. Politicians will obey.

It is for the Republicans in Congress loyally to hold up Mr. WILSON'S hands, if his policy of national defense be equal to expectation, to try to better it, if betterment it needs, to deal with this momentous national non-partisan question patriotically, nationally, as Americans and not as Republicans.

A BOARD OF PARDONS.

The cruel position in which Governor WHITMAN was recently placed by the appeal of BECKER, and especially of BECKER'S wife, gives some impetus to the argument for the establishment of a State Board of Pardons. An amendment providing for such a body was introduced by LOUIS MARSHALL in the Constitutional Convention before this occurrence. The chief argument for it is that the present law imposes upon the Governor undue responsibility.

Certainly the present system is not ideal, but change is not always improvement. A change dividing such a responsibility among several men is open to as many objections as the existing law, and they are more serious ones. It is alleged that the Governor may be subjected to personal or political pressure, or be influenced by his emotions. In a case where compassion is likely to overbalance the judgment, a board of five or seven pardoners would find many temptations. It would be so easy for each of them to lean to the side of mercy, trusting that the others would be rigid and that justice would be done. As for personal or political pressure, a weak man might easily salve his conscience by thinking that if he did yield no harm might be done after all, because the others would stand firm.

Divided responsibility is the very thing the present law avoids. There is divided responsibility in the first instance; it is divided among twelve jurors. If there is an appeal, the responsibility is divided among Judges of the appellate courts. All these have passed upon the convict's case and condemned him. But there is still one last chance. If the argument for his salvation is so strong that, even after all jurors and judges have reached one conclusion upon the evidence, one man is willing to assume the vast responsibility of overthrowing their judgment, the law permits that one man to assume it. The responsibility is solemn, dreadful; the law intends it to be so, and it was not to lighten it that the law concentrated that responsibility in one man. The time of divided responsibility ends with the last appellate court; thereafter the man is held to be righteously condemned almost beyond peradventure. But there is a last perhaps, and the law gives him the benefit of it. To create another board of review is to elude its purpose; to make a new Court of Appeals.

If the responsibility must be taken away from the Chief Executive, the Federal Government has found a way much better than that of the State board. Nominally the President exercises the pardoning power. Actually, in nearly all cases, the power supposed to be vested in him is exercised by the Department of Justice; and in most cases it is virtually exercised not even by the Attorney General, but by an officer appointed for the purpose. Applications for pardon go to a special bureau, headed by an officer formerly called the Pardon Clerk, but now styled the Attorney in Charge of Pardons. It is his duty to examine them and report his findings. In practice the Attorney General almost always approves his report and makes recommendation accordingly to the President, whose indorsement is almost always given as a matter of course.

This system gives the condemned the benefit of the last perhaps; it avoids the logical absurdity of a further division of responsibility, and it does not place the responsibility on an official elected with quite other duties in the minds of those who elected him, but on an official appointed for that purpose alone, skilled and experienced in the work, not taken unawares by an unexpected appeal in some heartrending case. If there is to be any change, it might better take that direction than go along lines of the State boards, which in other States have often aroused dissatisfaction and sometimes created scandal.

HIGHER TACTICS.

It now is clear to the veriest meddler in military theory that the attempt on the part of the English and French to force the Dardanelles and capture Constantinople, with warships alone, was premature, not to say foolhardy. It failed, and before troops could be brought into co-operation with the fleets the Turks had time heavily to increase the potentiality of their resistance. A sudden and unexpected attack by warships and troops together might have been more effective. The muddling of the business was so resented in England that on that count, among others, WINSTON CHURCHILL'S head was demanded and received. It has been unofficially denied since that he was alone responsible for the "blunder" of sending some ships blithely to perform an impossible task.

But in war generally, and in this one especially, political tactics may determine the immediate course of military events, may even require military judgment to surrender itself to a necessity of which statecraft is the better aware. Among such allies as England, France, and Russia, temperamentally, racially, and linguistically unlike, two of them separated from the third by a common enemy speaking still another tongue and speaking it often with a cunning designed to estrange friends, the possibilities of misunderstanding are apparent and very great. Each of them has had different things to sacrifice, and though all had given to the common cause the utmost of what they had to give, doubt might yet arise, for such is human nature. The professions all can understand are those of deeds.

Though Russia on the eastern line engaged one-third, perhaps one-half, the Teuton's strength, at tremendous cost, the Anglo-French forces did not advance. That was a disappointment not too philosophically borne in England. That it was not a strain upon Russia's confidence in her allies, considering the vast sacrifices she had made—three million men and Poland—may be owing more than any military-minded person would believe to the vast appreciation of the gallant attack upon the Dardanelles. True, it has so far been unsuccessful, but it has not been abandoned. The ram still batters at the door. The sound delights the Russian soul. It echoes a great desire. To put the Turk back into Asia, Russia would pay an enormous price. Therefore it is not strange that Count BENCKENDORFF, Russian Ambassador to London, in combating rumors that Russia was disappointed in her allies, should have mentioned the campaign against the Dardanelles in this way:

> It has been said that the Russian public hoped for a strong offensive in the west while the Germans were making their onset in the east. This may be so, but not a trace of ill feeling has been manifested, and the sober view which considers only military possibilities has always prevailed. Nowhere has the colossal effort of Great Britain and France in the Dardanelles been more appreciated than in Russia.

Mr. SAZONOFF, the Russian Foreign Minister, addressing the Duma at its first sitting this week, directed popular appreciation to the same point:

> The Allies, with unshakable tenacity, see the approach of the longed-for moment when a close and direct bond will be established between us. The Turks, scenting the approaching storm, have overwhelmed the Christian peoples still in their power with exceptional cruelty.

The diplomatic representatives of France and England were enthusiastically greeted by the members of the Duma. Possibly, however, popular feeling would have been a little shaken by the events of the first year of war but for the hope inspired by the efforts of the Allies to overthrow the Turk, deliver the Christians, and unlock the magic door to the Mediterranean from the outer side.

PHILADELPHIA NIGHTS.

The voters of Philadelphia having approved a loan to build elevated and subway lines, the city asked the State Public Service Commission to issue a certificate of public convenience. The Harrisburg correspondence of The Pittsburg Dispatch records a curious protest filed with the Commission by Mr. JOHN H. FOW, "lawyer and ex-legislator." It is seriously made. It is not in the catalogue of moldy, time-hallowed jokes against the City of Homes, the best and cheapest, the one great city for persons of moderate means and those elsewhere poor and housed in cramped, expensive tenements.

Mr. Fow may be too idyllic when he says that "it doesn't pay to run street cars in Philadelphia after 8 P. M.," but we are glad to believe him when he assures us that it "is a well-known "fact that you cannot maintain a cen-"trally located club in Philadelphia," so very few members will leave their homes at night. Many clubs have had to close because they were deserted after 7:30 P. M., and "even the great "Union League hardly has a baker's "dozen some nights within its walls." Finally—and if Philadelphia merits the praise what higher praise can come to her?—"the average Philadelphian spends his evenings at home."

Faithful worshippers of the household gods, worthy inheritors of the modest, quiet, saving, clean-living Quaker ways, these homekeeping Philadelphians are too often forgotten by those who love to dwell on the political corruption that has too often or too long prevailed in the staid old city. And of course the tame, domestic, "bourgeois" virtues will move contemptuous laughter in those wandering New Yorkers, or self-styled New Yorkers, who are always writing to the newspapers making bitter plaint that they "can't get a drink" in Philadelphia of a Sunday.

THE NEEDLE STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

The Mayor's Council of Conciliation in the women's wear trade dispute is as firm as it is benevolent. It presents to both sides a cordial handgrip which shows nerve behind it. Neither side is able to claim a victory either over the other or over the Council. Its award has been accepted by both sides because the Council says that it will interpret its language, and that other interpretations are of no account. Each side had interpretations of its own which were objectionable to the other. The workers accepted without reserve on an understanding which they expressed so clearly that the manufacturers refrained from accepting until the last moment, and might not have accepted at all except for the action of the Council expressed above.

As the matter stands the strike is averted, and friction can be renewed only by refusal to work the agreement in the manner in which the Council says it should be worked. It is not to be assumed that the unions have a vested right to contest "every" alleged grievance. That was the rock upon which the protocol was wrecked. There must be substance in the complaints, and they must be reduced to writing before the machinery can be set to work. On the other hand there are doubtful points about the advanced rates of pay which the Council awarded. These, too, must be interpreted rather by the Council than by the unions or the employers. In this light the Council's award seems rather a modus vivendi than a mere finding, to be distorted into a fresh cause for dispute.

Both sides therefore are warned to be on their good behavior. Neither side can get on without the support of public opinion, and that will go to the side which comports itself most nearly in accord with the Council. The protocol had its faults, but it kept a sort of armed peace for five years. The new treaty possibly will surpass it, not only in endurance under stress, but perhaps in producing better relations than those of avowed hostility. Assuredly the Council is to be congratulated on this result, and also the opposing parties to the award.

BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT PLANS

In Brooklyn there is a great and natural outcry against the erection on its chief business street of a structure strong enough to take a share of the dual subway traffic, with its ten-car steel trains. Manhattan understands Brooklyn's dislike to an elevated railway, but it is submitting to the same infliction, some Manhattan streets even carrying elevated structures in stories. Brooklyn's grievance in that respect, therefore, is a local matter.

The borough's good faith in objecting appears in the suggestion by the objectors that the cost of substituting a subway for the most objectionable link of the elevated structure should be assessed upon the benefited property. On that basis Brooklyn ought to have what it is willing to pay for. The great four track trunk line which runs to Brooklyn across the Manhattan Bridge was provided with an outlet intended to connect with the Fulton Street elevated line. That is an old idea, and the plan has not been bettered by abandoning it. The obstacle is that the elevated road's owners have a perpetual franchise for their connection with the Brooklyn Bridge, and refuse to abandon it unless provided with a similar franchise for a subway connection to the bridge via Livingston Street. No objection is made except on the ground of cost.

The Transit Committee of the Board of Estimate favors the proposal sufficiently to allow delay to learn how willing benefited real estate owners may be to bear an assessment for an improvement which would benefit the entire city almost as much as themselves. The Broadway route of the dual subway needs the traffic of the elevated feeder, which now runs to the congested Brooklyn Bridge. It ought to continue to run there, without prejudice to the connection between the elevated line and the subway by the construction of a short link of subway which would relieve Fulton Street of a longer link of elevated. The local advantage to the borough is considerable, but is matched by the betterment of the dual subway as a whole.

STATE SOCIALISTS.

The Democratic friends of the revival of the American merchant marine had the satisfaction this week of reading that their noble, intelligent support of the La Follette-Furuseth Seaman's act is to drive the five ships of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company from the Pacific two days before that measure of enlightened statesmanship goes into effect. They read, too, that Secretary of the Treasury MCADOO still believes in Government ownership, though he is willing to consider any compromise which will relieve the lack of American ships. Exactly what "compromise" there can be between private ownership and Government ownership which would drive it out of business the ingenious Mr. MCADOO failed to indicate. It is to be hoped that his ideas on the subject are less misty than his recollection of the Democratic platform of 1912, which, he says, "unequivocally declared for a "merchant marine, and that pledge "should be kept." This is the pledge in question:

> We believe in fostering by constitutional regulation of commerce the growth of a merchant marine, which shall develop and strengthen the commercial ties which bind us to our sister republics of the South, but without imposing additional burdens upon the people and without bounties or subsidies from the public treasury.

How does Mr. MCADOO reconcile Government ownership with this? What he proposes to do is not only to impose new burdens but to wipe out private ship owning. In effect, we should lay additional taxes to bring about the disappearance of the merchant marine, already injured by the Seaman's act.

We invite Mr. MCADOO to ponder another passage in that Baltimore platform of which he seems to have so vague a memory: "We denounce as "usurpation the efforts of our oppo-"nents * * * to enlarge and mag-"nify the powers of the Federal Gov-"ernment." To enlarge those powers monstrously and directly, to create a Federal merchant marine, is straight Democratic doctrine, then! It is much nearer to State Socialism than to Democracy.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Barber Arrested for Taking a Tip.

Either having heard more denunciation of the tipping habit than have the legislators of other States, or because they took it more seriously, the lawmakers of Iowa recently put on their statute book a formal ban on the custom and decreed a penalty for those who—either took or gave a tip? By no means. To have done so would have been logical and consistent, for of course the giving is as bad as the taking, if it isn't worse, but, just as the Prohibitionists recoil from allotting the same punishment to the drinker of alcohol as to its seller, so the Iowa statesmen, though they went further than the forbidding of secret commissions which has been deemed far enough elsewhere, left the tip-taking class exposed to the temptation of immune tip-givers, the natural enemies of their self-respect and of what the law made their civic virtue.

The inevitable result—as is the wont of inevitable results—has followed. A man, or, to be more explicit, if not more accurate, a barber, has been arrested for accepting a gratuity from a presumably grateful client and a troublesome controversy over the constitutionality of the law has been started.

The barber's friends and his lawyer argue that the right to ask for special services, and to pay for them what judgment dictates, is one obviously inalienable, and that it carries with it the right to accept payments so made. The upholders of the law defend it on the ground that tips are against public policy, in that they are morally and economically injurious to all affected by them, either directly or indirectly.

What the courts in Iowa and elsewhere will have to say on these points remains to be seen. The questions involved are large ones, and several of them have never received much real consideration. Who knows, for instance, whether anything in the end would be saved to those who now, willingly or unwillingly, give tips if tipping could be and was abolished? There is at least excuse for doubting it—for believing that the person who really gets the tips, in most cases the employer or boss of the actual taker, would not be content with less than his present profits, and that, if forced to pay his servants himself their whole wage, he would promptly transfer the added charge to the customer by increasing the avowed charge for goods or work.

At Least It Was Decisive.

Whatever else one may think about the German drive on Warsaw, and whether one sorrows over its result or rejoices, there is a certain satisfaction to be found in the fact that the end in the circumstances apparently inevitable was attained in a time comparatively short.

If the Germans were to win the city and the Russians were to lose it, the way the thing was done was certainly better, and almost certainly cost less in life and property for both sides, than would have been the case if the capture had been effected after months and months of such fighting as has been going on in France ever since VON KLUCK'S army was turned back from Paris.

There is a strong temptation to declare that trench warfare, as now conducted, ought to be numbered among the nefarious and forbidden methods of carrying on a campaign. It is enormously expensive, it incites the devising of horrid means of slaughter, and it postpones intolerably the return of peace by making both victory and defeat not ultimately impossible, of course, but lamentably far in the future. If people must fight, it is a pity that they cannot be made to stand up against each other more or less in the open and get it over with, instead of dragging out interminably their miserable quarrels.

As part of a defense, trenches do well enough, but as a weapon of attack they are worse than dumdum bullets or the poisoning of wells—almost worse than the sinking of Lusitanias. Really, the next Hague Conference, if ever there is to be one, should take them under its most serious consideration.

National Lyrics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Upon reading in two of your late issues of a new musical setting to "America" by Mr. McCabe, it has occurred to me that those who are interested in the various efforts to write a fitting modern tune to Samuel Francis Smith's famous verses might enjoy looking at the music which Arthur Edward Johnstone has written for them. This composition was awarded the gold medal in the competition held some years ago by the Society of the Cincinnati, and since its first publication it has been included in several school books, among them "The Lyric Song Book," "Art Songs for High Schools," and "The Lyric Music Series," having been sung by millions of children throughout the country. In my opinion this setting has more melodic, rhythmic, and harmonic beauty than any other of the various ones that I have seen; its modulation from F to A flat contributes a rich variety which is particularly welcome when we consider that some folks might sing all four stanzas. The old Danish tune that has been adopted by England, Germany, and the United States as a Fatherland song is undeniably a fine one, and is likely to outlive any newer essays, but this consideration should not hamper any one who feels inspired by the spirit of the text to give it a fresh tonal expression. No matter how zealous the composer's endeavor may be, unless he writes separate music for each stanza the declamation must always be irritatingly faulty, as the verbal accents in the various lines are not in alignment, and no amount of musical skill will make "'tis of thee" rhyme with "liberty."

German as a World Language.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a Hamburg dispatch is given an opinion by a German professor that the German language will become the world language. I have been a traveler all my life and from what I have seen I doubt it. He says French is not used outside of France. The German professor is obsessed. How about the French colonies, which are numerous? How about our own State of Louisiana? How about Eastern Canada and the New England States? How about Mexico, Central America, and South America, where French is the language of culture in their colleges, for it is the first language they learn after their own? The educated classes south of the Rio Grande to Cape Horn are almost as familiar with French as with their own language.

In relation to this, I have often heard our young college fellows advised to learn one of three languages first—Spanish, Russian, or Chinese—as outside of our own the knowledge of one of those offered the greatest chances from a commercial standpoint.

German, on the other hand, is spoken but by one nation, Germany, and partially by Austria and in some parts of Switzerland.

Pro-Germanism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few weeks ago I was in a Summer place and, as usual, outspoken in my views as to the merits of this war. I found that by and by practically all of the Summer boarders agreed with my views, but they apparently did not say so until I spoke out. I believe today that the majority of the American people favor the German cause, but they do not talk out because they are too docile.

HOT WEATHER.

I saw the pavement's dismal track
Hot 'neath the noon sun's fire;
Wide stretched, it, like a martyr's rack,
And the poor were on this pyre.

I heard the young cry out for drink,
The aged sigh for rest,
And 'twixt them all there was the link
Of sorrow, breast to breast.

I saw the fever of despair
Attack them one and all,
Yet some a meagre crust would share
And some a jest would call.

I saw a sultry night come down
Upon this day of grief,
But to this desert of our town
It brought delight, relief.

Again the father's courage rose;
Again the mother prayed;
The hand made mad by awful woes,
Its murderous purpose stayed.

Once more the wretched sufferer slept
As night's short span was told,
But in their dreams the aged wept
And many a babe grew cold.

GUARDSMEN AND WAR.

The Citizen Soldier Seldom Has Any Thought of Regular Service.

N. Y., Aug. 2, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For ten years I have served in a position with one of the leading National Guard organizations that has put me in close touch with both the enlisted man and the officer. Much has appeared in the public print lately about the preparedness of the National Guard for duty as regulars. Most of these articles have apparently been written by those either not in touch with the personnel of the guard or those who have very hifalutin ideas about it.

The enlisted man in the National Guard is the average man, possessed of the average amount of patriotism. He very frequently has a family dependent upon him for support. He would never have enlisted if he had supposed he would be peremptorily called in the regular service for any length of time, and if he believed such to be the case now he would take his discharge at the earliest possible moment. He could not afford to do otherwise. He enlisted and enlists now, not from any exalted idea of duty, but because he likes the work of the citizen soldier and the uniform and social life that go with it.

In most of the organizations the officers are men who have worked up from the ranks, and who by hard, intelligent work have shown their capacity to organize and command. Officers are put to expense for uniforms and equipment, but they receive an allowance from the State which in the course of time lessens the amount of the original investment. This expenditure is a benefit to the personnel of the guard rather than otherwise. The man who cannot afford uniforms and equipment generally cannot for other reasons afford to be an officer.

During the drill season it is common practice for officers to spend three nights a week at the armory. Not only must the efficient officer be an organizer and controller of men, but he must be a student of military science. He must attend school and pass examination and must keep up to date in military affairs. It is a common saying in the guard that the private is the only man who has any fun.

A day or two ago a Lieutenant wrote about the necessity for training the men of the guard to take trenches at night. This is on a par with other twaddle that has appeared, along the line that the national guardsman should be equal to the regular, and does not take into consideration that the regular is a professional soldier and the guardsman is a professional clerk or has some other similar vocation. No matter what the law is, the enlisted man generally enlists with little or no thought of becoming a professional soldier. He believes that the real function of the National Guard is that of an auxiliary of the regular army, to preserve order at home and to be better fitted to volunteer if volunteers are needed. He does not expect that his Uncle Sam will call upon him to leave his family without support for any length of time.

If our people would cease trying to make a regular out of the guardsman and would assist in making him a first-class guardsman, much more would be accomplished.

Phrases Historic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Page 9 of your Sunday Magazine you print the "Speeches That Ushered in War," an excellent memorial. Unfortunately, you soften Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's famous "hacking through" speech in the Reichstag. The passage beginning "Our troops have occupied Luxemburg" is rendered with variations of slight importance from previous texts. The paragraph that follows should be given substantially as follows:

> So we were compelled to override the just protest of the Luxemburg and Belgian Governments. The wrong—I speak openly—that we are committing we shall endeavor to make good as soon as our military goal has been reached. Anybody who is threatened as we are threatened and is fighting for his highest possessions can have only one thought—how he is to hack his way through.

The final phrase is the one that sticks in the mind, like the "scrap of paper." In its literal reflexive form it is: "How he himself through-hews." You render the sentence, in part: "Who like we are fighting for the highest must only consider how victory can be gained"—a similar thought, but without the pungent phrase that is remembered.

In the Hamburger Fremdenblatt "Illustrated War Chronic," peptonized for American readers and printed in English, date Oct. 15, 1914, the concluding passage is rendered:

> That is contradictory to international law. * * * So we were compelled to override the justified protests of the Luxembourg and Belgian Governments. We would have compensated them for the harm done as soon as we had obtained our purpose. When one is threatened as we are, and fights for his highest ideals, he may resort to those means that will free him soonest.

Here also the final phrase with a punch is avoided, but the rendering is stronger than yours, which omits "justified" before "protests." In a word, the Berlin authorities, confronted with an inconvenient fact, are trying to abolish it. But you need not help.

New York, Aug. 2, 1915. H. J.

Besieged in the Adirondacks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We came up to this beautiful Adirondack country in search of quiet and repose, and with the hope of devoting much time to our books, music, and the study of nature. Instead of getting the peace which we had so earnestly longed for and expected, after only a week's respite, there arrived an army of alien invaders to make the new turnpike.

Quite aside from any minor inconveniences and unpleasantness, which are far from negligible, we have found ourselves for the last month almost in a state of siege. Our little bungalow, unfortunately being close to the new cut, we have found it necessary to be constantly on the alert, prepared at an instant's notice to make a dash for safety. As many of the missiles from this cannonading of roots and rocks have inadvertently landed upon our roof, as well as in the close neighborhood of our heads, we think we have not been overapprehensive. The lake in our vicinity is at times unsafe for rowing from the same cause, and all the fish and the birds have fled our precincts owing to the loud detonations.

We hear that the State Road Inspector residing at Scroon Lake is quoted as saying that there is absolutely no reason why the dwellers should be disturbed in this manner; the charges should be smaller and properly covered. If it is not his business to see to the public welfare under the circumstances, upon whom does the duty naturally devolve?

Education That Forgets Posterity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the magazine section of last Sunday's TIMES I read with great interest an article on Barnard Alumnae. In this article I found statistics which to me were very worthy of consideration. Of the 1,377 women who have received degrees from that institution but 414 have been married, and of these 414 marriages there are but 436 children. Does this not seem a graver problem than votes for women? You can't make better men and women by voting, but you can by rearing healthy, well-equipped children.

Concerning Standing Armies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the conditions of the present European war, and the policy of the British Government with regard to military preparation, it is interesting to note that as early as the year 1697 a writer by the name of W. Moyle published "An argument, showing that a standing army is inconsistent with a free government, and absolutely destructive to the constitution of the English Monarchy." This pamphlet was answered by Daniel De-[illegible].

ALL THE WORLD IS A PHARISEE.

Easier to Find Guilt in Another People Than to See the Sins of One's Own Country—There Are Always Two Sides.

By BENJAMIN HOROWITZ,
Associate Professor of Biological Chemistry, Columbia University.

Columbia University, July 30, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The difficulties we experience at all times in examining a situation thoroughly and impartially are strikingly brought home to us during the present war.

Throughout the first ten months of the conflict the world busied itself in an attempt to fasten the guilt of the war upon some one particular nation. The Germans blamed England, the English blamed Germany. Now, perhaps, we are in a position to decide the issue in Sir Roger de Coverley's way: "There is much to be said on both sides." It is impossible to say which nation is guilty, for all the contending nations are more or less guilty; it is impossible to say which nation is innocent, for none is. If a comparative scale is to be applied we must adopt bad, worse, not bad, better, best. Miss Addams rightly emphasizes what has been touched upon by several close observers, that the people of the various warring nations use identical phrases in defending the stand taken by their respective countries. Whatever justice there is is fairly evenly distributed.

If, then, one asks the question, why is it that so many Americans are ardent supporters of the Allies, we may answer that the primary reason is the existence of a common bond of sympathy for England and what it stands for—its people, its history, its culture. To break the influence of the twin relationship of language and literature, England's guilt, bad as it is, would have to become far more obvious. This partiality was greatly increased by (a) the influence of the newspapers and (b) a series of incidents which tended to shift the wind of blame entirely in the direction of the Teutons. It is not my intention here to discuss Belgian atrocities, nor the Lusitania horror, beyond saying this: that if war is a legitimate way of settling a country's differences, and if, in order to protect the life of a people, extraordinary methods are adopted, much of what appears base and cruel can be excused. Imagine our country in the place of Germany, fighting against enormous odds (of course, you will here kindly remind me that such a situation is even beyond imagination). Now I venture to assert that similar means adopted by us would be hailed with approbation, and, from a patriotic standpoint, rightly so. While, therefore, our President, who is an American and not a German, and who is, therefore, an American patriot and not a German patriot, did well to protest most vigorously against the Lusitania outrage, our bias should be tempered by a view such as I have propounded. Further, we must also not forget that, guilty as Germany is from our point of view, England is by no means innocent—again from the point of view of neutrals; for, to be sure, the patriotic Englishman can offer as many good excuses for England's course of action as can the Teuton for Germany's.

It is clear enough that England's prime reason for entering the war was the opportunity it gave her of crushing a dangerous commercial rival. Again, from the point of view of patriotism, this action was fully warranted. The German patriot was just as eager to crush his English rival. What, however, casts a great deal of discredit upon England is the attempt her statesmen have made to pose as the humanitarians of the world. And so skillful are these men—the bungling German diplomats fade into insignificance in comparison—that they have succeeded in convincing a large section of our own population. Prussian autocracy, Prussian militarism, is the latest bugaboo. That the Prussian military caste is a nuisance no one can deny; that, in this respect, England and France are in a measure superior, can also not be denied. If, then, the war were one between England and France on the one hand, and Germany on the other, these English attacks would have some basis. But to those who know Russia, does it not seem laughable when that country joins the duet in gravely protesting against this same militarism, and joins the duet again in proclaiming herself one of the liberators of Europe? The farce is kept up by an interchange of compliments between the Czar and King George, and between Duke Nicholas and General Joffre. The English press teems with the wonderful strategy of Duke Nicholas's retreats, and of the extraordinary bravery of his troops. And yet I well remember, during the Russo-Japanese War, when I was in London, that the same British press could not find words strong enough to condemn Russia—the same Russia of today—and all that's in it! With such an ally by their side, the word "liberty" when used by the English and French has a strange sound.

That present day diplomacy is the root of much evil needs hardly to be gainsaid. Cunning remains cunning, no matter how much you twist it, and in the end little good can come of it. Of all the statesmen in Europe there is not one who approaches our own President for loftiness of purpose, for breadth of view, for downright sincerity. His speeches are gems. In them he expounds doctrines which would go a long way toward making our planet a garden of Eden. Unfortunately, he is too far in advance of other Ministers of State. In dealing with them he is but one and they are many, and, in a large measure, he is still forced to adopt their language and their ideas. Herein lies the tragedy.

We in this country are laying much stress on our so-called humanitarianism. Using the comparative scale, we may say that our claim is a bad one, and England's worse. It is ridiculous to talk of our humanity when we ship arms, whether to one side, or to the other, or to both. It is still more ridiculous to assert, as an excuse, that if we placed an embargo on arms we should be helping Germany. In either case you are really showing not a neutrality, but a decided partiality. If ours is humanity, then we ship food to all—to England, to Germany, to every nation. If ours is humanity, let us do all we can to point out to Europe the futility of settling differences by force of arms.

Yet according to all the rules of the game, we are entirely within our rights to ship arms. We point out that Germany has done in the past what we are doing now. That is perfectly true. Germany has no right to complain. But what does this mean? It means that we are no better than Germany. It means that our pretentions to humanitarianism, like those of England, and of Germany, are a sham. It means that, in our slow progress towards the ideal, we are by no means ahead of the nations, but just abreast of them.

WHAT HINDERS GEN. FRENCH

A Defense of the British Commander Against Various Aspersions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to point out a few of the many inaccuracies of the article, "Sir John French Under a Cloud," that appeared in the Magazine Section of THE TIMES of the 4th inst. I was an officer of the British Army and was at Paardeberg when the Boers, under Cronje, surrendered. Kitchener was not the senior officer present; the late Lord Roberts was in command of the British, and to him belonged "the laurels of victory."

The French Government, press, and army commander have all repeatedly expressed their appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by the British expeditionary force and its commander, Sir John French, decorating that officer with the highest mark of their regard, the Medal Militaire.

Yet "Veteran Diplomat" states that the French complained. What French complained? Not the French press, the French Government, nor the French military commander.

He asks why General French does not do more with the 2,000,000 exceptional men he has at his command. Where does "Veteran Diplomat" get his figures from? All other sources of information show that the British expeditionary force cannot exceed 500,000, and also show that the "exceptional" men of the new armies have not yet left England.

When he asks why General French holds back, does he think that the war is run on a "go-as-you-please" plan; that General French can advance where and when he pleases, without reference to his allies and their plans? He appears to insinuate that General French refrains from trying for a victory for fear that Lord Kitchener may take all the credit.

He states that Asquith and Kitchener are pressing French to take action, and that the latter will not do so. Who appointed French to the command of the British expeditionary force? The King, on the advice of his Ministers—Asquith and Kitchener. How long would it take him to remove French if he were to prove unsatisfactory?

"Veteran Diplomat" states that Kitchener found everything at the War Office in an unsatisfactory condition; army disorganized, troops without proper equipment, arsenals without ammunition. Yet the largest, best equipped, and finest expeditionary force that ever left England landed in France within a couple of weeks of the outbreak of the war.

As to the "so-called territorial force, for the most part on paper," Lord Kitchener has recently stated that the territorial force was of the greatest benefit to the country in its task of increasing the armed forces to the millions they have now reached.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hope you will permit an old admirer of the American spirit, who has long read and sometimes contributed to THE NEW YORK TIMES, to utter a word of frank protest against the gossip printed in your magazine pages of July 4, under the heading, "Sir John French Under a Cloud." A number of the statements of "A Veteran Diplomat" are, to my personal knowledge false. I am not a friend of any of the eminent persons named, and have often criticised the public acts of some of them. But to say that this farrago of vile imputation is "the universal topic of conversation" in London, and is alluded to in the newspapers, is, to speak plainly, a lie. It is sufficiently astonishing that it should be possible in New York.

HINTS ON SOUTH AMERICA.

Much the American Has to Learn, Especially Latin Psychology.

Buenos Aires, June 30, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The antipathy of South Americans to North American products is passing away slowly but surely, especially so since the European war began. The Germans had the major portion of the trade, especially in Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile. They sold their goods very much cheaper than America could afford to sell, but their goods were of an inferior quality and their machinery very poorly constructed and short lived. This the South Americans are now finding out when they come to compare the manufactured products of the two countries. The Germans also gave very long terms—six, nine and twelve months, and even longer.

I had occasion not long ago to look over a merchant's correspondence and invoices from Germany, and I will cite only one of the many methods they used for stocking up the merchant. This merchant had ordered one gross of a certain article. They sent him twelve gross. At the foot of the invoice was noted: "We presume you made a mistake in ordering one gross and that you wanted twelve gross, which we have sent. If we are right in this the regular six months' dating will apply; if not you can pay for the one gross on the regular terms

MR. AND MRS. ASTOR GIVE DANCING PARTY

Their First Large Entertainment of the Summer Held at Beechwood.

OTHER NEWPORT DIVERSION

Various Dinners Precede the Astors' Ball—Handicap Golf Tournament Today.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor gave this evening their first large entertainment of the Summer, a dance at Beechwood, which they are occupying for the first time since their marriage. From various dinners the guests arrived for dancing in the famous ballroom, and later a supper was served.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Wilks Cary, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Joseph E. TRIBUTES TO MRS. WILSON.

Georgia Children Bring Flowers to Grave on Anniversary of Death.

ROME, Ga., Aug. 6.—Scores of children and many adults paid tribute to the memory of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson today, the first anniversary of her death, by placing flowers on her grave. An hour was set aside for the children this morning and many of them went to the cemetery with only a single blossom, which they placed among the mass of floral tributes sent by organizations and individuals in many parts of the country.

The Ellen Axson Wilson Memorial Association held services at the grave later. Dr. G. G. Snydor of the First Presbyterian Church, who conducted Mrs. Wilson's funeral, led the services.

CORNISH, Aug. 6.—Pressure of official business forced the President to work most of the day, despite the fact that it was the first anniversary of Mrs. Wilson's death. He was deeply touched by tributes paid to her memory by the people of Rome, Ga., where she is buried.

GERMAN "INVASION" AT FAIR.

Flag-Decked Delegates Pay a Very Short Visit to French Pavilion.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—The spirit of war cast its shadow over the exposition grounds at brief intervals this afternoon. Several officers of the national German-American Alliance, wearing miniature flags of the Fatherland, walked into the French pavilion and, as the ditty runs, "Walked right out again."

In the party were Dr. C. J. Hexamer, President of the Alliance; Walter H. Schultz, German Exposition representative; H. C. Bloedel of Pittsburgh, Joseph Keller of Indianapolis, John Hermann of San Francisco, and their wives.

Guards were summoned and the visitors were told that they could not enter the French pavilion while wearing the flags of Germany.

LONDON CAMERA COMEDY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Under the heading, "Zabern on Thames," The Star says:

"The baseless charge of using insulting words, preferred against a press photographer at Marlborough Street, was chiefly interesting because the police witnesses stated that orders had been given that no photographs were to be taken at the wedding of the American Ambassador's daughter at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. As on that very day the King and Queen were duly and royally photographed on their return from St. Paul's without anyone's dignity being injured, we should much like to know who gave these orders and by what right they were given. In the United States Ambassador's own country any such orders would have been treated with ridicule and contempt, and we really do not see that the comity of nations calls upon us to secure for Dr. Page privileges which he would not enjoy in his own country, and which are not claimed by monarchs in ours.

"The war has given so much irresponsible authority to obscure bureaucrats that these gentry are suffering just now from swollen heads. The time has already come for teaching the Tite Barnacle family that they are our servants and not our masters."

DROP USE OF BILLBOARDS.

Brooklyn Theatres Refuse to Pay Increased Posting Rate.

The theatre managers of Brooklyn have decided to dispense with billboard advertising for the coming year and to spend the money formerly devoted to that form of publicity in newspaper and other kinds of advertising.

This was decided upon at a meeting of the managers or more than twenty Brooklyn playhouses held yesteraay in the rooms of the United Protective Association of Theatre Managers in Manhattan.

This policy was adopted as a retaliatory measure against the bill-posting companies who gave notice of an increased rental for the coming year.

The rate, originally 3 cents a sheet, had been raised to 4 cents, and notice had been given that it would be raised to 5 cents. It was at this last increase that the managers rebelled.

Representatives of the bill-posting companies and the theatres conferred, but no agreement was reached.

FILM MAKERS REALIGNED.

Seven Companies to Furnish Mutual Program for Coming Year.

A new alignment of film manufacturers has been made to furnish the program for the Mutual Film Corporation for the coming year. The combined capital of the mutual companies aggregates $10,000,000 and the program serves between 7,000 and 8,000 theatres throughout the country.

The manufacturing companies in the distributing concern are the American Film Company, Inc., the Keystone Company, the Essanay, Bostock, Ingle and Film Company, David Horsley Productions, Reliance Motion Picture Corporation, Thanhouser Film Corporation, and Mustang Film Company.

The company will distribute $8,000,000 worth of film the coming year, a total of 200 miles a week. The pictures will all be feature pictures of one, two, three, and more reels.

Dancers Arrive for Ice Ballet.

Twenty-two ice dancers from Berlin arrived yesterday on the Norwegian-America liner Kristianiafjord to appear in an ice ballet on skates at the Hippodromo. The girls were all German except Ellen Lauerson-Dollerup of Copenhagen, and were accompanied by Toto Novello, a clown.

RANDALL-MAXSON MARRIAGE

FREEPORT, L. I., Aug. 6.—Russell S. Randall, grandson of John J. Randall, and Miss Josephine Maxson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Max, son, announced today that they were married on July 23. The bride broke the news to her parents and received their blessing.

They went to Hempstead on the evening of July 23, obtained a marriage license and visited the Rev. W. W. Winans, who performed the ceremony.

Yacht Club to Give Musical Show.

The Manhasset Bay Yacht Club will give an entertainment tonight at Port Washington, L. I. The leading feature is to be a two-act musical review arranged by Fritz Williams. Those taking part will include Mrs. B. F. Parsons, Jr., Mrs. Russell Bruce, the Misses Richie Sutton, Elsie Marsh, Henrietta MacElhinny, Jessie Holbrook, and Russell Sturland, John Flaherty, Russell Bruce, B. F. Parsons, Jr., Allyn J. Marsh, and William Hoibrook.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Lucile Watson has received an offer by cable from George Grossmith to play the role in "Under Cover" in which she was seen all last season in the Cort Theatre. Gerald du Maurier will head the London cast. Miss Watson has the offer under consideration.

Gus Scheu has been added to the cast of Ned Weyburn's "Town Topics" company now in rehearsal. Mr. Scheu, who is a son of Augustus Scheu, Commissioner of Public Works of Buffalo, is an eccentric dancer. France Thompson, also a dancer, is another recruit for the revue.

The company of American players who will appear in "Kick In" in London, will sail today on the St. Louis. It includes Wilton Taylor, James Heenan, Helen Holmes, Vera Finley, Edith Browning, Helen Marqua, Josephine Williams, Ramsey Wallace, Noel Arnold and James Lennon.

Another passenger on the St. Louis will be Sidney Elliston, who came from London to rehearse the new numbers that have been added to "The Girl from Utah," which will return to the Knickerbocker Monday. On his arrival in the British capital, Mr. Elliston will stage "The Only Girl" for Lorillard & Goldsmith.

Rehearsals are being held in the Grand Opera House of "Pollyanna," a dramatization by Catherine Chisholm Cushing of Eleanor H. Porter's book of that title. The play will be produced by Klaw & Erlanger, in association with George C. Tyler in Detroit, Monday, Aug. 23. Patricia Collinge will head the cast which will also include Effie Shannon, Jessie Busley, Maude Granger, Helen Wethersby, Philip Merrivale, Herbert Kelcey, Thomas Tobin and Lorin Baker.

Creighton Hale has been added to the cast of "Moloch," Beulah Marie Dix's war drama, in which Holbrook Blin will be seen here early in the season.

Selwyn & Co. gave a special performance of "Twin Beds" in the Harris Theatre yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the Side-a-Wee Home. The members of the original company, many of whom are spending their vacations out of the city, returned to take part in the performance.

SUFFRAGE TORCH TO JERSEY TODAY

THEN TO GO ON A TOUR

Mayors of Towns Along the Line Reported in Favor of Votes for Women.

The "Torch of Victory," which has been on tour, in automobiles through New York State, under the auspices of the Women's Political Union, from the far end of Long Island to Buffalo, will be transferred today to the State of New Jersey, where the women will use it in their campaigning for the ballot.

At 11:30 A. M. the tug Holbrook, decorated for the occasion by Mrs. Calvin Tomkins with purple green and white, the Union's colors, will leave Pier A, North River, carrying a party of suffragists, and Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, who started the torch on its trip through New York, will present it to the New Jersey women at noon. The Jersey suffragists will leave Jersey City on the tug A. W. Smith, and Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle of Newark, President of the New Jersey organization, will receive the torch while the tugs are in mid-stream. During the ceremony Mrs. Anna Delony Martin will recite Percy Mackaye's "Hymn to Equal Suffrage."

Mrs. Havemeyer will make a brief speech of presentation, and Mrs. Van Winkle one of acceptance. Mr. Tumulty, Secretary to Mark M. Fagan, Mayor of Jersey City, will present letters pledging their support to suffrage from the Mayors of all the towns through which the torch will pass.

The following suffragists are to take part: Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane, Miss L. D. Deaver, Miss Ellen K. Lente, Miss Irene Heyliger, Miss Portia Willis, Mrs. Anna Delony Martin, Miss Katherine Leckie, Miss Anna K. Alyes, Mrs. Susan Rudd, Mrs. William Colt, Miss Wemona Marlin, Mrs. Sarah McConnell, Mrs. Howard Hipkins, Miss Augusta Rosenthal, Mrs. Bertha Kunz Baker, Mrs. Calvin Tomkins, Mrs. Frederick Blankensee, Miss Marion Tomkins, Miss Margaret Newman, and Miss Alberta M. Hill.

Returning, the Jersey tug will dock at the Pennsylvania pier in Jersey City, and the first day's run of the torch will begin with a street meeting in Jersey City at 12:30 o'clock, and end with one at Keansburg at 8 P. M. Between these hours meetings will be held at Military Park, Newark, at 1:45; Rahway, 3; Perth Amboy, 4:30, and Keyport at 6.

Many decorated automobiles will join the run; the speakers will include George H. Brenslinger, Commissioner of Finance, Jersey City; A. Harry Moore, Commissioner of Parks and Public Buildings, Jersey City; Thomas F. Meaney, Jr., Secretary to Naval Officer Wittpenn; Frank H. Pierce of Boonton; Rev. Charles S. Kemble of Rahway; Mrs. Van Winkle; Miss Louise J. Connelly, Summit; Fillmore Condit of Essex Fells; Everett Colby of Llewellyn Park; Nicholas O. Berry of Wallington, N. J.; Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley of New York; J. A. Hopkins of Morristown; James B. Furber, Rahway; J. E. Arnett of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. de Bonneville, Bayonne; Winston Paul, Miss Rose Weiss, W. J. Morgan, and Mrs. M. J. Reynolds of Newark.

The torch will be carried around the State in relay runs.

Mrs. Havemeyer and Miss Eleanor Brannan will enter New Jersey next Monday, to help in the campaign.

Mrs. Havemeyer will motor from her home in Stamford, Conn., Monday morning, and her schedule of outdoor meetings for the day is as follows: 12 o'clock noon, Military Park, Newark; 3 P. M., Red Bank; 7 P. M., Asbury Park; 8:30, Long Branch.

Tuesday noon she will speak at Freehold, and at several neighboring towns during the day, returning to New York on Wednesday.

SUFFRAGE CAMPFIRES GLOW.

Woman Campaigners Get Favorable Reception in Upper Part of City.

The Woman Suffrage Party held a series of campfire meetings in Manhattan and the Bronx last night, all of which attracted big crowds and added much zest to the Summer campaign. The biggest and most enthusiastic was at 204th Street and Sherman Avenue. There a real campfire was lighted on a rocky bluff and a tableau was given. The picture was that of a gypsy woman telling the State of New York to keep the campfire burning if victory was to be won.

Miss Portia Willis, in a white Grecian gown, represented the State of New York, and Miss Virginia Thorbourgh the disfranchised daughter. After the tableau there were fireworks and illuminated balloons, each bearing a campfire proclamation calling upon the voters to support the woman suffrage amendment, were sent up. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw presided at this meeting. The speakers included Mrs. Laidlaw, Miss Thorbourgh, Miss Willis, Miss Adelaide Sterling, and Miss Lavinia Dock.

The second meeting was at 181st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, and there was a crowd of at least 1,000 persons, most of them present. Two hundred enrolled under the suffrage banner and promised to vote for the amendment.

The last meeting was at 181st Street and University Avenue, the Bronx. Mrs. William Swan of the Thirty-first Assembly District presided, and there were 1,500 present. Among the speakers was a man—Reuben J. Wittstein. Another meeting, with tableau and campfire, will be held there tonight. Speakers and workers made the tour in three automobiles gayly decorated with suffrage banners.

ANTIS REPLY TO BRADLEY.

Women Opposed to Ballot Deny Support of Liquor Interests.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J., Aug. 6.—Founder James A. Bradley, who refused to allow his big auditorium to be used for an anti-suffrage rally on the plea that the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage is backed by the liquor interests, is taken to task in a statement issued today by Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, General Secretary at headquarters here, in which she says:

"The New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage has never at any time accepted any contribution from any of the so-called brewery or liquor interests, either directly or indirectly, and we challenge Mr. Bradley to prove the assertion he so freely and gratuitously makes.

"The statement made by Mr. Bradley is at once an insult to the women of New Jersey and to every woman.

"Let Mr. Bradley look at our list of Vice Presidents and Branch Presidents, and let him pick out any one who is even remotely interested in the liquor interests."

Frederick A. Pearson to Wed.

The engagement is announced of Miss Elizabeth Stoddard of Wilkes-Barre, Penn., and Frederick A. Pearson of New York and London. Mr. Pearson is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Pearson (Miss Mabel Ward) of Coombe House, Kingston Hill, Surrey, England, who were lost in the Lusitania disaster. They had spent little time in this country since 1896, when Mr. Pearson purchased the estate in Surrey. Their country estate here was Edgewood, at Great Barrington, Mass., where Mr. Pearson and his sister, Miss Natalie Pearson, are spending the Summer. No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

Dr. Addoms to Wed Miss Burtis.

Mrs. Leonard J. Burtis of Brooklyn gave a luncheon yesterday at her Summer home, at Brightwaters, L. I., at which she announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Ella Margaret Burtis, to Dr. Lewis Paddock Addoms. Miss Burtis is a niece of Professor John B. Whitaker. Dr. Addoms, who is a son of Mrs. Samuel Addoms of Brooklyn, is a graduate of Columbia University, class of '03.

TESTS "BURNLESS" X-RAY.

Inventor Says His Apparatus Cannot Harm the Operator.

A dozen or more physicians and surgeons, all of them experts in the scientific use of X-rays, gathered last night in the laboratory of Charles H. Stanley at 166 West Eighty-seventh Street, for a private demonstration of Mr. Stanley's "harmless," or "burnless," X-ray apparatus. This invention has been the subject of much discussion in medical circles for the last few months and is now under investigation by the Bureau of Public Health of the United States Treasury Department.

Mr. Stanley says for his invention that it will do all of the work of the common X-ray machines without the danger from burns or dermatitis usually feared at present by operators and subjects. As he expected, he encountered skepticism in the medical profession when he announcd his discovery, but he offset this, to a great extent, by inviting the Government to examine his invention. Next he invited the chief roentgenologists of New York and Johns Hopkins University to attend the private demonstration that he gave last night. Those present admitted to Mr. Stanley, it is said, that he had seemingly discovered and perfected a wonderful invention, but none of them was prepared to give a scientific opinion on the merits of the new X-ray until after further investigation of it.

To show the harmless nature of his rays, Mr. Stanley stood for some minutes with his hand exposed directly to them, and those present were able to see through the hand clearly. The inventor said that he had thus exposed himself to the rays many times and had never suffered any burn.

The theory on which the invention is based is that the heavy currents used in X-ray tubes cause burns. Mr. Stanley, therefore, devised a machine to produce a high-frequency alternating current at millions of rays a pressure. Without an comparatively small volume, or, technically, a current of high voltage and low amperage.

According to the inventor, it is possible to obtain clear images through a brick wall six feet from the centre from which the rays issue. Without an intervening wall, he asserts, images may be obtained at a distance of twenty-five or thirty feet.

SEEK HERO MEDAL FOR BOY.

Eight-Year-Old South Carolinian Saved Child from Charleston Bay.

The friends of eight-year-old Randall Swan of Mt. Pleasant, S. C., have opened negotiations with the Carnegie Hero Fund to get him included among that institution's list of medalists for the rescue of a four-year-old child from drowning. If they are successful Randall will be one of the youngest, if not the very youngest, of the heroes so decorated. S. Phillips of Charleston, one of the friends of the family who are interested in the matter, yesterday told a TIMES reporter the story of the rescue.

Randall is the son of Captain James H. Swan, who, like his father, Captain George H. Swan, is one of the pilots of the port of Charleston. They live in Mt. Pleasant, across the bay, and little Randall is an excellent swimmer. On June 24 several of the older children of George W. Keckley, who lives near by, were swimming off the Swan pier, and George Keckley, 4, who was not with them, was watching them from the edge of the dock, lost his balance and fell into ten feet of water. The other children, becoming hysterical, were unable to go to his assistance. Then Randall Swan came down the pier, heard the screaming, and promptly jumped in with all his clothes on. He seized George's head, held it above water and brought him safely back to the pier.

ACTRESS DROPS SUIT.

Miss Clarke and H. S. De Camp Settle Breach of Promise Case.

The $50,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Florence E. Clarke, an actress, against Horace S. De Camp was discontinued in the Supreme Court yesterday by order of Justice Ford. The court order was the result of an application by Miss Clarke in person, and the law firm of Hays, Herschfield & Wolf, representing Mr. De Camp, reciting that the case had been adjusted out of court.

Mr. De Camp was married on Christmas Day, 1913, to Mrs. M. F. Marvin, who had lost her first husband, Daniel W. Marvin, 2d, while returning to this country on their honeymoon aboard the Titanic.

In her complaint Miss Clarke asserted that Mr. De Camp's promise and her subsequent engagement to him caused her to abandon a career on the stage, give up the study of the dramatic art and all her social connections.

John L. Linehan, Miss Clarke's lawyer, has died since the beginning of the suit, and this accounted for Miss Clarke's personal signature to the discontinuance application, the paper recited.

ACTRESS GETS ACCOUNTING.

Marie Dressler Half Owner of Film Play She Starred In.

Though the Supreme Court decided against Miss Marie Dressler, that there was no evidence of fraud or of violation of contract in the Keystone Film Company's disposal of the six-reel film play, "Tilly's Punctured Romance," of which Dressler, the star of the play, is half owner, the court upheld the actress in her suit to the extent of awarding her 50 per cent. of the net profits from the play, based on an accounting furnished by the company and approved by the court.

Miss Dressler complained that the film company had made no accounting to her.

Mrs. Jeanne de la M. Lozier.

Mrs. Jeanne de la Montagnie Lozier, one of the first graduates of the New York Homeopathic College, and the widow of Dr. Abraham Witton Lozier, died yesterday at the home of Miss E. T. Williams, 141 St. Mark's Avenue, New Brighton, Staten Island, in her seventy-fifth year. She was born in this city and became associated with Dr. Clemente S. Lozier, founder of the Homeopathic College, during her student days there. After graduation, she became professor of physiology and chemistry at the college, later resigning to take up private practice. Her husband was the son of Dr. Clemente S. Lozier. Mrs. Lozier lived during the Winter at the Montague Hotel in Brooklyn, and was an active member of women's clubs. She served for three years as President of the Sorosis Club, and for many years was President of the Rutgers Alumnae Association, composed of graduates of the Rutgers Female Seminary. A son and daughter survive her.

Dr. George T. Little.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Aug. 6.—Dr. George T. Little, Librarian of Bowdoin College for thirty-two years, died tonight. He was 58 years old. Dr. Little was born in Auburn, Me., and was graduated from Bowdoin in 1877, and in 1894 received the honorary degree of Litt. D. From 1878 until 1882 he was Latin Professor at Thayer Academy in Braintree, Mass. Returning to Bowdoin he taught Latin until 1885. Since that time he had been Librarian. Dr. Little was a member of the State Library Commission and a member of the Maine Historical Society and the American Alpine Club. He was the author of several historical works.

GEN. BENJ. F. TRACY DIES IN 86TH YEAR

Soldier, Statesman, Jurist Had Been in Coma Since Paralytic Stroke.

FATHER OF FIGHTING NAVY

As Secretary Under Harrison He Took the Department Out of Politics—Funeral Monday.

General Benjamin Franklin Tracy, Secretary of the Navy under President Harrison, died at 3:30 yesterday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand Wilmerding, at 14 East Sixtieth Street. He was in his eighty-fifth year.

His daughter and son, Frank Tracy and the attending nurse, Miss Pinkerton, were at his bedside when the end came. The General, who had been unconscious for the past ten days, with the exception of a brief period last Tuesday, died peacefully. When he became conscious on Tuesday afternoon, and opened his eyes for a few moments, Mrs. Wilmerding was at his bedside, and her father recognized her but was unable to speak. He then relapsed into the coma that ended in death.

Dr. William B. Pritchard of 143 West Seventy-second Street, who had been the General's physician for twenty-two years, said that it was only the General's great vitality that kept him alive for the past two weeks. Frank Tracy said last night that his father had been unable to take nourishment since he went to his bed after his stroke of paralysis suffered at dinner two weeks ago.

It is thought that an accident suffered by General Tracy on Memorial Day had to do with his death, although he was said to have made a complete recovery. For many years he had lived a regular and ordered life, and several days before his stroke he was delayed for several hours on a railway journey. He worried much over this.

Frank Tracy sent many telegrams last night to friends throughout the country, announcing the death of his father. The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock in Trinity Church. The body will be buried in Greenwood.

Soldier, Statesman, Jurist.

General Tracy had been before the public as a brilliant soldier, statesman, and jurist for more than sixty years. As Secretary of the Navy under President Harrison he was called "The Father of the Fighting Navy." "Some people have called me 'the father of the fighting navy,'" he said shortly before his death. "I don't deny it. I believe I am. I tried to take the Navy Department out of politics and I believe I succeeded."

He was born in his father's farmhouse in Tioga County, N. Y., in 1830, and his father, Benjamin Tracy, was a soldier in the war of 1812. His grandfather, Thomas Tracy, settled in Tioga late in the eighteenth century, having moved there from his home in New England. After graduating from the grammar school General Tracy attended Owego Academy and studied law with David & Warner of Owego. At the age of 21 he was admitted to the bar of the State of New York.

General Tracy was active in politics from his earliest youth, and in 1853 he was elected District Attorney of Tioga County on the Whig ticket. He was the youngest District Attorney ever elected in the State of New York, and the ticket of the Whig ticket was badly defeated.

Helped Organize Republican Party.

Not long after this he took the leading part in the organization of the Republican Party in this State and was elected Chairman of the Tioga County Republican Committee, the first County Committee organized in the State of New York. He was also the first representative of his county at the State Convention and was a member of the committee that issued the first Republican address to the voters of this State.

In 1856 he was again elected District Attorney, defeating Gilbert C. Walker, who later became Governor of Virginia. Shortly after the election he formed a law partnership with his late opponent under the name of Tracy & Walker.

General Tracy became very prominent in his profession in the old Sixth Judicial District, and at the age of 26 was trying more cases than any other lawyer in his county. It is related that in 1859, when he was suddenly taken ill, court was compelled to adjourn because he was engaged in every case in the calendar. He was more active than ever in politics, and in 1861 was elected to the Assembly. At the meeting of the Legislature in 1862 there was a sharp contest for the Speakership of the Assembly between Hurlburt of St. Lawrence County and Henry J. Raymond, editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES. General Tracy espoused Mr. Raymond's cause, and, after a bitter fight, Mr. Raymond won. General Tracy then became the acknowledged leader of his party on the floor of the Assembly.

When Sickles's army was checked on the Peninsular, in the Summer of 1862, President Lincoln called for 300,000 more men. General Tracy raised the 109th and 137th regiments of New York Volunteers in a month, and was appointed Colonel of the first. His first active service was under General Burnside, and he won the Congressional Medal of Honor and was brevetted Brigadier General of Volunteers for his conduct at the battle of the Wilderness. Four times during the battle he rallied his regiment, and finally captured the Confederate regimental flag. At the moment of victory he fell desperately wounded upon his battle flag.

After recuperating in the hospital at Annapolis, he returned to his home in Owego. In the Fall of 1862 he was appointed Colonel of the 127th Regiment, colored troops, and took command of the prison camp at Elmira, which he held until Lee surrendered.

Fought Revenue Tax Evaders.

On July 1, 1865, he became a member of the law firm of Benedict, Burr & Benedict in this city, and in the Fall of 1866 was appointed United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of New York. He immediately began a war on the distillers and others who had been defrauding the Government through conspiring to avoid the payment of the internal revenue taxes. To convict these men he drew the famous Conspiracy act and had it passed by Congress in 1867, and it is under this act that all the trials for conspiracy to defraud the United States have been held for more than forty years. Finding that the law for the collection of taxes on distilled spirits was defective he drew up what became known as the Revenue act of 1868, under which taxes have been collected for more than forty years.

General Tracy performed other noteworthy services as District Attorney, and in 1873 resigned to return to private practice. In December, 1881, he was appointed by Governor Cornell to take the place of Judge Andrews as a member of the Court of Appeals. He served one year, and during this time wrote the opinions of the court on a number of important cases. The most noted of these was that of Story vs. The Elevated Railroad, in which it was determined that the elevated should pay damages to abutting owners for the injuries suffered by the erection of the structure. This and his other opinions have never been overruled and have been approved whenever they came under review.

His activity in political affairs continued, and with General James Jourdan and Hugh B. Hutcheson, he practically controlled the Republican Party of Kings County for years.

Rebuilt Our Navy.

President Harrison appointed him Secretary of the Navy in 1889, and it was owing to his efforts that the navy reached the condition of efficiency that distinguished it in the Spanish-American War. Every important ship that took part in the war, except the Baltimore, was constructed while he was Secretary. The first great battleships, the Massachusetts, Oregon, and Indiana; the first armored cruisers, the New York and Brooklyn, and the scout cruisers Columbia and Minneapolis, the fastest of their day, were all designed and built in his administration.

When Theodore Roosevelt was President he said that the more intimately he became acquainted with the affairs of the navy the more he appreciated the work of its former Secretary, General Tracy.

The tragedy of General Tracy's life was the loss of his wife and daughter, Mary, at a single blow. While he was Secretary of the Navy in 1890 his beautiful Washington home caught fire and both were burned to death.

On his retirement from the navy he returned to this city and resumed his private practice. His fame as a lawyer had become international, and he acted as counsel for Venezuela in the dispute over boundary lines between that country and England in 1895. Another famous case in which he was one of the counsel for the defense was when Theodore Tilton sued Henry Ward Beecher for $100,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections. This trial lasted six months and ended in a disagreement.

In 1897, in response to the call of his party, General Tracy accepted the Republican nomination for Mayor of New York. He realized that he was foredoomed to defeat, and ran against Seth Low and Robert A. Van Wyck at the first election under the new charter, at which the Tammany candidate was the victor.

General Tracy played a great part in the completion of the plans for the consolidation of the Boroughs of New York, and was Chairman of the commission that drafted the Charter of the present city. He served the city again, both as a lawyer and financial expert, when he was appointed in June, 1908, by Justice Blanchard to act as referee and report on the debt limit of the city. The question of whether the city could afford to continue building subways had arisen and it was of vital importance to its prosperity and growth that this be determined. In April, 1909, after long months of incessant labor, General Tracy reported that there was a debt margin of more than one hundred and sixty-five millions, and the subway construction went ahead.

Of late years, owing to his prominence as a lawyer and as a citizen, he was often consulted on matters of public import. On his eighty-fourth birthday he expressed himself positively on the Mexican question and said that the President ought to have recognized Huerta. He was active in his law practice until the very last and always said that it was his ambition to "die in harness."

General Tracy was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic of New York City, and the Union League and Metropolitan Clubs. He is survived by his daughter and a son, Frank B. Tracy.

Herman Raub.

Herman Raub, former President of the Consumers Park Brewery, died on Tuesday at the hotel at Seaside, Rockaway Beach, which he opened last April. He was born in Germany forty-six years ago, and came to this country when he was 15. At the age of 23 he became the owner of the Central Railroad Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Station, New York. He was successful in this business, and when he was 30 years old he had sufficient backing to organize the Consumers Park Brewery. He was the President of this brewery for many years, but in 1902 he was forced out by the Board of Directors. He was a thirty-third degree Mason, and in 1905 was elected King of the Coney Island Madri Gras.

ROOT URGES SPEED TO END CONVENTION

MUST ADJOURN BY SEPT. 11

President Warns Delegates That They Must Keep at Work—Conservation Problems Discussed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—Before the Constitutional Convention adjourned this afternoon to meet again on Monday morning, President Elihu Root made a little speech to the delegates, in which he urged them to speed up. When they returned to the Capitol from their week-end visit to their homes, he said, they must come prepared to stay here until final adjournment. In order to submit the revised Constitution at the general election on Nov. 2, he said, it would be necessary for the convention to adjourn on Sept. 11 at the latest. The convention will hold three sessions daily next week.

The convention devoted today to consideration of conservation problems. In the debate President Root pleaded for better protection of migratory fish. The proposed new conservation amendment exempts "migratory fish of the sea, within the limits of the marine district," from supervision by the Conservation Department. Lemuel Quigg of Columbia deplored, depredation by market fishermen in the Great South Bay, where the migratory fish come to feed at night. Mr. Quigg urged an amendment to protect fish within the bay which is not part of the marine district established by the Federal Government.

"I should urge Mr. Quigg to make a motion to have the exemption affecting migratory fish stricken from the article altogether," said Mr. Root, who at the time was not in the chair, the convention sitting as a committee of the whole. Mr. Quigg made the motion and Mr. Root made a speech in support of it. Then a rising vote was taken, which resulted in defeat for Mr. Quigg, and Mr. Root on the original motion, but victory for Mr. Quigg on a motion to amend so as to afford protection for ocean game fish within the confines of Great South Bay. The vote on the motion which Mr. Root urged Mr. Quigg to make was 26 in the affirmative and 43 in the negative.

The defeat of the Root-Quigg motion will continue the freedom of action now enjoyed by large fisheries companies off the Long Island coast, while the fishermen of small means in the Great South Bay will be subject to the supervision of the Conservation Department.

Robert S. Pelletreau, a Republican delegate from Patchogue, opposed the Root-Quigg motion, saying that it would destroy the fishing industry on the Long Island coast. Ex-Senator McKinney of Northport was defeated when he sought to put through an amendment which would exempt the shell fish industry from regulation by the Conservation Department.

Ex-Commissioner James S. Whipple, a delegate from Cattaraugus County, moved to amend the section by substituting salaried and single-headed Conservation Commission for the proposed board of nine unpaid members with a Superintendent of Conservation. This amendment was voted down.

On motion of Senator Foley of New York, Democrat, an amendment was made under which the nine Commissioners will be appointed with the consent and advice of the Senate. Under the section as advanced, the Governor will have power of removal without the Senate's concurrence.

William S. Ostrander of Saratoga put through an amendment under which the quasi legislative powers of the proposed new Conservation Board will be subject to Legislative check. This amendment provides that the regulations made by the board, after they have been promulgated as the Legislature shall direct, shall have the effect of law "until and unless the Legislature shall modify such regulations." As the section read originally, the orders were subject only to the approval of the Governor.

George Clinton, Sr., of Buffalo succeeded in putting through an amendment providing that nothing in the section shall deprive the canal authorities of control of the waters in the canals or any of its feeders.

The debate on the conservation article will be continued on Monday. Ex-Senator George A. Blauvelt, Democrat, served notice that he would offer an amendment which would permit the construction of a highway from Long Lake in Hamilton County to Old Forge in Herkimer County by way of Blue Mountain and Raquette Lake to connect with an old road leading into the very heart of the Saranac region. The distance is about twenty-five miles. The amendment is required because the building of the road will necessitate the cutting of trees along the right of way.

E. M. Angell, a Republican from Warren County, announced that he would move to amend the article so as to provide for a survey and classification of the State forest lands under which land on the mountain tops and along the shores of lakes and rivers in the Adirondacks and Catskill reserves shall be kept as a wilderness, while in other parts of the forest preserve mature trees might be cut, highways built, and camp sites leased. The amendment also will permit the sale of forest land belonging to the State outside the preserve. The amendment runs counter to the policy laid down by the Conservation Committee and undoubtedly will be defeated.

FALLING DOOR KILLS BOY.

Two Smaller Brothers Hurt and Stableman Arrested.

John Goetz, 9 years old, of 442 East Tenth Street, was killed instantly, and his brother, Stephen, 7, and Joseph, 5 years, were injured seriously late yesterday afternoon when a half-ton sliding door slipped from its track at the entrance to a stable at 440 East Tenth Street and crushed them under it.

Abraham Lalinsky, 30, an employe of the stable, the police say, asked the three boys to aid him in repairing the door. He was locked up in the Union Market Station, charged with homicide. The Goetz brothers were grouped along the inner side and the man was straining at one end of the door when it fell inward. Lalinsky jumped to safety, but John Goetz was caught squarely in the centre of the door. Joseph jumped aside and escaped with a scalp wound, but Stephen's head was lacerated.

There were six children in the Goetz family. The father earns $6 a week.

CAUSE OF OKLAHOMA FIRE.

Government Decides That Combustion Started Blaze on Dreadnought.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—After a thorough examination officials of the New York Shipbuilding Company are convinced that the fire which swept the hold of the dreadnought Oklahoma several weeks ago was caused by spontaneous combustion. Government Inspectors are likewise sure that there is no foundation for the incendiary theory suggested soon after the discovery of the blaze.

Reports to this effect have been sent to the Navy Department in Washington, and in so far as the government is concerned the investigation to determine the cause of the fire is completed. The Oklahoma was to have been ready for delivery in October, but it is expected the fire will delay completion until early in January.

PHILLIPS IN JAIL AS A BRIBER

Detectives Say He Gave $100 to Suppress Gambling Evidence.

John M. Phillips, the suspended Purchasing Agent for State Prisons, who was arrested last Saturday on the charge of running a handbook and receiving bets on races, was arrested at the Queensboro Bridge Plaza last night on the charge of giving a bribe of $100 to Detective Joseph M. Gaffney of Inspector Boettler's staff in the hope of suppressing evidence against him.

Phillips was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Leach of the Long Island City Police Court, after Detective Gaffney and others had testified that they had seen Phillips accept two bets at 368 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City, and had found in his possession $656 in bills, a list of racehorses at tracks now in operation and two slips on which bets were written.

Last night when Phillips and Gaffney met at the Queensboro Plaza, Phillips offered, according to the detective, to give him $200 to forget the evidence in the betting case, $100 to be paid then, and the other $100 after the charge had been dropped.

"I don't know that you can make good on the $100," the detective said he replied.

"Just wait here a minute," said Phillips. Then he went to a newsstand bought a paper, came back and handed it to Gaffney, according to the detective. Detectives Erb and Dwyer of the Hunter's Point station came forward, took the newspaper and put Phillips under arrest. The detectives say they found a $100 bill between the pages of the newspaper.

POLICE TO JOIN ARMY CAMP.

Dozen Men Picked for Month's Training at Plattsburg.

The policemen who are to join the United States army camp of instruction at Plattsburg on Sunday night were assembled at headquarters yesterday morning to meet the Commissioner, who addressed them.

"You twelve men, as representatives of the force," the Commissioner said, "are going to have four weeks in the open under the eyes of some of the keenest officers in the United States army. Your work is not going to make you military officers, but better policemen. We are not giving you this opportunity to fit you for the army, but to increase the efficiency of the police department.

"One big thing you are going to get in this camp is a better idea of command, how to intelligently handle men. We need that in the department, as every efficient organization does, and I want you to make use of every minute of your time. Get everything you can out of this opportunity and bring back to the members of the force a whole lot of good practical stuff to work upon here."

The men detailed are Inspector James S. Bolan, Captain Edward P. Hughes, Captain John J. Collins, Lieutenant William T. Davis, Lieutenant Olaf G. S. Sonnestad, Lieutenant Charles I. McKinney, Lieutenant Charles E. Schofield; Sergeant Michael A. Wall, Sergeant Martin A. Noonan, Sergeant Harry A. Taylor, Sergeant David J. Goss, and Sergeant James J. Gegan.

HEAR FROM BULLOCK AGAIN.

Controversy About Non-Competitive City Bidding Continues.

William Bullock, Director of the Bureau of City Inquiry, yesterday wrote to President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen characterizing the latter's reply to Bullock's previous statement that in the last eighteen months the board had let $1,130,500 worth of city contracts without competitive bidding as "an explanation that does not explain."

"I listed eighty-five contracts let without bids," says Mr. Bullock. "You fill nine pages in an attempt to justify ten of them. You try to shift to Herman A. Metz, who has not been Controller since 1909, responsibility for the purchase by the city at present of motor vehicles without competition. You ignore the fact that for several years motor vehicles have been purchased by the Fire Department without competitive bidding and that there is no reason why the same should not be done in other city departments. * * * Does the Board of Aldermen, under your leadership, take the stand that the way to get the lowest prices is not to foster competition, but to kill it?

"There were 2,630,000 cubic yards of snow removed in Manhattan in 1913-14. As a result of your action in letting to the Belmont Trucking Company at 56 cents a cubic yard, for which the Soraci Contracting Company, which had successfully removed snow in the Bronx, bid 46 cents a yard, the city lost 10 cents a yard on one-third the total yardage."

MEETS POSTAL WIRE CUT.

American Telephone Co. Reduces Rate on Press Night Leased Lines.

H. S. Brooks, General Commercial Superintendent of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, announced yesterday that the company had cut in two the night rates on leased press wires, which have been $12 a year a mile for press associations and $10 a year a mile for individual newspapers.

"We always consider the press in every way possible," said Mr. Brooks, "and are constantly endeavoring to give the public, through the newspapers, better service. We have put through successively of late several steps for the giving of better and cheaper service—the cut in various night rates, the Public News Telephone service, which is now used very extensively, and several other similar steps. We have still others in contemplation."

Mr. Brooks denied that the present move is due to the cut made last week in leased night press wire rates by the Postal Telegraph Company, which also reduced the rates in force for many years past by 50 per cent.

COLUMBIA ON SCRAPHEAP.

Cup Yacht Fittings to be Converted Into Ammunition for the War.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—The yacht Columbia, which twice successfully defended the America's Cup, has been consigned to the scrap heap in this city and the steel frame, leaden keel, and brass fittings will be converted into missiles of warfare for the European belligerents. The keel alone weighs 100 tons.

The Columbia, which lowered the colors of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrocks I. and II., respectively, in 1899 and 1901, recently was dismantled at City Island, L. I., and shipped to a manufacturing concern here. The boat is said to have cost the New York Yacht Club, its original owner, more than $300,000.

WOMAN DIES IN TAXICAB.

Buyer for Australian Firm Falls Ill After Leaving Hotel.

As she was driving to a railway station to go to Chicago, Miss Emily Hamer, a buyer, became ill yesterday afternoon and died before she could be taken to a hospital.

The woman had been stopping since Aug. 3 at the Hotel McAlpin and left her card there, showing she represented A. Hensley Smith & Co. of 79 Pitt Street, Sydney, Australia. She also left word that her future address would be 3,953 Kedvale Avenue, Chicago.

When she left the hotel Miss Hamer took a taxicab. She had gone but a block when she became ill. Dr. Samuel Markel of 920 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx, passing by, gave her first aid, and realizing that the case was serious, ordered her taken to New York Hospital. Death was due to natural causes.

NEW YORK SHELLED ON 'MOVIE' SCREEN

"The Battle Cry for Peace" Meant to Show the Necessity for Preparedness.

TO AID DEFENSE CAMPAIGN

Promoters Hope to Carry the Message of Need of Greater Security to Every Home in America.

An animated, arresting, and sometimes lurid argument for the immediate and radical improvement of our national defenses was presented on the screen yesterday morning, when "The Battle Cry for Peace," an elaborate, new photo-pageant, was shown for the first time before an invited audience at the Vitagraph Theatre. Its rapidly shifting scenes picture the bombardment and invasion of New York City and the subjection of its people to the horrors that have been the Belgians' portion in the twelvemonth just come to a close. Thus is the rising propaganda for greater preparedness carried into the movies.

This new film has been devised and completed by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph Company under the inspiration of Hudson Maxim. Plus a slender plot, a modicum of "heart interest" and a great deal of flag-waving, "The Battle Cry for Peace" is the picture version of Mr. Maxim's "Defenseless America." It was Mr. Blackton's argument that, with the screens of the country at his disposal, he could reach the people with the Maxim data at a much more rapid pace than the book itself could possibly achieve. In his brief talk yesterday he said he hoped and expected to show the picture to 75,000,000 persons in the next six months.

In his scenario, Mr. Blackton deals roughly with the pacifists and generally advances his argument by bludgeon strokes. There is nothing in the least bit subtle about "The Battle Cry for Peace." None of it will go over the head even of the seventy-five millionth. And it is designed to make many a person in each audience resolve to join the National Guard, the American Legion, the National Security League, and the Navy League, forthwith, and to write to his Congressman by the next mail.

Has a Certain Accent of Authority.

And the accent of authority is given to the picture by the presence on the screen of Admiral Dewey, General Wood, and Secretary Garrison. Furthermore, the Commodore claims for his film the indorsement and co-operation of many a notable, from Theodore Roosevelt to Secretary Lansing.

It will be six weeks before this film is released to commerce. In the interval, it will be shown at militia encampments, at special meetings, and before the authorities at Washington, and in the different State capitals. It is to be shown at the Army and Navy Club in Washington next Monday night, and on the following Wednesday evening, according to the Vitagraph statement, it will be displayed on the White House lawn.

You, who attend a showing of this picture, see a good many ugly things. You see the advancing fleet of the enemy, with the projectiles from our coast guns falling short of their mark. You see the sky dotted with the oncoming air craft. You see bombs falling on the swaying crowd in Times Square, you see Long Island houses go up in flames, and the Capitol at Washington crumbling. You see the slender militia crumple up before a warfare by machinery, and see the wounded wreathing and tearing at the sod. And a great deal more.

Avowedly the invading force is of no particular nationality and the leading spy is called "Emanon," which you may spell backward if you wish. But it is difficult to escape the impression that you are expected to recognize the nationality. They are certainly not Portuguese, for instance.

Shell Scatters Doves of Peace.

You see this enemy-to-be represented in New York by a secret committee waiting for the invasion and meanwhile working to cut down defense appropriations in Washington and to accelerate the peace meetings. Such a meeting is actually in progress at a hotel here and a wealthy patron of the peace propaganda is ecstatically sneezing a flock of doves over the assemblage when the alarm comes and a moment later, a shell crashes through the wall. The enemy's fleet, for picture purposes, has actually come within bombardment range of the city without warning having reached the country in advance.

In the preparation of the film, a number of well known players have joined. Charles Richman, Joseph Kilgour, Lional Braham, Thais Lawton, and Norma Talmadge are among these. Some 25,000 National Guard Troops and 500 G. A. R. veterans help along. There are several notable novelties, one the screen view of the disappearing guns in action, another a panorama of Manhattan and its waters taken from a hydroaeroplane.

"The Battle Cry For Peace" is done on a large scale but it represents no advance in the motion picture art, nor indeed, does it pretend to do so. That is not what it is for.

FRANK DENIES HE'S DEAD.

Very Much Alive, the Prisoner Writes to a Friend Here.

A friend of Leo M. Frank, now in the Georgia State Prison at Milledgeville recovering from an attack made upon him by a convict, received a letter dated Aug. 4 in which he said:

"A kindly and just Providence has ordained that I am to live. I am well along on the road to recovery. The doctors say that my case is remarkable, (I was nearly decapitated,) and hold forth the opinion that I will, in time, be entirely well. The only effect will be a not-too-conspicuous scar. I have never had to wear "surgical braces." The wound is now dressed with but a light gauze bandage.

"I was amused yesterday at frantic inquiries from Atlanta and New York as to whether I was dead. I emphatically deny this. I am very much alive, albeit quite weak."

GIRL MISSING FROM A CAMP.

Lillian Emrich of Yonkers, 14 Years Old, Disappeared Wednesday.

Charles Emrich of 623 Bellevue Avenue, Yonkers, reported to the Bronx Detective Bureau last night that his sister Lillian, 14 years old, had been missing since Wednesday. He said he placed her in charge of Mrs. William Everson of Edgewater Camp, near Fort Schuyler, two weeks ago. The girl left the camp last Wednesday, saying she was going to return to her brother. Her relatives have not seen her since.

The missing girl is about 4 feet 7 inches in height, and weighs 110 pounds. She has light hair, a light complexion, and blue eyes. She wore a white dotted skirt, a middle blouse, black shoes, black stockings, and a pink ribbon about her forehead.

Wants Her Son's Body Disinterred.

Through her attorney, Lawrence H. Axman of 111 Broadway, Mrs. Henry Emmet Pollard of 113 West Eighty-seventh Street filed an application with Supreme Court Justice Brady in Bronx County yesterday to disinter the body of her son, William John Pollard, 3 years old, who died on Aug. 2 and was buried in Woodlawn the following day. Mrs. Pollard says that the undertaker misunderstood her directions and took the body to the cemetery, whereas she intended having the body shipped to Italy, where the boy's father is now. Justice Brady reserved decision.

GIRLS TRY TO SAVE DEEP SEA HOTEL

$1,500 A YEAR IS REQUIRED

Captain Frank D. Sheeley, skipper of the Jacob A. Stamler Deep Sea Hotel for Working Girls, which is moored at the foot of East Twenty-third Street, greeted the newspaper reporters with a sad smile yesterday when they dropped in to ask how things were going. The Captain was worried about the fate of his craft, which has been ordered dismantled on Aug. 28 by its owners, the heirs of the Arbuckle Deep Sea Hotel Company, but, assisted by the guests, he is making a fight to keep the old place afloat.

"Some hope, yes," said the Captain, "but nothing certain. We didn't invite publicity, but now that you are here we want all we can get if it will help keep the hotel open."

"Everybody who rode up to this pier in an automobile today was watched you can bet," continued the Captain. "We sat here hoping every time a horn honked that somebody was coming who would give us a lift. Once we were rewarded. A woman, dressed in silk and apparently very rich, got out of a big limousine and climbed the gangplank. She wouldn't register, but she looked all over the boat and talked with the girls. Just before she left she said: 'Good luck to you. You will hear from me again.'

$1,500 a Year Required.

"It seems a shame to take a home away from the girls, and we think there never was a more worth-while investment than this. It doesn't seem possible that it is all going to end soon, when you think that $1,500, and perhaps $1,000, a year would make up the deficit and keep us going. Somebody must be willing to pay that amount to help these girls."

After an inspection of the ship and talks with a number of the fifty girls who live there the reporters came to the conclusion that there never was a happier community—at least it was happy until the closing notice was posted.

An incident occurred while a TIMES reporter was aboard the hotel which showed the Captain at his best, although he did not know that he was watched. A tired girl, dragging a dress suit case of cheap make, climbed wearily aboard the ship. She had never been there before, but she had read about the floating hotel in the newspapers yesterday morning.

"Again," said the Captain, greeting her cordially.

The girl started back, frightened. Supper was being cooked. She looked at the Captain.

"I've only got thirty-five cents," she said, "and not a thing else."

"That's all right, girlie, dive in," he retorted.

"Me for it," she replied, and, dragging the suit case after her, disappeared into the dining room. She had a comfortable bed last night.

On the port deck Anna Mulligan, little more than a girl, was weeping, and there was nothing false about her grief. She had been a guest at the hotel for many months, earning just enough to pay her $2.80 board, weekly, and keep clothing on her back.

"I wonder where they think I'll go," she sobbed. "people don't know what we go through and what it means to have a home like this and somebody you look to like you would to a father." She pointed to Captain Sheeley.

"Yes, him I mean," she said.

Working Girl Writes Plea.

The reporter was talking to Captain Sheeley in the cabin when a young girl came in. Her name was Pauline Weisinger.

"I know who you are, and I want you to tell me if I can do anything," she said. "I'll go out and make speeches from a barrel if that will do any good. Won't they let us keep our home? I've only been here a little while, but it's the best home I've ever had."

The reporter asked her to sit down and write just what she felt. Here is a copy of what she wrote:

I have gone through quite a good deal although I am not very old yet, but enough experience that would make me look forty. I have been struggling for a living just as all the girls of the boat have, and I am quite used to it by now. But four weeks ago I got a pretty good position and heard of the Arbuckle boat. I waited till I made a week's salary and I came right to it. I'd been here two weeks when I came home and read the notice.

I had all I could do to keep up—well, actually from dying. That night there were just those that hadn't read about it at the supper table, and they were but two. We all kept this to ourselves, for we were too miserable to tell.

It is three days since we heard about this, and I can't very well afford to stay away from work, but I had no ambition for anything, so I had to stay home this afternoon. Please, we all beg of you and plead with you, help us in keeping our home, for this is the only one we have.

"I suppose you will all laugh at it," she said as she gave the paper to the reporter. "I can't write very well."

Yesterday the girls through Miss Mary Smith, who is a stenographer, sent a letter Miss Anne Morgan, asking her to aid them in keeping their home. The letter explained the conditions at the hotel, and told what a sore blow it would be to the girls if it was closed. A somewhat similar letter was sent to Mrs. Arnold S. Chase, Jr., of the Hotel Vanderbilt, who is now in Rhode Island. Mrs. Chase has visited the ship and shown a deep interest in what was going on.

Captain Sheeley said last night that the ship was not in a dangerous condition and was good for many years' service as a hotel.

"It seems a shame to me to dismantle her," he said, "as the old boat isn't good for anything else. But it is solid enough and won't sink. She was built when they built boats and her timbers are solid and heavy."

NO CALLS FOR LOST BOY.

Brooklyn Children's Society Seeks Parents of Its Charge.

The Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in Schermerhorn Street, is anxious to find the parents of a boy four or five years old who was found wandering in Rockaway Beach last Monday night by Policeman Coulter. The patrolman took the child to the police station, where he was sheltered for the night; the police thinking the father or mother of the boy would call. The next day the boy was taken to the Children's Society.

The boy told the officials of the society that his name was Louis Nesterman, that his father's name was Max, that he lives near the East River in Manhattan in the one hundreds and that his father worked on postal cards. He said his father took him to Rockaway Monday and that he was spending his pennies when he became lost.

Woman Accused of Burglary.

Charged with picking the lock on a neighbor's front door with a screw driver, Mrs. Christina Stark, 30 years old, of Juniper Avenue, Maspeth, was held yesterday under $1,500 bail in the Flushing Court on a charge of burglary. The complaint was made by Mrs. Anna Burkhard, who accused Mrs. Stark of stealing a gold watch, a diamond ring, a gold bracelet, and a stickpin, all valued at $500.

Ferryboat for Picnickers.

To carry employes and friends of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad on their annual outing next Sunday to Witzel's Grove, College Point, L. I., the Hempstead, a ferryboat, has been hired by the company.

RIDDER IN THREE SUITS.

$164,563 Sought from Staats-Zeitung Editor in Supreme Court.

The first was a suit against him by the Hudson Trust Company to recover $6,662 as the balance due on a note signed by him on July 17, 1914, for $25,000, and payable four months from date.

The second was a default judgment for $113,321 against him in favor of Eugene H. Paul as assignee of Jacob H. Schiff. The papers in the suit recite that the editor agreed with Mr. Schiff to have the banker purchase certain securities for him and that Mr. Ridder was to buy them from the banker at the purchase price, plus six per cent. on notice of thirty days. In accordance with this agreement, it is stated, Mr. Schiff purchased securities totalling $242,531 and Mr. Ridder failed to buy them from the banker within the specified thirty days. Mr. Schiff then assigned the claim against Ridder to Mr. Paul, who caused the securities to be sold, the net proceeds of which sale amounted to $129,701. The amount of the judgment represents, with interest, the difference.

The third action was a default judgment against the editor for $44,580 in favor of the Greenwich Bank, on a note signed Nov. 5, 1914, payable one month from the date.

BOARD TO AID WIDOWS.

Mrs. Harriman and Three Other Women Among Nine Members.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday announced the appointment of eight members of the Local Board of Child Welfare as provided for by the last Legislature. The committee is to aid dependent widows to keep their children at home under the new "widows' pension" law. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman heads the list, being appointed for the eight-year term. Mrs. Rogers H. Bacon of 967 Madison Avenue was appointed for seven years. Mrs. Harriman is now a member of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations.

For the four-year term Mrs. William Einstein of 121 East Fifty-seventh Street was named. Miss Sophie Irene Loeb of Fifty-sixth Street and Broadway was selected for the two-year term. Others appointed were Edwin P. Maynard of 151 East Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn, six years; the Rev. William A. Courtney, Supervisor of Catholic Charities, five years; Michael Furst of 115 Prospect Parkway, Brooklyn, three years, and William H. Matthews, Director for the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, one year. The Commissioner of Charities is the ninth member of the board.

No appropriation has yet been made by the Board of Estimate for the board. A staff of clerks and investigators will be appointed. It is estimated that the board will have the handling of more than $500,000 a year.

RUTTER ESTATE IN COURT.

Surrogate Cohalan signed an order yesterday directing Thomas B. Kent and Samuel Riker, Jr., to appear in court on Sept. 21 and be examined as to what they know as trustees concerning the residuary estate of $467,000 of Thomas Rutter.

The application was sued out in behalf of Mrs. Beatrice R. Moore, a granddaughter, who was to come into one-fourth of the residue under the terms of the will. Mrs. Moore has filed objections to the accounting of the trustees and wants to know more about certain shares of stock in the American Brass Company, real estate in Cook County, Ill., and why the trustees have not rented the home at 4 Fifth Avenue since the death of the widow, Mrs. Georgiana Rutter, on July 23, 1914.

Mrs. Moore was to share the residue with J. Edgar Rutter, Mrs. Cora Hannah Rutter Kent, and Mrs. Maud Rutter Garr, children of the decedent.

BOY KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

Policeman Puts Crucifix In Dying Lad's Hands.

The explosion of a tank of carbonic acid gas yesterday caused the death of Christian Bence, 15 years old, of 416 First Avenue, who was assisting his father George Bence, an employe in the factory of George Lighte & Son, 511 East Seventeenth Street, dealers in mineral waters. The boy was thrown several feet by the force of the explosion, suffering internal injuries.

Patrolman Rothamel of the East Twenty-second Street station, who was summoned, took a crucifix from his pocket and placed it in the boy's hands. Father Suter of the Church of St. Mary Magdalen in East Seventeenth Street reached the place a few minutes later and administered th last rites of the Church.

George Bence, the father, suffered lacerations of the body and was bruised about the abdomen. Later in the day Bence and Charles Lighte of 465 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, proprietor of the establishment, were examined by Assistant District Attorney Duel. It was learned that the building in which the accident occurred was condemned a few weeks ago by the Board of Health and an order issued prohibiting its use for any purpose except the stabling of horses.

partisan commission that will take the tariff out of politics and stop making it on a log-rolling basis and make it on a scientific basis. The Progressive Party declared for this in its 1912 platform, it reiterated it specifically and vigorously in the national conference at Chicago last December, and proposes to keep driving this issue home to the people until they are thoroughly awakened to the situation.

"We are as a party as firmly committed as ever to our policy of social justice, but we cannot have social justice of any kind with the factories closed down. The great problems of today are, therefore, economic problems. The Progressive Party is the only party that is sound on these problems and therefore, of course, will continue to fight for it."

Mr. Perkins also asserted that the Progressive Party was the only one that stood for a national policy of preparedness for war.

A dozen other persons also spoke. Their remarks, especially those touching on Colonel Roosevelt and the future of the Progressive Party, were greeted with applause. Mr. Perkins's speech was the only one that was made public. While he and others were speaking the doors were closed.

Call Albany Conference.

The conferees decided to hold a party round-up here early in September, and also discussed candidates for the Supreme Court and Congress in districts where vacancies are to be filled this Fall. At first it was decided not to enter a candidate in the Thirty-first Congressional District, but later this plan was reconsidered and final action was deferred.

Whether a candidate will be put in the field in the Thirty-sixth District also was undecided.

The sense of the meeting was that Justice Cochrane, who probably will be named by the Republicans for the Supreme Court in the Third Judicial District, should have the Progressive indorsement. No action was taken regarding a candidate in the Sixth Judicial District.

"In the Ninth Judicial District we shall join with the Democrats and other minority parties in opposing the handpicked candidates of William L. Ward," Mr. Deyo said.

After the meeting adjourned Mr. Perkins, who questioned about the national candidates for next year frankly admitted that he had no idea what the future would bring forth. He declined to say whether he believed Colonel Roosevelt again would be a candidate for President, or whether he would support Governor Hiram Johnson of California for the place.

Among those who attended the meeting were George W. Perkins, John J. O'Connell, and R. H. Elder, New York City; Hugh Abbott, Gouverneur; George S. Hobbie, Lockport; L. D. Hayes, Ithaca; Harrison Deyo, Yonkers; S. E. Everts, Granville; C. E. Eberle, Chatham; W. L. Hitchcock, Cambridge; John J. Ackerman, White Plains; J. E. Hasbrouck, Modena; Dr. H. L. Waldo, James Farrel, and J. J. Gribble, Troy; Alvah Fairlee, Schenectady; W. P. Murray and H. J. Clifford, Gloversville; J. A. Boswell, Amsterdam; L. J. Farmer, Pulaski; W. A. Cummings, W. B. Wickes, W. W. Jeffers, and F. B. Wood, Ticonderoga; S. F. Avery, Claverack; S. A. Fowler, Rensselaer, and O. C. Jones, Borden H. Mills, and D. Pollock, Albany.

ADVISE KINGS AUTONOMY.

Democratic Harmony Committee Report Is Against Tammany.

The Committee of Five appointed four months ago to consider ways and means of harmonizing the various factions of the Democracy in Kings County yesterday afternoon reported in favor of the local organization breaking away from the domination of Tammany Hall in national, State, and county politics. Although the name of Charles F. Murphy was not mentioned, the committee declared that the State leader of the party should not be a resident of any of the counties of New York City.

The Wilson Administration is indorsed in the report.

Colonel James D. Bell headed the Harmony Committee. It suggests that twenty-five Democrats representing the various elements in the party be selected to act as an advisory committee to name candidates and conduct the Fall campaign.

The Democratic County Committee of Kings County is called upon to declare for the "most absolute autonomy and home rule in regulating its party affairs, and to assert that it will not tolerate any interference therein from Tammany Hall or from any other source whatever, and that that position will for the future be maintained."

Name Healy for Congress.

Ellsworth Healy, who recently married a niece of Charles F. Murphy, was designated last night as the Democratic Congressional candidate for the Twenty-third Congressional District, which includes Washington Heights and part of the Bronx, at a meeting of the Congressional Committee in the rooms of the North End Democratic Club in Fordham Square. Mr. Healy will be a candidate for the place made vacant by the death of Joseph A. Goulden.

POLICE MAN RESORT TO ENTRAP SLAVERS

Put Matron in Charge of Place in Bushwick and Catch Six Prisoners.

EIGHT GIRLS ARE LIBERATED

Arrests End Organized Scheme of a Gang to Recruit Victims, Detectives Assert.

How Lieutenant Thomas McDonald of Deputy Police Commissioner Godley's staff equipped a pseudo resort and placed Mrs. Margaret Whithorst, a police matron, in charge of it was told yesterday when two men were arraigned in the Coney Island Police Court, one on a charge of white slavery and the other on an even more serious complaint. There was disclosed also the way in which Lieutenant McDonald and his men trapped six men whom they accuse of being white slavers, rescued eight girls, and put to a temporary end at least an organized plan by members of the east side underworld to make Coney Island a recruiting spot for their trade.

Lieutenant McDonald said all the gang had not been caught, but members of his squad still were guarding Coney Island, hopeful that the least attempt to resume the traffic would be followed by more arrests.

The discovery that such a gang was operating and that Coney Island was the scene of its efforts became known to the police early in July, when the father of Bessie Matthewson, 16 years old, a prosperous druggist of 517 Park Place, Brooklyn, reported that his daughter was missing after a visit to Coney Island. Presently the parents of Doris Armstrong, who is 18 years old, and was a member of the Central Congregational Church, reported that their daughter was absent from their home at 447 Park Place.

A search of Coney Island, though it failed to discover the girls, convinced Lieutenant McDonald that they were in the hands of white slavers, and he opened his resort in the Bushwick part of Brooklyn. Members of his squad became frequenters of all the resorts of Coney Island and presently were on intimate terms with most of the east side gangsters whom they found there.

The detectives let it be known that they were in the market for girls of attractive appearance and soon, according to Lieutenant McDonald, John Hunter of 30 St. Mark's Place, Manhattan, took Lena Silverstein of 31 Allen Street to McDonald's house. He demanded $75 but compromised, the police said, on a payment of $10 down, agreeing to accept the balance in installments. He was arrested as he left the house and Magistrate Nash in the Gates Avenue Court held him in $5,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. That was on July 14.

A few days later, the police said, Joseph Friedburg of 15 Rutgers Place and William Rosenblum of 310 Second Avenue, both of Manhattan, offered for Miss Rose, 22 years old of 210 East Nineteenth Street, and Lena Starr, the same age of 243 East Nineteenth Street. They also were arrested and likewise held for the Grand Jury.

It was not until last Saturday that the police got on the track of the little Matthewson girl or of Miss Armstrong. Then Bessie Matthewson was taken to the house, according to the police, by Samuel Rachelson of 89 Amboy Street. Rachelson was arrested and she was questioned by Mrs. Whithorst.

According to the matron, the girl confessed that she had fallen in with Rachelson, Albert Greene, and Frank Nozzo of 34 Madison Street on an early visit to Coney Island, and afterward had visited them in Greene's tent on the beach near Henderson's Walk. It was she who took Doris Armstrong to the tent and introduced her. She said Greene had taken Miss Armstrong to his apartments at 457 Neptune Avenue and afterward had turned her out.

Detectives hurried to the Island and found her in Surf Avenue. With her were three other girls, whom they arrested also as witnesses. They could not identify Greene nor Nozzo until Thursday night, when both were caught, and a charge of white slavery was made against Greene, while another charge was lodged against Nozzo.

The young men were arraigned before Magistrate Walsh yesterday, and Greene was held in $5,000 bail for examination on Aug. 13, while Nozzo was held without bail for the Grand Jury. The girls were sent to institutions to be held as witnesses.

Luban Held on Gambling Charge.

The sensational raid made upon an alleged gambling house on Sixth Avenue, near Twelfth Street, a week ago by Lieutenant Daniel Costigan and his squad, resulted yesterday in the holding of Jacob Luban, a Becker case witness, of 131 East 116th Street, for the Grand Jury in $2,000 bail by Magistrate McQuade in Jefferson Market Court. Luban, the police asserted, boasted that he had police protection, but denied this at the time of his arrest. Louis Diensteg of 101 West 115th Street and Barney Freedman of 205 Seventh Avenue, arrested at the same time, were discharged.

JOHN BURKE IS FREED.

Indictment Against Him and Wilcox in Panama Cases Dismissed.

The indictment jointly charging John Burke and Robert Wilcox with accepting and offering a bribe in connection with the purchase of supplies for the Commissary Department of the Isthmian Canal Commission has been dismissed by Judge Howe of the United States District Court on the recommendation of United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall.

Dean Emery of 52 Broadway, attorney for Wilcox, produced Wilcox's books and showed that while Burke gave him an unusually large order for kerosene it had been done in a rising market and at Wilcox's suggestion, so that the Government actually saved money by the transaction. A payment of $400 from Wilcox to Burke subsequent to the transaction was satisfactorily explained to the court. Wilcox at the time was a trader doing business at the Isthmus of Panama, and among other things was a representative of the West India Oil Company, dealers in kerosene. In his nolle prosequi, District Attorney Marshall said:

"The defendant, Wilcox, has opened his books and papers to me and has submitted himself and two of his employes to examination by me. He contends that he frequently sold drafts, and that Burke bought this draft for cash, and states that after a preliminary conversation with him, Burke went to his establishment at the Isthmus and paid $400 in gold for the draft, which gold was not deposited in Wilcox's bank account, but was turned into the cash drawer for the immediate use of the business. In this account of the transaction, he is corroborated by the two employes mentioned, and also apparently by his cash book."

Other indictments are pending against Burke in Indianapolis, but Judge Howe's action takes the name of Wilcox from the list of those indicted in the canal scandal.

CLEARING UP ERIE DEBRIS.

Big Fund Will Be Raised to Aid Sufferers—3 More Bodies Recovered.

ERIE, Aug. 6.—With every property owner and tenant in the flooded district and hundreds of volunteer workers and employes of the city clearing away the debris of Tuesday's disaster, the ruins are now being pulled apart and a real start has been made toward clearing this up. Erie is meeting the crisis, and about $20,000 has been raised by the citizens to meet the first expense.

Monday morning a committee of a hundred business men will begin a canvass of the city not touched by the flood to raise a huge fund, and from this money, those who have lost everything in the disaster will be given a new start in life. A small committee of the best business men will have charge of the distribution of this fund.

State police have taken charge of the guard work in the district and are being assisted by the naval militia and members of the local police department. There was little looting today, and few arrests were made compared with yesterday and the day previous.

Three bodies were recovered today, and all have been identified. They are: William Devitt, who was picked up in the bay by the life-saving crew. Mrs. Minnie Stozer, found under a pile of ruins one block from home, which was wiped

MAYOR CURBS AUTO BUSES.

Vetoes Ordinance to Grant Them Certain Street Privileges.

Mayor Mitchel returned to the Board of Aldermen yesterday without approval an ordinance amending the hack ordinance providing that sight-seeing cars might stand in front of a building in which the corporation owning the cars has an office, provided the corporation first obtained the consent of the Police Commissioner and the written consent of the owner of the building. In his memorandum accompanying the veto, the Mayor said the passage of the ordinance would permit the large sight-seeing cars to stand at all times in front of such an office where the two consents have been obtained.

The Mayor said that the present arrangement allowing such cars to stand for fifteen minutes in front of an office was, in his opinion, sufficient. To obtain the right to stand at all times in front of an office with the consent of the owner of the building, he said, is in effect the maintenance of a private stand, from which others may be excluded.

"There are other matters in the proposed ordinance," he wrote, "which appear to me would have a bad effect, namely, taking away from the Department of Licenses the consent to the establishment of such a sight-seeing stand and allowing the solicitation of passengers on the sidewalk."

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Conditions are still unsettled over the eastern half of the country, and there were more showers, mostly light, in the Lake Region, the Middle Atlantic States, Southern New England, and Florida. There were also local thunder showers in Western Nebraska, extreme Western Texas, and the Central Rocky Mountain Region.

Elsewhere in the West the weather was fair. It is warmer in the Great Central Valleys and cooler in the Middle Atlantic States and the Central Rocky Mountain Region.

Over interior districts west of the mountains high temperatures continue.

Showers are probable Saturday in Eastern New York and Southern New England and the south portions of the East Gulf States, and on Saturday and Sunday in the Florida Peninsula.

Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River the weather will be generally fair Saturday and Sunday.

It will be somewhat warmer Saturday in the Lake Region, but temperatures will not be unusually high over any districts east of the Mississippi.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be moderate northeast and east; South Atlantic Coast, moderate south and southwest except east off the Florida coast.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York and Southern New England—Partly cloudy Saturday and Sunday, with local showers Saturday.

New Jersey, Western New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Saturday; Sunday, partly cloudy.

Northern New England—Unsettled Saturday

FINANCIAL MARKETS

New High Prices Reached Despite Much Profit Taking—Organized Market Control.

Over rapid advances again yesterday invited sharp reactions, but notwithstanding large profit taking the majority of stocks made further net gains. There are a good many indications that the market is not altogether a spontaneous expression of optimism, and there is in other words an organized control of the market which seeks to co-ordinate its various phases and to insure if that may be a continuance of the upward movement which has been affording so many opportunities for large profits.

That is not to say, however, that an attempt is under way to move the market contrary to the import of existing financial conditions. That could hardly be done successfully for any length of time, and if powerful cliques are operating in the stock market at present, as the market's action seems clearly to indicate, they have been very greatly helped by underlying conditions and by the changes for the better which have been coming about in business. Too much of this has its origin in Europe's war necessities, but so far as its immediate effects are concerned they differ little, if at all, from those which would flow from peaceful trade. That cannot be said of the ultimate effects, but of those the stock market has no present thought.

There are those who fear the consequences upon a market which has been rising with so little restraint of some grave news which might well come forth from the uncertainties of such a war as this, but the indecision of these is swept aside by the impetuosity of the less cautious—and recent experience has been that the largest profits have been with the least cautious. Indeed it is always so. You cannot reconcile the points of view of the man who buys a New York City bond and of the one who buys Bethlehem Steel or some war stock whose profits seem less secure, but there is no question which will make the larger profit—if he happens to be right.

Perhaps as part of the organized control of the market strength has recently been imparted to the railroads on several occasions as a means of lessening the effect on market sentiment of profit taking movements in the industrials. It was so at times in yesterday's market although the indications were that the general buying movement, professional and public, was still vigorous enough to provide with little difficulty for the periodically recurrent process of converting some part of traders' paper profits into cash profits. But if the railroads have been thus made use of they have had supporting influences of their own, though these have been of a far less spectacular sort than those which have marked out the path of the more ebullient industrials. What the railroads have had to support them has been a slow but apparently steady broadening of the public interest in them owing to the belief that they are likely to enjoy a period of more favorable conditions by way of reaction from an excess of regulation.

The rise in the steel shares was put under check yesterday by profit taking induced in part by the feeling that the rise had become rather rapid for a group of stocks representing so large a capitalization, but the largest issue of all, United States Steel, offered so much resistance to this profit taking that it retained half of its further advance of more than a point. At yesterday's high price Steel common was more than 5 points above its price three days ago.

American Securities Firm, with United States Steel Prominent.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Money and discount rates were steady today.

The Stock Market was steady. The new war loan was active, but home rails remained dull. Brazilian bonds were weak, following the fall in Brazilian exchange, but Brazilian tractions advanced and Canadian Car was in demand. Mexican bonds declined 2½ points.

American securities were firm throughout, with United States Steel prominent.

COTTON IRREGULAR IN ACTIVE MARKET

Prices Open Ten Points Higher on Strong Liverpool Cables, but Sag in Afternoon.

MUCH BEARISH SENTIMENT

Futures Weaken Under Evening Up Over Week's End and Straggling Liquidation.

Cotton was active yesterday, largely in response to strong Liverpool cables, which caused an overnight opening advance of about 10 points. Prices during the first hour, however, were the highest of the day, and the market presented a somewhat heavy appearance along in the afternoon as a result of straggling liquidation and evening up over the end of the week. The weather throughout the Belt was more settled, and only a few light, scattered showers were reported through the Eastern Belt, with the exception of the Savannah district, where precipitation ran as high as an inch and a half. There was a sprinkling of good crop accounts, although complaints were received from Texas. The weekly weather forecast for the week ending next Tuesday night calls for generally fair weather over the entire Belt, with normal temperatures.

One of the unsettling influences in the middle of the session was a rumor to the effect that a note had been received at the State Department from Great Britain placing cotton on the contraband list. Advices from Washington, however, failed to throw any light upon this report. Whether the denial was one of fact, or merely a diplomatic evasion, it was impossible to determine.

The week-end statistics were without special effect. The New York Cotton Exchange places into sight for the week at 37,543 bales, against 3,769 last year. The figures on spinners' takings were not available up to the close of the market. The Liverpool stock of American cotton decreased 43,000 bales during the week, compared with a decrease of 5,000 bales last year. Since June 18, the high point in the English stock, there has been a decrease of 366,000 bales of American cotton in Liverpool, or at the rate of 52,000 bales per week. During the same period last season the loss amounted to 142,000 bales. The stock of American cotton at Liverpool is now 1,155,000 bales, against 612,000 for the same time last year.

Market sentiment generally is rather bearish, as it is believed that there is still a possibility that cotton will be declared contraband, and it is not believed that any compensation, in the way of buying cotton, will be made by Great Britain, except at a fixed price. While such offers of purchase operate to prevent a drastic decline, they would not bring into the market any competitive buying.

Neckwear Manufacturers Busy.

A satisfactory Fall business is being done by the neckwear manufacturers, and the holiday trade gives every promise of coming up to expectations. While stripes and plaid effects are moving in fairly brisk fashion, it is believed that embroidered effects will be the real feature for the Fall and Winter season. For the popular de Joinville scarf, ribbons are being used with considerable success. Panel effects in the narrow varieties of neckwear are also being sold. They are going largely to the local trade, as the color combinations are more than ordinarily attractive.

Advances on Dress Goods.

Advances are being asked in the prices of dress goods and are being paid by the cutters-up with little or no questioning. It is freely predicted that next week will be an exceedingly busy one. With the labor troubles that harassed the garment trade for a long time settled, the manufacturers will want to get in their goods just as quickly as possible. In his anxiety to get the fabric, he wanted into his factory, one manufacturer paid an advance of ten cents a yard, forgetting that he had a quantity of these goods on order at the old price. There is no hesitancy on the question of style, as the fabrics that were popular some time ago are still in strong demand.

Paying High for Dyestuffs.

The representatives of a certain mill organization were in the market lately for the purpose of replenishing their supplies of dyestuffs. They were able, after numerous visits to handlers of dyes, to buy seven barrels of the desired material, for which they paid $12,000. This represents a price of 54 a pound for dyes that were sold before the war at sixty cents a pound. Greens are especially scarce, being almost impossible to obtain. While the cost of dye in a yard of cloth could under normal conditions be neglected, prices for color stuffs have reached such a level that the dying of a yard of material is now an item that must be figured carefully into the production cost.

Summer Cloths Well Taken.

Despite the rather poor showing made by the clothing manufacturers who ventured into the Summer suit business this season, the sale of lightweight fabrics for next Summer is reported to be large. The tendency seems to be away from the low-priced cloths, and a better average price has been established. One house, which brought out a new fabric this year, states that the production of the mill making this material, which is estimated at about 1,800 pieces a month, is sold up for the next six months. Hope is expressed that the clothing trade will work out of the price-slashing competition that has been going on in the manufacturing of Summer suits, and gradually make this a well-paying branch of the clothing business.

Should Read Orders Carefully.

Manufacturers have often been warned to read their orders carefully, so that they may not be made the victims of a "joker" in the form of terms that they would not knowingly consent to. Sellers have constantly to be on their guard against buying methods, of which the following it a type: On the order blank of a certain retailer there is a footnote which states that the buyer must be paid 25 per cent. in liquidated damages if garments like the ones he buys are sold to any other store in his town. The 25 per cent. damages may apply to one garment, the whole order, or the account itself. This is wholly unfair, for the manufacturer runs the chance of having any one of his designs copied by another manufacturer and sold in that town, which renders the first manufacturer entirely helpless in the matter.

Gray Goods Still "Off."

Buying of gray goods was again very limited in this market yesterday. In the staple cloths, about the only business of consequence was done on 39-inch 80 squares, for spot delivery, at 5⅝ cents, and even these orders were none too large. Sateens are beginning to move again in the gray state after a long dormant period, but as this business is apparently the result of prices that are favorable to buyers, the spurt is not altogether welcome. Sheetings and drills were quiet, but fancies kept up the honor of the market. They continued to move well. Nominal prices on spot printcloths:

Importers to Meet Wednesday.

Theodore Bach of Snow's U. S. Sample Express Company, Secretary of the Tariff Biltmore Executive Committee of Importers, announced yesterday that a general meeting of merchants whose merchandise is held up in neutral ports by the British embargo will be held on Wednesday at 2 o'clock at the hotel. Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia telegraphed Mr. Bach yesterday that he would be glad to address the meeting. Senator Smith's championship of the Southern cotton growers and shippers in their efforts to export cotton to Germany led the committee to induce him to speak here. The committee, in anticipation of a large attendance, has engaged the main dining room of the Biltmore for the occasion. The meeting will probably call upon President Wilson to insist that Great Britain observe neutral rights on the high seas.

Holiday Combination Sets.

There is quite a good deal of interest being taken by retailers in combination sets of ties, socks, and handkerchiefs for the holiday trade. The general tendency seems to be to buy more expensive merchandise of this sort. A wide variety of sets are obtainable. Among them may be mentioned the usual tie, scarf and socks set, in harmonious colors; the same set with scarf-pin and cuff buttons to match, and sets in black and white for evening dress wear. The muffler can scarcely be mentioned as a holiday novelty, as it will be introduced early in the Fall. It will be worn chiefly to keep the collar clean, for it is now certain that velvet collars will be widely used on Fall overcoats. A combination set of mufflers that has proved a "big seller" with one neckwear manufacturer is put up in an attractive box and consists of a black and a white muffler for evening wear. Angora mufflers are also being featured.

Changes in Appraiser's Office.

The Treasury Department having given its consent to the rearrangement of the executive personnel of Appraiser Sague's office, the changes were put into effect yesterday. Deputy Appraiser George W. Wolf becomes Special Deputy Appraiser and succeeds Henry M. Clapp, who has been placed in charge of the seventh, or drug, division of the office. Mr. Wolf has worked through many of the grades in the Appraiser's office, with which he has been connected for twenty-two years. Christopher C. Keenan, Assistant Appraiser of the eighth division, is promoted to a deputyship, but will remain in charge of his present department. James Fay, formerly in the second division, is sent to the fifth, succeeding Special Deputy Wolf as Assistant Appraiser. Nathaniel G. Schlam, recently appointed Assistant Appraiser by President Wilson, goes to the second division.

May Extend Tobacco Tax.

Quite a little uneasiness exists in the local tobacco trade as the result of a report that has recently come from Washington to the effect that there is a possibility of the war tax on tobacco products being extended past Dec. 31, at which time it was scheduled to expire more or less automatically if unforeseen events did not occur. Still more uneasiness exists at the prospect of an increase in this tax, in order to help the Treasury Department meet the deficit it is reported to be piling up from day to day. Some feeling exists here regarding the reported position of the tobacco growers in the matter, they being said to have taken the position that, as they have not been getting the prices they think they should get for their crops, the burden of a continued or increased tax should properly fall on the shoulders of the manufacturers of tobacco products or upon those men who sell them at retail. As this position would be a sort of "Peter-Paul" proposition, there are some members of the local trade who do not think that the growers have so far forgotten themselves as to assume it.

WE SAID "WAIT," but the 400 Lots and 7 Houses at Edgemere Long Island Had to be sold.

The property is right near the L. I. R. R. station, right near the ocean and within walking distance of Far Rockaway. Of course the prices were ridiculously low. Some of the best was bought "for a turn" and can still be had for much less than actual value.

We have opened an office right on the property, Cor. Lincoln & Dickerson Aves. If you have a few dollars saved for a rare investment or home-site, here is a war-time opportunity which you can't afford to miss. Take a day off this week-end. Come and study this proposition—consider and compare. You can reach only one conclusion.

Office open all day Saturday and Sunday Evenings by Appointment. Phone 3070 Far Rock.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Deal Pending for the Sale of the Beard Building on Liberty Street —Seventeen-Story Apartment House to be Erected on Park Avenue Block Front—Builders Buy in Bronx and Brooklyn.

Several large deals were reported pending yesterday, the most important of which involved the Beard Building, a twelve-story office structure at 120 and 122 Liberty Street, just east of Greenwich Street and extending through to Cedar Street.

This structure, which was one of the pioneers in the office building development of the lower west side, is owned by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who bid it in for $425,000 in a foreclosure suit last March against the Hydrex Felt and Engineering Company to recover a claim of $442,192. There were also unpaid taxes and assessments which brought the amount of the incumbrance up to $464,425.

The building has a frontage of 45 feet on both Liberty and Cedar Streets.

Seventeen-Story Apartment to Occupy Park Avenue Block Front.

Plans for a seventeen-story apartment house to occupy the entire block on the west side of Park Avenue between Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth Streets were filed yesterday by Warren & Wetmore, architects.

It will have a frontage of 200.9 feet on the avenue by 66.7 on each street, the facade being of brick, limestone, and terra in the French renaissance style of architecture. The servants' quarters will be located on the first floor, as well as three doctors' offices, and there will be accommodations for thirty-two families, two on each floor.

The Four Twenty Park Avenue Company, Incorporated, S. Fullerton Weaver, President, is the owner. The cost has been placed at $800,000.

East Thirty-seventh Street Dwelling Sold.

Alice Kauser has purchased from Helena W. and Susanna H. A. Faber the four-story dwelling, 14 by 98.9, at 146 East Thirty-seventh Street, which has been held at $28,000. Joseph P. Day negotiated the sale.

Another West Bronx Deal.

Another deal in the Grand Boulevard and Concourse in the West Bronx section that promises an immediate apartment house improvement was reported yesterday by J. P. Finneran and P. J. Ryan, who sold for the Livingston Estate of Philadelphia a vacant plot 100 by irregular on the southwest corner of 197th Street and the Concourse to John Carr.

There is considerable activity in this particular vicinity. On the block above John La Farge is building apartment houses on the plot fronting 130 feet on the Concourse and 89 feet on 198th Street, at the corner of those thoroughfares. Recently the Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind, which for many years has been located at Amsterdam Avenue and 138th Street, purchased a site for a group of buildings nearby.

That deal involved the entire block bounded by Kingsbridge Road, the Concourse, Creston Avenue and 193d Street, containing about twenty lots. Another purchase by an institution recently was that of a large plot on the northwest corner of the Concourse and 196th Street. That site was taken by the Home of the Holy Comforter, now on Riverside Drive.

The plot sold yesterday was held at $20,000.

Anna Brandt has sold to an investor the southeast corner of Courtlandt Avenue and 163d Street, a six-story new law flat, fronting 55.9 feet on the avenue and 90.5 feet on the street, with easterly and southerly lines of 50 feet and 115 feet respectively.

H. L. Phelps has sold for William Evans 2,340-2,336 University Avenue, two four-story apartments on a plot 86 by 102.

Francis T. Underhill of Santa Barbara, Cal., has sold to the Kingsboro Realty Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., the entire block front containing more than 27,000 square feet of space on the west side of Stewart Avenue, between Ingraham Street and Harrison Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The property has a frontage on the Long Island Railroad. Cross & Brown negotiated the sale.

Brooklyn.

Professor Fred H. Gilman, statistician of the Public Service Commission, has purchased from the Alco Building Company the private dwelling 2,127 Sixty-seventh Street, Brooklyn, for occupancy.

Investor Buys in Long Island City.

The Cross & Brown Company has sold the four-story brick apartment on the northwest corner of Twelfth and Vandeventer Avenues, Long Island City, for Daniel J. Lahey, to an investor. The structure occupies a plot 50 by 100.

Long Island.

Mary Smith has sold through the Clay Company three lots on Hunters Point Avenue, near Gate Street, to the La Cour Iron Works of Long Island City.

E. S. Willard & Co. have sold nine acres of land at Brookville, L. I., to William H. Vanderpoel, adjoining property which Mr. Vanderpoel bought last year through the same brokers.

Westchester County.

The Robert E. Farley Organization has sold for a client a house just being completed on Claremont Avenue, Greenacres, to Ida G. Smith of Springfield, Mass.

Mrs. Edyth A. B. Johnson of New York has purchased a nine-room stucco house on Manor Lane, Pelham Manor, N. Y., from the John T. Brook Company, builders. This is one of six houses now under construction by the above firm, held at about $10,000.

$500,000 Riverside Drive Apartment.

Plans were filed yesterday with the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings by Young & Wagner, Inc., for the construction of a six-story apartment house on the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and 160th Street, for the Hudson View Construction Company, Henry Friedman, President.

The structure will have a frontage of 212.6 feet on the drive by 144.9 feet on the street. The cost has been placed at $500,000.

Pinkney Estate Property on the Market.

Clarence H. Kelsey, President of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company, who has recently been appointed Administrator of the estate of Mary G. Pinkney, deceased, in place of the late Hon. Charles E. Littlefield, has appointed the J. Romaine Brown Company and Jacob Leitner as his agents for the sale and management of the large holdings of the estate.

The properties consist of thirty-one parcels, including the Pembroke Apartment house, Nos. 10 and 12 West Ninety-third Street.

Dwellings Leased.

Fish & Marvin have rented for the Residence Company of Lawrence Park, Wayside Cottage on Pondfield Road, Bronxville, to E. J. Drummond, member of the New York Stock Exchange.

Pease & Elliman have leased one of the two modern four-story and basement houses belonging to H. H. Pease on Park Avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, 446 Park Avenue to the Baroness Raoul de Graffenried, and for Henry Schwartz to Mrs. N. Elliott the four-story and basement dwelling 17 by 50 feet, at 42 West Eighty-third Street.

Westbury, L. I., Sale Today.

Within a few blocks of the Westbury, L. I., railroad station, Bryan L. Kennelly will sell at auction, today, thirty-two lots located on Old Country Road, Post Avenue, Taylor, Myrtle, Park, Bedford, Fifth, Lexington, and Madison Avenues and Grand and Fulton Streets. The sale will take place on the premises at 2 P. M.

Charles F. Noyes Company has leased the store and basement at 114 Fulton Street to Joseph Fiorenza; the store and basement of 76 Washington Street for B. Cresta & Son to George Khoury, and the store at 29 Beekman Street to Jacob Nelson.

Cross & Brown Company has completed the leasing of the Bayard Building, 524-526 Broadway by the rental of 36,000 square feet of space on three lofts for the Interstate Land Holding Company.

Charles S. Goldsmith has leased for a long term of years the four-story and basement brownstone private dwelling, 1,062 Madison Avenue, between Eightieth and Eighty-first Streets, for Dr. D. H. Davison to Adolph Meyer, florist, who will alter same into stores and apartments and occupy the store.

Real Estate Notes.

Barton Chapin and Slawson & Hobbs were associated with Pease & Elliman in securing the loan of $1,400,000 from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company on the property at Seventy-second Street and Fifth Avenue to be improved with a twelve-story apartment house.

William Mergardt has placed a first mortgage loan of $25,000 at 5 per cent. for five years on the southwest corner of Audubon Avenue and 183d Street for John D. Grotheer.

HEALTH TALKS IN STORES.

Dry Goods Association Co-operates with Dr. Goldwater's Department.

Following a conference with Commissioner of Health Goldwater yesterday, the Directors of the Retail Dry Goods Association voted to establish a Committee on Health and Sanitation to co-operate with the Department of Health in protecting the health of the 50,000 employes of the retail dry goods stores in the city.

It is planned by the large department store owners by suggestion and practical tests to attain the best working conditions for their army of employes. The Bureau of Public Health Education of the Health Department, under the direction of Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, will establish a course of lectures for the employes and in a publicity campaign will endeavor to teach them how to be healthy and sanitary.

OUR SCOUTS TO HUNT TRADE

Government Agents Seek Openings in World's Markets.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Government commercial scouts will prepare the way for the American invasion of world markets heretofore dominated by Europe, under plans perfected today by Dr. E. E. Pratt, Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. These agents will be sent to South America, Africa, Australia, and the Far East, covering practically the whole world except the European war area. Their reports are to be submitted to American manufacturers.

Juan Homs and Frank H. von Motz will make a world-wide investigation of the market for agricultural implements. Homs will start in South Africa and visit Australia, and probably the Far East. Von Motz will investigate the markets of the South American continent. The investigation will take nearly a year.

Agents also will be sent to study the furniture and wearing apparel markets in Latin America, supplementing work now in progress in the Far East. Agent Edwin M. Borchard has begun an investigation of the commercial laws of South America and will draft a working manual for every country of the southern continent.

Agent Walter Fischer, investigating the fruit markets in South America, now is visiting fruit districts of the United States to determine the possibilities of export trade. Agent R. M. Odell is in China studying the cotton goods market, with particular reference to Japanese competition, while F. H. Smith is preparing a world review of the lumber industry.

To supplement this work Agent Rose will visit all parts of the United States and confer with commercial organizations, manufacturers and merchants, to tell of the development work in progress. Later a traveling agent will follow him who will point out the possibilities of the South American markets.

In the last fiscal year the Commerce Bureau has investigated nearly 6,000 trade opportunities which resulted directly in exports of about $125,000,000.

Large Blanket Order Placed.

The Italian Government has placed a contract here for a large quantity of army blankets. The mills represented by S. H. & O. B. Newhouse will make, for delivery by October, 500,000 blankets. The price to be paid is somewhat under 50 cents a pound. The majority of the order will be made up of 8½-pound blankets, and the rest will be 3-pound goods. It is understood that the American Woolen Company has also received a large blanket order from the same Government, for which goods the specifications are the same as those told of above.

DRY GOODS TRADE ACTIVE.

Large Attendance of Buyers in the Chicago Market.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"The month of August has started with a substantial gain in shipments as compared with those of a year ago.

"The market week and style show brought a large attendance of buyers from all sections of the country, and especially from the Southern States.

"Weather conditions have been decidedly unfavorable to retail selling.

"Collections are good."

UNITED TO RESIST MACHINISTS' UNION

Members of the Metal Trades Association Have Decided to Make War Together.

GARVIN PLANT IS PICKETED

Strikers' Demands Flatly Refused by Company—Bliss and Williams Works Running as Usual.

The campaign led by the International Association of Machinists for an eight-hour day for the metal trades was met yesterday by the flat refusal of the Garvin Machine Company to grant the demands of the machinists, who had been out since Monday, and the union sent pickets to watch the plant. The Garvin plant, employing 700 men, was closed down after the machinists went out, and the officials of the company say it will stay closed until the men get ready to come back on the company's terms. The strikers declare they will not go back until they get the eight-hour day and wage increases.

A delegation of machinists was sent from the union headquarters, 116 Nassau Street, yesterday to confer with officials of the Garvin Company. Members of the delegation said when they returned that George K. Garvin, the President, intimated he would see every brick in the plant lying about in piles of rubbish before he would give in to the demands of the union. H. C. Hunter, counsel for the Metal Trades Association, of which the Garvin Company is a member, said last night that all the members of the association had determined to stand together to resist the demands of the men; hence the stand taken by the Garvin Company.

J. J. Keppler, Vice President of the Machinists' Union, and Business Agents E. J. Deering, William Bramley, and Michael J. Carney yesterday morning addressed a meeting of the striking machinists at 179 Varick Street, after which a Strike Committee of seven was named and fifteen pickets were selected to patrol in front of the Garvin plant.

Officials of the machinists declared yesterday that there would be a strike in a few days at the E. W. Bliss Company plant in Brooklyn if the demands of the men for increased pay were not granted.

"There is likely to be a big strike at any moment," said Carney. "The first to go out will be the 4,000 employes of the Bliss plant."

Howard C. Seaman, Secretary-Treasurer of the Bliss Company, said last night that everything was running along smoothly at the plant and that no demands had been made on the company by its men.

The Nathan Manufacturing Company, employing 500 machinists in the plant at 106th Street, near East River, agreed, according to Secretary James B. Wilson of District 15 of the International Association of Machinists, to a reduction in the working hours from fifty-four to forty-nine and a half a week, but stipulated that there be a corresponding wage reduction. With this proposal the machinists expressed themselves as dissatisfied.

Secretary Wilson was hopeful of victory for 1,500 machinists at Plainfield, N. J. He said nine machinery and arms and munition firms there had practically granted the demands for the eight-hour day and higher wages.

Secretary Wilson said the machinists were hopeful of reaching an agreement with A. Schrader Sons, Inc., at Atlantic and Vanderbilt Avenues, Brooklyn. Secretary Wilson said: "The original proposal of the company was that the eight-hour day should be inaugurated on May 1 of next year."

Officials of J. H. Williams & Co. of Brooklyn, makers of drop forgings, yesterday denied the report that they were working on war munition sub-contracts from the Bliss Company.

"We wish to state emphatically that we hold no contract or sub-contract for the production of war munitions from any party whatsoever," said a statement issued by the company.

Keppler on Thursday addressed a meeting of the 500 machinists employed by the Williams firm, at which the men agreed to do whatever their leaders ordered to get an eight-hour day. No strike has yet been ordered at the Williams plant.

It was denied yesterday that Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield was the chief owner of the Williams plant. Some years ago Mr. Redfield was President of the company, but it is said he severed all connections with the firm several years ago.

Thomas Burns of 148 Gold Street, Brooklyn, a timekeeper in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was stabbed in the stomach yesterday morning as he was about to board a surface car at the Manhattan end of Brooklyn Bridge. He was taken to the Volunteer Hospital.

According to James Burns, a cousin of the injured man, he and Thomas had been visiting friends uptown and had stopped in a saloon on their way home. In the saloon were several men formerly employed at the navy yard but now on strike, he said. They recognized the timekeeper, and an argument ensued. When Thomas and James Burns left the saloon they were followed to the bridge, where one of the strikers is said to have stabbed Thomas, dropped the knife on the pavement, and fled.

AUSTRIANS URGING STRIKES.

Letters Sent to Kinsfolk Here, Says English Correspdent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 7.—The Morning Post publishes a message from Budapest, dated July 30, in which the correspondent, after discussing the denials of his previous statement that Austro-Hungarians in America were hindering the manufacture of munitions,

"All the news of strikes, reaching here from America, is greeted by the press and officials of Austro-Hungary with immense satisfaction. Thousands of letters being sent to kinsfolk across the Atlantic, with urgent requests to do all in their power to stop the manufacture of munitions.

"In connection with the American munitions question the people here are made to believe that the war would have been over long since if America had not supplied the Allies with shells and other war material, and it is a wonder if every private or official letter, going to America, does not contain a request of the nature mentioned.

"The inexperienced people are perfectly convinced, owing to the continual repeating of the suggestion, that it lies only with America to end the war."

SEEKS TO AVERT A STRIKE.

Locomobile Company Offers to Give Workers Shorter Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Aug. 6.—The Locomobile Company of America posted a notice on the shop bulletin boards at noon today, stating that if the employes were not satisfied with the profit-sharing system introduced this week and prefer an eight-hour day, as asserted and reiterated by labor leaders outside the establishment, the present plan will be abandoned and the schedule of reduced hours substituted.

The profit-sharing plan went into effect last Monday, and the first pro rata division of earnings will be made next Saturday.

The notice issued today says:

"Some of the labor leaders in Bridgeport have been agitating an eight-hour day and have been trying to influence our employes by stating that the profit sharing plan is not going to work in their benefit, even threatening to tie up our plant with a strike.

"This company has only had one strike since it has been operating. This was over thirteen years ago. We are not in the habit of quarreling with our workmen and do not intend to. If we find, after the profit-sharing plan has been in operation, that the men prefer a work day of shorter hours, we will make our arrangements to operate the plant on a basis of eight hours a day."

None of the labor leaders would comment on the notice, but the general sentiment in the factory is that the profit-sharing plan is preferable. Whether the labor agitators will continue their campaign further against the Locomobile Company they refuse to say.

George J. Brown, business agent of the local machinists' union; Frederick Cedarholm, former socialistic alderman, and Louis Nelson, who were arrested on the order of Mayor Wilson yesterday when they attempted to address the workmen of the Locomobile factory, were tried in the City Court today on the charge of breach of the peace. Judge F. L. Wilder will give his decision Tuesday.

MAYOR THANKS DR. ADLER.

Sees Great Good in Bringing About Peace in the Garment Trades.

Mayor Mitchel sent a letter to Dr. Felix Adler expressing gratfication at the peaceful settlement of the garment makers' difficulty, and congratulating him on his success. The Mayor wrote in part:

"What you have done is very much more significant than the settlement of a single controversy. You have laid the foundation for a permanent peace, and provided the machinery for the adjustment of future difficulties as they arise. This, with the promise of your service in developing conditions of better industrial relationships in the cloak and suit industry, which your council has undertaken to render as a standing commission, is the conspicuous reward of your difficult task of the past week.

"It is a fine thing that the city should have been able to command the able services of your council on this occasion. I congratulate you on the outcome of your labors, and beg that you will accept, and extend to your colleagues, my hearty thanks in behalf of the city."

TO AID LABOR CAUSE.

Government, States, and Cities Represented on New Advisory Board.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—An advisory board of twelve, representing the Federal, State and Municipal Governments of the country, to bring about closer co-operation between the three branches in dealing with problems of employment and unemployment, was named today at the closing session of the United States Department of Labor Conference on Employment.

W. B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, Chairman of the Conference, in his concluding remarks said the meeting had accomplished considerable good and that he felt the co-operation toward which it aimed would do much to alleviate, if it could not entirely eradicate the evils from which the laborer suffered. The need of public labor exchanges, he said, might never have been realized but for the abuses of the private exchanges, among which he named the furnishing of strikebreakers and wagebreakers.

As a possible solution of "the landless man and manless land problems" Secretary Wilson suggested creating a "stamp fund" from the $10,000,000 which the Federal Government gets annually from the immigration head tax. This, he said, was never intended as a source of income to the Government, but as a protection to the immigrant himself, and he thought it might well be used to get him established on the land. The money could be paid back and used in helping other immigrants, he suggested.

C. L. Green, General Inspector in charge employment and distribution, Department of Labor; Ethelbert Stewart, Chief Statistician, Department of Labor; Dr. P. L. Prentice, Inspector of Immigration, Chicago; H. M. White, Commissioner of Immigration, Seattle.

The Program Committee chose as representatives from the State Labor departments: Justine R. Donechaud, Louisiana; Luke E. McCoy, Illinois; Edward W. Olson, Washington; C. T. Barnes, New York.

Representatives of municipalities were: Miss Hilda Muhlhauser, Cleveland; Harry Dunderdale, Boston; H. J. Berkle, Milwaukee; Harry Loncho, Los Angeles.

OSBORNE IS WAITING FOR RILEY'S CHARGES

Albany Is Already Talking About a New Warden at Sing Sing Prison.

DEPUTY TO QUIT SEPT. 1

Assault Case Against McDonald, Prisons Department Agent, Goes Over Until Next Thursday.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Thomas Mott Osborne, wealthy reform Warden of Sing Sing, who works for the State without pay, declared tonight he was ready to fight at every step any movement to remove him. He said positively that he would under no circumstances resign.

"I am pursuing a policy of 'watchful waiting,'" he said. "I am waiting for the first charge to be filed against me by Superintendent Riley or any one else. Up to the present time there have been no charges made against me, so I cannot be asked to answer them, can I?"

While he did not say so directly, Warden Osborne intimated that he had had no official communication from Mr. Riley which signified the Superintendent's desire to be rid of him.

A story in an afternoon New York newspaper said that when Governor Whitman and Superintendent Riley met next week the Governor would refuse to order Osborne's removal or to indorse such removal, but would point out to Riley that he was Superintendent of Prisons and had the power of removal.

"It doesn't take a prophet to reveal that that is about what will happen," said the Warden.

The trial of the case of Warden Osborne against P. J. McDonald, confidential agent of Superintendent Riley, which arose out of an altercation the men had at the railroad station platform on the morning of the Becker execution, was called this morning and went over until Aug. 12. McDonald is charged with having struck the Warden when Osborne sought to recover records of the prison which McDonald took from Sing Sing. McDonald says he had authority to take the documents.

Jury Trial Next Week.

McDonald was on hand this morning when the case was called at 10:30 o'clock, but Warden Osborne did not put in his appearance until almost 11 o'clock, a few moments before the case was put over. When he walked into the courtroom the Warden carried a heavy suitcase. This gave rise to the report that he was going up-State for a conference with Superintendent Riley. He did not go.

Benjamin Fagan represented McDonald as counsel, while the Warden was represented by Joseph Green. Justice Valentine granted the request of the defendant for a speedy trial, and both counsel agreed the trial should be held at the earliest possible time. The twelve men for the jury were selected and the case set down for Thursday of next week at 3 o'clock. When Warden Osborne was about to leave the courtroom Mr. Fagan asked Mr. Green, Mr. Green, if he would consent to bring into court the original letter sent by Superintendent Riley through McDonald asking for the delivery of certain prison records to the messenger. The Warden said he would.

Assistant Warden Charles H. Johnson, Warden Osborne's right-hand man, leaves Sing Sing on Sept. 1 to head the Connecticut Reformatory at Cheshire. Warden Osborne ridiculed the report that Johnson was leaving because his expressions of sympathy for Becker had provoked the resentment of the State administration. Johnson is the man who conducted the Becker execution, in the absence of Warden Osborne, and he is the man who actually carried out the orders of Mr. Osborne by which the slayer of Herman Rosenthal was allowed liberties which may form the basis of charges against Mr. Osborne. It was announced two weeks ago that Mr. Johnson would go to the Connecticut institution.

Johnson Going to Cheshire.

In reply to various reports connected with Mr. Johnson's leaving, Warden Osborne tonight asked that this statement be published:

Mr. Johnson, who has been Assistant Warden of Sing Sing Prison since Sept. 1, 1914, expressed to me several weeks ago his intention of accepting a call to the Connecticut Reformatory at Cheshire. The boys at Cheshire last Winter established a branch of the Mutual Welfare League, and Mr. Johnson leaves to engage in the task of applying and reformatory boys the same principles which the men at Auburn and Sing Sing Prisons have been working out during the past year and a half.

THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE,
Warden of Sing Sing Prison.

Mr. Osborne said that Johnson's new position was open on Oct. 1, but that he believed his assistant needed a rest and he had advised him to quit Ossining on Sept. 1, for a month's vacation.

When Mr. Johnson consented to accept the assistant wardenship, Warden Osborne turned over to him the Warden's salary of $3,500 in addition to the assistant's salary. Therefore Warden Osborne has never retained a cent from the State for his services at Sing Sing.

EXPECT CHANGE AT SING SING.

Attorney General Sees a Violation of Law by Osborne.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—Official confirmation was given to a report of an impending movement for the removal of Warden Osborne of Sing Sing, when it was learned tonight that Attorney General Woodbury had been asked for an opinion as to whether the admission to the death house on the order of Warden Osborne of convicts who had opportunity to communicate with condemned men, involved a violation of the prison law. It is understood that the Attorney General has answered the question in the affirmative.

The law, which it is declared was violated when Convict Joseph Murphy, as he declared in an affidavit in behalf of Becker, visited the condemned man in the death house, is contained in Chapter 489 of the laws of 1888. It reads as follows:

From the time of said delivery, (the delivery of a condemned prisoner) to the said Warden, until the infliction of the punishment of death upon him, unless he shall be lawfully discharged from such imprisonment, the defendant shall be kept in solitary confinement at said State prison, and no person shall be allowed access to him without an order of the Court, except the officers of the prison, his counsel, his physician, a priest or minister of religion, if he shall desire one, and the members of his family.

All that has developed in the Capital for the past few days indicates that preparations are being made for drastic action looking to a change of heads at Sing Sing. No State official here would be surprised if steps were taken for Mr. Osborne's removal unless he should anticipate such action by offering his resignation.

Story of Removal Persists.

Both Governor Whitman and Mr. Riley speak in the highest terms of Mr. Osborne's motives. It was pointed out tonight that Governor Whitman and Mr. Osborne are both on a program to discuss prison reform at Newport on Aug. 26. There seems to be little ground for the report that Mr. Osborne will be ousted next Monday or Tuesday. Neither the Governor nor Mr. Riley is in Albany tonight, but it is known that before he left for Newport three days ago, the Governor told a friend he had no intention of demanding the immediate removal of Warden Osborne. At the same time Superintendent Riley denied that he had any intention of removing Mr. Osborne.

Mr. Riley is quoted as saying that he would give Mr. Osborne's system a longer trial as the public seemed to want it. Since that time the Governor and Mr. Riley have had no conferences, although they plan to meet the first of next week. Nevertheless the story of the imminent passing of Warden Osborne will not down and gets confirmation from many sources.

The name of Major Richard S. Chatfield, Deputy Warden at Great Meadow, has been prominently mentioned as successor to Mr. Osborne at Sing Sing. One report has it that he will take charge temporarily until a permanent warden be selected. Other men mentioned for the job are Warden William Homer of Great Meadow and Warden Charles F. Rattigan of Auburn. Homer has made a good record at Great Meadow and stands well in the Prison Department. Rattigan not only has made a good record at Auburn, but he is also a personal and political friend of Mr. Osborne. It is argued that if Mr. Osborne were to be forced out he would rather see Rattigan succeed him than any other man.

There are many interesting sidelights on the situation, for it was the removal of Warden McCormick for giving undue liberties to convict David A. Sullivan that made possible the appointment of Mr. Osborne. Now Warden Osborne is accused of giving too many liberties. Warden Osborne has expressed the opinion that the Republican politicians of Westchester County are after his scalp. On the other hand, the Republican leader of Westchester, William L. Ward, is not at present asking favors of the State administration.

Too Many Liberties to Convicts.

It is reported here that Governor Whitman, who will go to Great Meadow next week, will take a long look at Sing Sing before he allows anything to be done in the way of the removal of the Warden. It is said that more than anything else the Governor wishes a full explanation of the conditions under which the convict Murphy visited Becker in the death house, and whether there was an opportunity for Becker to get any instruments of suicide.

There is no question that Superintendent Riley has been after evidence on which to make charges against Osborne. It was for this purpose that he sent McDonald to the prison with orders to bring back Osborne's orders permitting liberties to certain prisoners. It is said that the Superintendent thinks the smuggling of drugs into the prison has been made easy by the allowing of frequent visits of friends to convicts; that women other than relatives have been too often allowed to visit convicts; that there is danger of the smuggling of deadly weapons and explosives into the prison; that the privileges extended to members of the Mutual Welfare League have been too great, and that the Warden has overstepped the safety limits in affording amusements and recreation for the convicts.

ELIAS FOUND IN SAYVILLE.

Brewer's Son, Escaping from Health Farm, Wandered for 72 Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

SAYVILLE, L. I., Aug. 6.—Harry Elias, son of Mrs. Henry Elias, widow of the founder of the Henry Elias Brewing Company, was found here today. He had suffered a mental breakdown from overwork when a student at Columbia University, and had been a patient for three weeks at a health farm in Babylon, L. I., where he eluded the attendants and got away on Tuesday night.

Justice White and Constable Holmes of Sayville recognized Elias from a published description, and when the young man admitted his identity they placed him in an automobile and took him to the farm at 10 o'clock tonight. The constable got $100 reward, which had been offered for the finding of Elias.

Mrs. Elias, who closed her home at Seventy-eighth Street and Park Avenue, Manhattan, and accompanied her son to Babylon, where she is living at the Watson House, went to the farm and met him on his return. She denied that an attempt had been made to kidnap him three years ago, or that she had feared his disappearance was due to anything of that kind.

Elias was famished when found near the Wireless Station at Sayville. He said he had had nothing to eat but apples, which he had found in an orchard in his wanderings on the road of eighteen miles to Sayville. He had been without shelter for seventy-two hours, and was covered with mud from the heavy storm of Tuesday night, and the frequent rains since, but he had suffered no physical injury. He told his mother he enjoyed the storm and wanted to get away to the woods and fields.

LIBERALS SWEEP MANITOBA.

Party Forced Out by Graft Revelations Is Badly Beaten.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—Following revelations of graft in connection with new Parliament buildings at Winnipeg, and the consequent resignation of the Conservative Government of Manitoba, which had been in power fifteen years, general elections throughout that province occurred today.

Returns received so far show that the Liberals under T. C. Norris, who formed a Government when that headed by Sir Rodmond Roblin resigned, have swept the province. Sir James Aikins, who was selected as the new leader of the Conservative Party, was badly beaten.

A REMINDER OF HOLT.

His Picture in a Package of Dynamite Found in Fort Worth.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 6.—A package of dynamite wrapped in heavy paper and containing a newspaper photograph of Frank Holt, assailant of J. P. Morgan is puzzling officials here. The package was found late today beneath a viaduct on the main thoroughfare between North and South Fort Worth.

The explosive was labeled as the product of an East Alton, Ill., factory.

BRINGS IN A ZOO FROM FAR BRAZIL

Ferdinand Bartels Has Beasts, Snakes, and Birds Never Classified Before.

BUT T. R. MAY KNOW 'EM

Albino Monkeys and a Chameleon Bird—Too Bad, Though, About the Wapwat—It Escaped.

Ferdinand Bartels, who penetrates the jungles of South America to lure strange birds, animals, and reptiles from their native haunts for his brother Henry's menagerie at 72 Cortlandt Street, returned yesterday from the Amazon on the Lamport & Holt steamer Virgil with the best collection that has been brought to New York for several years.

It included scarlet tanagers, the whistling wonder of the Amazon, big black and scarlet toucans, all beak and feathers with small brains—that can be trained to do anything from typewriting to smoking cigarettes, Mr. Bartels said—an ocelot from Waroomoo—a species of jungle wild cat which is said to have become ferocious when informed of its name by an aged Indian—and a honey bear. There was also a case of boa constrictors, 15 anacondas, a puma, 150 black and white pocket monkeys, 125 marmosets including several albinos, never brought to this country before, Brazilian nightingales, cranes, paroquets, Amazon parrots in hundreds and a number of birds which are speckled under normal conditions and become white when agitated. The ornithologist of the Bronx Zoo could not classify these yesterday and Henry Bartels hopes that Colonel Theordore Roosevelt will be able to say to what species of the Amazonian variety they belong.

Ferdinand Bartels said that he went to Jerozere on the Amazon and engaged mules and Indian guides for his trip into "back o' beyond," which is the only place now where curiosities in the animal, reptile, or bird line can be obtained. On account of the war there has not been such a demand for boa constrictors and jaguars. The Indians were disposed to be unfriendly in some of the districts he visited and had an unpleasant habit of blowing darts from trees at passers-by whom they did not know, in order to discourage people from calling upon them. They were all friends of his, however, Mr. Bartels said.

Malamoo, an Indian chief, at the village of Kooroto, obtained a fine specimen of a flying wapawat, which is described as a cross between a wild cat and a porcupine. It feeds on cactus leaves on the banks of the Amazon, and is ready to fight at any moment without any tedious preliminaries or regard for weather. Just before he left Jerozero to return to the seacoast the wapawat escaped in the night after crippling two Indians, killing a chigweri, and twisting the tail off a tame jaguar belonging to the chief of the village. The jaguar's roars of pain aroused the forest for miles around, Mr. Bartels said. He regretted the loss of the wapawat because it was so rare and had never been brought alive to the United States.

The only incident of the voyage from Bahia to New York on the Virgil, Mr. Bartels said, was a fierce midnight fight between the ocelot and the puma, which managed to escape from their cages just before the steamer got to Barbados, eight days ago. The animals quarreled over a cage of green parrots and their howls woke up all hands. It was some time before they could be separated.

He explained that the puma was subdued by driving him into a corner of the bosun's cabin and placing a heavy chair over him. The animal got mixed up with the legs and gave in. The ocelot gave a lot of trouble and was chased all over the ship by Bartels and the crew, until it was stopped in its mad career by the cook, who threw a tureen filled with lukewarm thick pea soup over it. While the ocelot was trying to get the soup out of its eyes the baker threw a flour sack over its head, and the chase was over.

This is the second lot of pocket monkeys brought to New York by Mr. Bartels, who found that society women took to them as pets. The albino marmosets are curious creatures, very tame, and are curious creatures, and very tame. They turn pink under electric light, he says.

ENDS LIFE ON VACATION.

Martin Vredenburgh Jumps from Steamer's Deck and Drowns.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 6.—When the steamship Madison of the Old Dominion Line arrived here this morning, it was reported that a passenger, Martin Vredenburgh, of New York, had jumped into the sea last night and was drowned. He left this note in his stateroom:

Mr. Purser:
Dear Sir: Kindly have inserted on your return to New York the following announcement in THE NEW YORK TIMES, Sun, and World:
"Drowned at sea, Martin Vredenburgh of New York City, in his 73d year.

Vredenburgh was employed for more than ten years by the firm of Follmar, Clogg & Company, 114 Fifth Avenue, during which time he had never taken a vacation. A member of the firm observing that the old man was nervous and apparently worried, ordered him on Saturday to take a rest for two weeks. Mr. Vredenburgh appeared to be annoyed by this enforced vacation, for he went to the store on Monday and told the shipping clerk, D. J. McCaffrey, that he didn't want to go anywhere and was tired of life. On Thursday a fellow employe received a letter from Vredenburgh requesting him to go to the steamer on its return and claim his effects.

Until the death of Mr. Vredenburgh's wife, eighteen months ago, he had lived at 277 East Thirty-eighth Street, Flatbush, Brooklyn. He had since lived at 12 Garden Street, Flatbush. Frederick W. Foge, of Flatbush, received a note signed by Vredenburgh, asking him to go to his room on Monday and take charge of his personal belongings.

WINS FROM PINKNEY ESTATE

Mrs. Julia Watt Lawrence Gets Share of Non-Productive Property.

Mrs. Julia Watt Morris Curtiss Lawrence, who testified in 1907 that she did not consider $200 a day too much for her to spend, will receive a large sum of money outright from the estate of her aunt, Mary A. Pinkney, under a decision of the Court of Appeals received in this city yesterday.

Mrs. Lawrence, who received a life estate in one-third of the fortune of $8,000,000 left by Mrs. Pinkney, who died in 1908, brought suit to compel Charles E. Littlefield, administrator of the Pinkney estate, to pay her a share of the money received from the sale of the non-income-producing part of the estate. The administrator contended that the life interest which Mrs. Lawrence had in the estate entitled her only to receive interest from income-producing property. The Supreme Court upheld Mrs. Lawrence. The Appellate Court reversed the Supreme Court. The Court of Appeals now reverses the Appellate Court.

When the complaint was filed in 1914, it was estimated that, if Mrs. Lawrence won the suit, she would receive about $130,000 in cash and continue to receive an income, the latter of which Mrs. Lawrence is to receive is not mentioned by the Court of Appeals, but the Court of Appeals holds that the will made it imperative on the administrator to sell most of the real property of the estate, and that Mrs. Lawrence is now entitled to a sum equivalent to the total income which she would have received if the will had been complied with.

Sales of property aggregating $2,533,083 have been made, and of this $775,000 has been placed in a trust for the plaintiff's benefit since 1912. From the death of Mrs. Pinkney in 1908 until the creation of the trust in 1912, however Mrs. Lawrence received nothing from the property valued at $775,000. The Court of Appeals holds that this amount was improperly teated as exclusively capital, and that part of it should have been considered to be interest due to Mrs. Lawrence.

Dry Goods Man's Widow Receives Annuity of $4,500.

William F. King, who was a member of the dry goods house of Calhoun, Robbins & Co., and once President of the Merchants' Association, left a net estate of $189,462 when he died on Feb. 19, 1909, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Spencer.

Mrs. Martha K. King, the widow, receives an annuity of $4,500 for life unless she remarries. The record shows that in 1907, under the terms of a separation agreement, Mrs. King received $6,000 annually. This ceased at the death of the testator. The residuary estate goes equally to the two daughters, Mrs. Martha E. Blanc and Mrs. Hildegarde P. Bologne.

The assets included $5,000 in bank deposits; jewelry and other personalty appraised at $15,331, membership in the Consolidated Stock Exchange, $393, and the final liquidation interest of the testator in the dry goods firm, $250,390.

The debts totaled $84,088, the largest item of which was $71,578, allowed to the widow after litigation against the executors under the will.

DR. ALLEN CUT OFF WIFE.

She Consented, However, Having Inherited Ample Fortune.

Dr. Dudley P. Allen, ex-President of the American Surgical Society, left a net estate of $202,152 when he died at the Ritz-Carlton on Jan. 6, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Spencer. The entire estate is bequeathed to the Cleveland Trust of Cleveland.

Mr. Jaretsky of the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell said that the widow, Mrs. Elizabeth S. H. Allen, who resides at the Ritz, and Emily H. Severance, her sister, consented to the probate of the will. Mrs. Allen is the daughter of Louis H. Severance, who made a fortune in Standard Oil and bequeathed his daughter an ample fortune.

The asets include bank deposits, $75,176; jewelry, $6,480; life insurance, $5,050; stocks and bonds $205,214. The largest holdings include land, $47,775; 154 shares of stock of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio $56,450; 50 shares of Standard Oil of New Jersey, $19,950; 100 shares of stock in the Standard Oil Company of New York, $19,900.

REGISTERS TWO MORE SHIPS

Provisional Certificates to be Given to the Lapland and the Solveig.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Provisional American registry was granted today to two more of the fleet of foreign-built ships purchased for the American Transatlantic Company with money furnished by Hugo Stinnes of Essen, Germany. They are the Lapland, now at Barrow, England, and the Solveig, detained at Marseilles, France. Both are under the Norwegian flag, but provisional certificates will be issued by American Consuls.

Registry of three other ships for which application was made at the same time by the company has been held up pending technical formalities regarding the bills of sale showing transfer to American ownership. Investigation also is in progress as to the exact circumstances of the sale of the Haugarland, for which provisional registry already has been granted. A question as to the transfer has been raised.

HERE IS THE SAGA OF 'WIRELESS LOUIE'

Ex-King of Tipsters Tells of His Struggles to Arrest F. T. Martin's Secretary.

IT WAS A "FIERCE" FIGHT

Though Deputy Sheriff Is a Giant and Man He Jailed for Alimony Is Gentle as His Late Employer.

Deputy Sheriff Louis Zeltner, once known as "Wireless Louie," the most famous newspaper tipster of the east side, sat at his ease in his apartment at 293 Henry Street last night, when the telephone rang and Mrs. Leona Parsons asked him to hurry to her apartment at 345 West Fifty-eighth Street.

"I've made an appointment with my husband to call on me, and if you hurry you can catch him," she told Louie, so Louie pinned his gold star inside his coat and started north.

An hour or so later Louie was back in his flat and found awaiting him a throng of reporters eager to hear how, single-handed, he had arrested Ernest B. Parsons, once private secretary to the late Frederick Townsend Martin, for nonpayment of alimony and had lodged him in the Ludlow Street Jail.

He had carried a warrant for Parson's arrest for two weeks, but had been unable to get him until Mrs. Parsons decoyed him to her flat and there was Louie waiting. To the reporters Louie expressed the keenest desire that he should not be questioned. But finally he gave in and told his story.

"Do you know him?" asked Louie, and, when everyone admitted they'd never seen Mr. Parsons, he took a long breath and continued: "Well, he gave me an awful fight. First he said he wasn't Mr. Parsons with his own wife standing right there and pointing at him. What do you think of that?

"Then he kicked me in the stomach and knocked me down. Gee, he was a fighter, but I got up and chased him. He ran up Fifty-eighth Street till he got in front of Reisenweber's, but I caught him again, and we fell down. I held on to his leg and yelled for help, and pretty soon two policemen came up and arrested us. I showed 'em my badge and then they knew who I was and they helped me get my man to jail. My, but he was a tough one," and Louie shrugged the heavy shoulders which rise close to six feet from the ground. Louie is an imposing Deputy Sheriff.

Meanwhile Mr. Parsons, who is English though his wife is French, was philosophically making the best of it in jail. He is about five feet six inches in height, and might weigh as much as 125 pounds. He is mild-mannered and gentle, and says himself that his long experience with Mr. Martin in aiding the virtuous poor and writing books on student life in Paris has unfitted him for the ways of the world, and he is but little acquainted with the rough ways of Deputy Sheriffs.

It was only Thursday night that Mr. Parsons confided to a newspaper friend that he feared his arrest was imminent. He said his wife had a very emotional nature, and one could never tell what she might do to one next. At least he could not, he sighed. However, he supposed he would be safe at least from annoyance while he was in jail, and fancied it might not be so disagreeable when one became used to it, you know.

FOUR DIE BY DROWNING.

One Suicide and Three Accidental Deaths Reported in Brooklyn.

Three drownings and one suicide by drowning were reported to the police of Brooklyn yesterday. Owing to the cool weather comparatively few went into the water, and the number of fatalities reported was less than usual.

The body of Frank Fity, 52 years old, of 407 East Seventy-second Street, Brooklyn, who disappeared on Aug. 2, was found floating in the bay off Thirty-second Street. He left home on Aug. 2, after asking his son to kiss his mother for him the next time he saw her. Mrs. Fity was recently committed to an insane asylum and her husband had been despondent. His son found his jewelry and $140 on a bureau the evening that he disappeared.

Abraham Frankel, 32 years old, of 2,971 West Thirty-second Street, Coney Island, went swimming yesterday morning, and two hours later his body was recovered at the foot of Thirty-second Street.

William Forrest, 15 years old, of 76 Park Avenue, went bathing Thursday evening at the foot of Bay Twenty-fourth Street, Bath Beach, and yesterday morning his clothes were found in the bathhouse. The police believed he was drowned, but his body was not recovered.

LAWFUL TO SWEAR AT HOME

Court Rules a Man May Do So Freely Unless Family Objects.

Mrs. May E. Amato of Annahurst, near Hook Creek, Jamaica Bay, had William Autenreith before Magistrate Joseph Fitch in the Jamaica Court yesterday charged with disorderly conduct in that he used profane language when she called to learn when he intended to move from one of Mr. Amato's bungalows.

"A person has a legal right, questionable as it may be ethically, to swear to his heart's content in his own home, provided his family will stand for it," said Magistrate Fitch. "If he confines his profanity to his own domicile and does not annoy the public, he does not break the law.

"The fact that foreigners learn the use of profane words before they pick up other English expressions is a sad commentary upon boasted American civilization, but we cannot go beyond the law in judging cases. You may return to your home, Autenreith, and your swearing cannot be stopped unless your family objects or you are so noisy about it as to disturb your neighbors."

CARRANZA EXPELS GUATEMALA ENVOY

Dr. Ortega Has 24 Hours to Quit Mexico—Brazilian Leaving Also.

RESENTS NEW PEACE MOVE

But First Chief Files Brief Indicating He Would Treat with Rivals.

TO PLAN MEXICAN FINANCE

McAdoo and Lansing Confer Here Today on How to Assist a New Government.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—His passports were given today to Dr. Juan J. Ortega, Minister to Mexico from Guatemala, and he was informed that he must leave the country within twenty-four hours.

The reason for this step was not announced, but it is supposed that Dr. Ortega is persona non grata with General Carranza.

José Manuel Cardoso de Oliveira, Brazilian Minister to Mexico, who has been representing the interests of the United States here, will leave Tuesday in a special train for Vera Cruz with an escort provided by General Gonzales. He intends to spend several months in the United States.

General Gonzales is maintaining perfect order in the city.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—It is supposed here that the action of Gen. Carranza in giving his passports to the Guatemalan Minister in Mexico City was due to resentment among members of the Carranza Government over the participation of Guatemala in the peace conferences held this week. Considerable feeling was aroused over the presence of Guatemala's diplomatic representative in Washington at the conference. Mexico and Guatemala have been on bad terms for years, and editorials in the Mexican newspapers have indicated that there was feeling because Guatemala, through her participation in the State Department conferences, assumed to adopt the attitude that she was superior to Mexico and was entitled to be a party to the effort to teach Mexico how to govern herself.

The participation of Bolivia and Uruguay in the State Department conferences was also resented in Mexico.

The invitation by Secretary Lansing to Bolivia, Urnguay, and Guatemala to take part in the conferences were issued because the Ministers of those countries in Washington were the senior members in point of service of the Latin-American diplomatic body below the grade of Ambassador. The fact that Guatemala was not on good terms with Mexico was not taken into consideration.

If Carranza's action in dismissing the Guatemalan Minister was based on the participation of his Washington colleague in the peace conference, it would indicate, so it is held here, that Carranza resented the effort of the United States to adjust Mexico's troubles through the means adopted and desired to show it in an emphatic and public way.

LANSING TO CONFER ON MEXICO FUNDS

Will Meet McAdoo Here Today to Discuss Financing of New Government.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, left for New York tonight to confer there tomorrow with William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury. It is suspected that their meeting will have a bearing on the effort to settle the Mexican troubles, with particular reference to the financial aspects.

Mr. McAdoo left his Summer home in Maine to meet the Secretary of State. The conference was asked for by Mr. McAdoo. Its object is not known to Mr. Lansing or other officials here. Mr. McAdoo visited President Wilson at Cornish last week.

It has been the understanding here that part of the "active moral support" which President Wilson promised to any orderly provisional Government that might be set up in Mexico through mutual agreement of the factions now at war would be given through urging American bankers to furnish financial assistance to the new central authority, and that this authority would be helped also through the negative means of persuading bankers not to loan money to any of the factions that opposed it.

The admission was made at the State Department today that the Villa and Zapata factions were short of funds. Carranza appears to be better provided for. It may be that the Administration believes that at this particular time American bankers should withhold financial support from all the factions. It is mere surmise, however, to attribute the conference of the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Treasury to this cause.

Through Charles A. Douglas, legal adviser of the Carranza Government in Washington, there has been submitted to Secretary Lansing a brief which is construed in some quarters as an expression of willingness on the part of Carranza to confer with Villa, Zapata and any other rivals with a view to a mutual agreement for the pacification of Mexico. The interpretation of such willingness is drawn from a statement by Mr. Douglas that either or both of "The Roumanian Minister at Paris has been called to Bucharest for a consultation.

GERARD TO PROTEST GERMAN PRIZE VERDICT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The United States will protest against the decision of the German prize court in the case of the British steamer Indian Prince, sunk with a cargo of American-owned coffee in the South Atlantic last Winter by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich. The court justified the sinking.

The State Department takes the view that it is another clear violation of the Prussian-American treaty of 1828 and the principles of international law. Ambassador Gerard will make a formal protest, which is expected to bring the case up for diplomatic discussion.

SWEDEN'S ATTITUDE AGAIN MISTRUSTED

London Morning Post Fears Scandinavian Nation May Attack Russia.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The Morning Post asserts that the attitude of Sweden toward Russia and the latter's allies for some time past has revealed elements of a disquieting character.

"Emboldened by recent German successes," the newspaper says, "the latent hostility of Sweden, which has never forgiven the loss of Finland, has become strongly developed. Considerable preparations for warlike contingencies have been made in North Sweden, and the Swedish army is fully mobilized. If Sweden persists in her unfriendly attitude toward Russia, she may rapidly drift into a war which would inevitably be a great obstacle to her future progress."

The Times, in a long analysis of the Swedish situation, says the war party has lost its importance, and the people generally accept neutrality as the wisest course.

"Sweden's decision to remain neutral is as firm as ever," was the reply today of the Swedish Minister in London, Count Wrangel, to rumors published here this morning of the possible participation of the Scandinavian kingdom in the war.

"There is no foundation for the rumors," the Minister said, "and the suggestion that Sweden contemplates action for recovery of Finland is absurd. Premier Sazonof's speech in the Russian Duma on Sunday clearly indicates that relations between Sweden and Russia are of the most friendly nature."

HEARS RUSSIA WILL BUY 13,000,000 SHELLS HERE

Cleveland Manufacturer Says $234,000,000 in Contracts Are to be Let in America.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 7.—The Russian Government is reported to be placing contracts for nearly a quarter of a billion dollars' worth of war munitions in the United States. Of that sum approximately $10,000,000 probably will pour into the coffers of Cleveland factories.

Henry C. Osborn, President of the American Multigraph Company, today outlined the extensive ratifications of the huge order for shrapnel shells placed by the Russians in New York ten days ago.

"Contracts were let for a maximum of 13,000,000 shells," Mr. Osborn said. "The deal revealed the fact that Morgan & Co. were acting not only as financial agents for the British War Office but also for the Russians. Virtually the vast quantity of shells was ordered in one contract split up among a number of companies. A complete shell will cost $18, making a total cost of $234,000,000.

"The facts have been kept more or less secret because, while the contract had been placed, an important decision as to the style of fuse to be used has yet to be made. Upon that depends many sub-contracts affecting Cleveland."

Mr. Osborn said that a commission of Russian army officers and munition experts was now on its way to this country to conduct firing tests and determine whether an American or Russian type of fuse was to be used. The commission, he said, had absolute authority, but that its movements had been kept secret by the Russian Government and its munition agents in this country.

He said the American Multigraph Company probably would turn out an enormous quantity of small machine parts for time fuses. He estimated the contract between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000. It is said that the main part of the contract has been distributed between the General Electric Company, the Baldwin Locomotive Company, the American Can Company, and the Canadian Car and Foundry Company.

The Ivanhoe plant of the National Lamp Works, in Collinwood, will produce the brass drawn work for the cartridges of the shells allotted to the General Electric Company.

FORD MAY GET BIG CONTRACT

Detroit Hears Report of Great Award by the Allies.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—Twenty thousand workers in the Ford automobile plant here, who have been laid off a week, heard today that the company had obtained the biggest war order yet awarded for the allied forces in Europe.

Henry Ford, his son, Arthur Sorenson, production manager of the Ford plant, and other officials, started for New York today to consult P. L. D. Perry, British Sales Director of the Ford Company, who has come from London, bringing, it is said, large contracts for light motor chases for the British expeditionary forces.

ARMS MEN AWAIT BIG STRIKE EDICT

Machinists' Leaders Will Meet Half Hundred Organizers in Hartford Today.

GERMAN INFLUENCE DENIED

Keppler Insists Workers Seek Only Better Conditions and Are Neutral.

500,000 TOILERS AFFECTED

Besides New England, New York and Brooklyn Factories Are In Danger of a Tie-Up.

The crucial conference on the proposed strike in the arms and ammunition plants of New England will take place today and tomorrow at Hartford, Conn., when President W. H. Johnston of the International Association of Machinists; Vice President J. J. Keppler, director of the campaign for an eight-hour day, and fifteen other high labor officials will hear the reports of half a hundred organizers they have had at work in the New England States ever since the great orders for arms for the Allies flowed to that region.

The organizers have been called together to advise the labor heads of the strength of the unions and the attitude of the manufacturers, and to help formulate the demands to be made.

For months all the machinery at the disposal of the international unions of metal workers has been at work to get for the workers a part of the millions in profits that the treasuries of the Allies are pouring into New England for munitions of war. The strike at the Remington plants was a premature explosion.

It had been arranged to call the general strike on Sept. 1. The plans were all laid to that end, and those plans have been now completed. There have been no changes made in the plans of Keppler, who regards the concessions granted by the Remington firms as very valuable, inasmuch as he hopes other factories will adopt the Remington program rather than to permit a strike which would entail the loss of many millions to those who are furnishing the energies of the Kaiser with the sinews of war.

Activity In New England.

It is estimated that the major part of the supply of arms and ammunitions shipped to the Allies is made in New England. Almost every kind of machine factory is now making munitions.

Labor leaders said in the recent strike in Bridgeport that every industrial plant in the industrial centre of Connecticut, except two corset factories, was making something for the use of the Allied armies. In every manufacturing town there are machine shops that in times of peace make anything from a prosaic plough or alarm clock to an automobile which are now turning out munitions.

The leading arms and ammunition plants in New England and the number of men they employ, approximating 90,000, are:

Remington Arms and Ammunition Company, Bridgeport, 16,000.

Union Metallic Cartridge Company, Bridgeport, 14,000.

Winchester Repeating Arms Company, New Haven, 15,000.

Colt Patent Fire Arms Company, Hartford, 8,000.

Smith & Wesson Company, Springfield, 4,000.

Hopkins & Allen, Norwich, Conn., 3,000.

Iver Johnson Arms Company, Fitchburg, Mass., 2,500.

General Electric Company, Pittsfield, Mass., 8,000.

Marlin Fire Arms Company, New Haven, 2,000.

American and British Manufacturing Company, Bridgeport, 5,000.

J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company, Chicopee Falls, Mass., 4,000.

United States Cartridge Company, Lowell, Mass., 2,500.

These are the leading firms. How small their total stands in the real industrial strength that is making munitions of war is shown by the situation in Bridgeport, where 20,000 persons are engaged in the trade who are working for firms never connected with the making of tools of war, as popularly conceived.

The machinists' first demand is the eight-hour day. Coupled with this is a demand for an increase in wages which varies from 10 to 20 per cent. It is said that almost all of the big firms in New England are ready to grant the eight-hour day or a reduction in the present hours. Thousands of workers have got increase in pay from manufacturers, who acted voluntarily or to avert the threatening strike.

It was after the Remington strike—into which the machinists were drawn in sympathy and when they decided to settle the eight-hour problem in Bridgeport—had brought the strike to public attention that Keppler decided to spend the time between then and Sept. 1 in appealing to manufacturers of munitions to give the eight-hour day and wage increases.

500,000 Men Involved.

Keppler announced yesterday that fully 200,000 workers had received these benefits. He estimated that 500,000 metal trades workers would be affected by the New England campaign with benefits that would indirectly accrue to 2,000,000 persons.

The campaign was outlined by Keppler through designation of the international unions early in the year. According to his recommendations officials of the union were empowered to call a general strike at any time they believed it wise. He has changed his plans because of the many firms which have yielded, and the general strike, if called, will not mean a walkout of all machinists in New England, but only of those who work in shops where the eight-hour day has not been granted. The labor

BROKER IS FOUND WOUNDED IN STREET

Dumped There from Taxicab, Witnesses Tell Hospital Surgeon.

MAY HAVE BEEN DRUGGED

Victim, Who Said He Was Angus Mason, Suffers Concussion of the Brain.

Policeman Falvey of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station saw a crowd gathered about a man who lay on the sidewalk at Forty-first Street and Third Avenue last night and pushed his way to the fellow, who was unconscious.

"He was thrown out of a taxicab," some of the crowd told Falvey, "and he lit on his head. We picked him up."

There was a bad cut on the back of the man's head, and Falvey telephoned for Dr. Shea from Bellevue Hospital. The surgeon declared that the man was in a serious condition. He said he had concussion of the brain and apparently was suffering from the effects of knock-out drops as well as alcoholism.

Dr. Shea worked over the man for some time and succeeded in resuscitating him long enough for him to say he was Angus Mason, a broker at 71 Wall Street, living at the New York Club, 20 West Fortieth Street, and was 58 years old.

"What happened to you?" demanded the surgeon, but before he could reply Mason lost consciousness again and Dr. Shea hurried him to the hospital, where other efforts to resuscitate him failed and he remained in a coma.

A man in the crowd Falvey had found around the man told the policeman he had recognized Mr. Mason as the man who had given him a job eight years ago with Price & Co., brokers at 71 Wall Street. He said he had seen the attack on Mr. Mason.

The taxicab had driven up to the corner, this man said, and Mr. Mason had alighted. He had staggered as though under the influence of liquor, and, after quitting the cab, had apparently intended to re-enter it. As he tried to do so two men who were inside pushed him away from the door, and he toppled over backward landing on his head.

Falvey's informant said he had hurried to the man's side as the taxicab drove off and had recognized him at once as Mr. Mason. Thereupon he had glanced after the cab and had noted the license number, which he told to the policeman.

He said he did not know where Mr. Mason lived or anything about him, and in the excitement of attending to the injured man Falvey let his informant get away.

At the New York Club the doorman said that no Angus Mason was a member there, and the police of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who tried to identify the unconscious man, said that they could not find his office at 71 Wall Street.

Dr. Shea said Mr. Mason had been in a daze when he questioned him, and he might have given wrong addresses unconsciously.

NO LAND TO BULGARIA, SAYS GREEK PREMIER

Will Not Cede One Inch of Territory, Gounaris Tells Macedonian Delegates.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—"Greece will not cede one inch of territory to Bulgaria," was the substance of a reply made by Premier Gounaris to a delegation of Macedonian deputies who asked for a statement relative to the purposes of the Government, says a Reuter dispatch from Athens.

In the negotiations which have been conducted by the Allies of the Quadruple Entente with Bulgaria in an effort to induce her to enter the war on their side, she has insistently demanded that she be ceded that part of Macedonia which was awarded to Serbia at the close of the Balkan wars. She also has sought to obtain at least a portion of the Macedonian territory which came under the Greek flag in the same way.

Macedonia was a Turkish province until the close of the Balkan war. The region embraces a medley of peoples, the chief elements being Slavs, Osmanlis and Greeks. The Slavs are Bulgarians and Serbs.

The statement attributed to M. Gounaris is significant in view of the fact that the British, French, Russian and Italian Ministers at Athens called upon him Wednesday and made united representations regarding the political situation. Their purpose was to gain the assistance of Greece.

Similar representations were made Friday by the representatives of the same nations at Nish to the Serbian Premier. This was regarded as the second step in the attempt to bring about a Balkan agreement, so that Bulgaria, Rumania, and Greece may be numbered among the Allies.

REPORTS VON JAGOW ABOUT TO RESIGN

Amsterdam Hears That Alleged Congo Disclosure Has Hurt German Foreign Secretary.

AUSTRIAN NOTE ALSO FACTOR

Berlin Official News Bureau Denies, However, That He Urged Despoiling Belgium.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The correspondent at Amsterdam of the Exchange Telegraph Company hears from Berlin that the early resignation of Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Foreign Secretary, is probable.

The Minister's retirement will be attributed to ill health, but, according to the correspondent's advices, it really will be due to two blunders, the first being the sending of the Austro-Hungarian note to the United States regarding the exportations of munitions, and the second, as revealed in the Belgian Gray Book, von Jagow's former advocacy of the division of the Belgian Congo between Germany and France.

The Foreign Secretary's successor, the correspondent adds, probably will be Dr. Alfred Zimmerman, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

No confirmation of the rumor that Herr von Jagow is about to give up the foreign portfolio has been received from any other source.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—Among the news items prepared by the Overseas News Agency today for transmission abroad was the following:

"The North German Gazette, commenting officially on the assertion made in the Belgian Gray Book that Herr von Jagow, the German Foreign Secretary, proposed the partition of Belgian Congo between Germany, France and Great Britain, to the exclusion of Belgium, in the Spring of 1914, remarks that certain information about the negotiations between Great Britain and Germany, regulating conditions in Africa, seemed to have reached Paris. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador at Berlin, asked for an explanation of Herr von Jagow, who replied that no French rights were involved, but that perhaps the Congo region would be an appropriate subject for general agreements between the three countries.

"Belgium, he said, probably would be unable financially to meet the requirements, and it generally was doubtful whether the small countries were financially strong enough to administer large colonies, which opinion was shared by Belgian publicists.

"The violation of Belgian rights, the North German Gazette says, never was intended or mentioned. The discussion started from the fact that France during the Morocco conference offered Germany her option and right in or to buy the Belgian Congo if it was salable.

"Seemingly M. Cambon," the newspaper says, "at once informed the Belgian Minister of his conversation with Herr von Jagow, misrepresenting its tendencies; but the fact that Germany early in 1914 began such colonial negotiations is the best proof that she had no thought of attacking the other powers or of beginning a world conflagration."

Like Lord Haldane, whose intimate friend he was, Herr von Jagow, the German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, had always believed in an Anglo-German rapprochement which should dominate Europe. On the other hand, unlike the Imperial Chancellor Dr. von Bethann-Hollweg, he has never receded from the attitude he took on receiving the British Ambassador at Berlin, Sir Edward Goschen, for the last time, on Aug. 1915, when he frankly declared that Germany's invasion of Belgium was a matter of indifference—the quickest way to get into France.

He with the Under Secretary, Herr von Zimmermann, believed that England would not fight against Germany—he, through a sincere friendship for the English, and Zimmerman because he believed the English Government would realize the expediency of remaining out of the war and then forming a commercial and colonial alliance with Germany free from French and Russian influences. Prince Lichnowsky, who was the German Ambassador at London when the war began, had strong British leanings, as did his two predecessors, all three men appointed through von Jagow's influence.

Gottlieb von Jagow succeeded Herr von Kiderlen-Wächter as the Chief Secretary of the Imperial Foreign Office early in 1913. He is a Prussian, a bachelor and is 51 years of age. Besides having held temporary posts at The Hague, Munich and Luxemburg, he was Ambassador at Rome for five years. He is a modest, unassuming scholar, fond of books and pictures. In 1913 he long begged to be excused from taking the Foreign Secretaryship on account of ill health, and it is understood that he accepted it only on the assurances of the Kaiser that he would go down in history as the man who had brought about an entente between Great Britain and the Fatherland.

The form of the Foreign Office notes, which bear the name of "Jagow," are said to reflect the character of Zimmermann rather than that of his chief. Zimmermann is the complete antitheais of von Jagow, being more like Herr von Kiderlen-Wächter, who was blustering and domineering. Previous to the diplomatic conversations which ushered in the present war he was little known, even in Germany, except as an ambitious young attaché coming from Königsberg. His diplomatic career had consisted of brief periods as Consul at Canton and Tientsin. The German War list's does not even give his pronomen.

GERMANS OPEN ATTACK ON KOVNO; TAKE, THEN LOSE OSSOWETZ WORKS; RUSSIANS RETIRE ON NAREW FRONT

Petrograd Tells of Attacks on Fortresses; Reports Desperate Battles in the South

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7, via London, Sunday, Aug. 8.)—The following official statement was given out tonight:

Between the Dvina and the Niemen Rivers the fighting continued Friday without any essential change of front.

Near Kovno the enemy attacked the positions of the first line of the fortress on the left of the Niemen. Our heavy batteries are bombarding them vigorously.

Near Ossowetz the enemy at dawn Friday developed an intense fire, and, launching great clouds of asphyxiating gas, began an assault on the fortress positions. He carried works near Sosna, but was dislodged by our fire and by a counter-attack.

On the Narew there was desperate fighting. On the roads to Ostrov the enemy on Friday, after a series of sanguinary collisions, succeeded in progressing somewhat and extending the ground which he had occupied. Desperate enemy attacks in the Serock region on the previous evening were successfully repulsed.

On the Vistula there was a cannonade. Our heavy artillery successfully counter-attacked the work of pontoon parties on the Vistula during Thursday night.

Between the Vistula and the Bug Rivers most desperate actions are being fought in the direction of Kurow to Kotsk and in the region on the right bank of the Vieprz River, north of Leczna.

ITALIANS CAPTURE KEY TO GORIZIA

Monte San Michele, Five Miles Away, Taken After Desperate Fighting.

THREATEN ROAD TO TRIESTE

New Position Gives the Invaders Command of Highway Paralleling Austrian Trenches.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—After a desperate battle the Italians have stormed and captured the summit of Monte San Michele, which dominates Gorizia, says a Petit Journal dispatch from Turin.

The fall of Gorizia, twenty-two miles southwest of Trieste on the Isonzo, now is believed imminent, the dispatch adds.

Austrians Fire Monfalcone Depots.

ROME, Aug. 7.—The following official communication from Lieut. Gen. Count Cadorna, Chief of Staff of the army, was given out tonight:

In the Piava sector our troops are establishing themselves in the conquered positions. The enemy during the night of Aug. 6-7 tried two attacks on them, supported by the fire of numerous groups of artillery which were combatted by ours and reduced to silence. Both attacks were repulsed.

In the Carso a stubborn struggle, which lasted all day yesterday, was decided toward evening by the material success of our arms, especially in the centre, where we took part of the depression descending toward Doberdo and made 140 prisoners.

On the right wing the enemy artillery fired incendiary bombs on the depots of Monfalcone, succeeding in starting a big fire, and by violent salvos of artillery tried to stop our detachments which sought to extinguish the fire. Nevertheless the dash and energy of our troops enabled them after a while to confine the fire and to limit the damage considerably.

VIENNA, Aug. 7.—An official statement issued tonight says:

In the Gorizia district the front east of Polazzo and Redipuglia was very heavily bombarded by the enemy in the forenoon. Several Italian battalions attacked this sector in the afternoon, but after a short engagement ceased to advance.

In Tyrol and Carpinthia there were only artillery actions.

The occupation of Monte San Michele, 900 feet high, five miles southwest of Gorizia, two and one-half miles east of Gradisca, and three miles north and a little west of Monfalcone, renders the Italian possession of the last two places secure and at the same time gives the invaders a position from which they can command the ridge north of the highway which runs from Gorizia southwest to Aidussina, and thence due south to Trieste, joining the Gorizia-Trieste Railway at Cobila. Behind this ridge the Austrians still hold the slopes of Mont Frigido, 5,500 feet, and Mont Goliak, 5,800 feet, whose summits are inaccessible.

What is true of the so-called investment of Gorizia, a town through which Italian troops have several times passed, was true of "the investment of Gradisca." As long as the Italians were assailing Podgora and other heights around it the delusion was produced that the town was besieged. Yet when these heights were taken there was no official announcement of the capture of Gradisca itself.

ITALIAN SUBMARINE SUNK.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The Italian submarine Nereide is reported to have been sunk in an encounter with an Austrian submarine off the island of Pelagosa, in the Adriatic Sea, according to a special dispatch from Rome.

The Nereide, which was built in 1913, was 134 feet long with a beam of 14 feet and a displacement of 315 tons, gross. Her peace-time complement was 17 men.

GERMAN ASSAULTS FAIL IN ARGONNE

Succeed at First, but the French Promptly Make a Counterattack.

REPULSED IN THE VOSGES

Advances Upon Schratzmannele Checked by French Artillery Fire and Bayonet Charge.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Renewed German attacks in the Argonne, at first attended with slight success, were made today, but the French official report records their final failure. Artillery combats took place in the Souchez region and in the forest of Apremont, and two German attacks in the Vosges were repulsed.

Some artillery fighting has taken place in Artois around Souchez and Roclincourt, and also between the Oise and the Aisne on the Plateau of Nouvron.

In the Argonne the Germans twice repeated attacks around Hill No. 213, but they were repulsed. The explosion of two mines enabled them to gain a foothold in one of our trenches. They were immediately expelled by a counter-attack.

In the forest of Apremont the bombardment has been continued with the same intensity as on previous days.

In the Vosges the enemy several times shelled our positions at Linge and Schratzmannele. Toward 2 P. M. they made an attack on the Pass of Schratzmannele, on the road from Honneck, which was stopped by our sweeping fire. At the end of the afternoon a new German attack was repulsed by means of a bayonet charge and grenades.

The afternoon report issued in Paris is as follows:

Last night passed quietly on the western part of the front. There has been reported nothing more than some engagements with hand grenades in the vicinity of Souchez and artillery fighting in the region of Tracy-le-Val and in the neighborhood of Berry-au-Bac.

In the western section of the Argonne there has been a continuance of the very spirited fighting with grenades and bombs. An attack of the enemy in the vicinity of Hill No. 213 has been repulsed.

In Lorraine a strong German reconnoissance has been dispersed by our fire at a point not far from Leintrey.

In the Vosges there has been nothing to report.

In Flanders the Belgians, owing to the effectiveness of our artillery, were obliged partially to evacuate their advanced positions over the Yser near Hernisse, south of Dixmude.

French hand grenade attacks were repulsed north of Nancy. East of Lunéville our advance patrol easily repelled an enemy attack.

AUSTRALIAN VOLUNTEER SURVIVES SEVEN WOUNDS

Crosby Is Back from Gallipoli With Bullets in His Chest and Liver.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Private David Crosby, who was one of the first batch of Queensland volunteers and is at present in Liverpool, affords an amazing case of wounds without death. In the course of a three hours' charge in the Gallipoli Peninsula he sustained the following injuries: A bayonet wound eighteen inches long in the abdomen, shot through the groin, shot through the right elbow and wrist, broken finger, fractured knee, bullet at present embedded in the chest, which can easily be fingered, and bullet in the liver. He is now about to undergo two operations.

Crosby is 22 years old. He went to Australia four years ago and joined the volunteers. He was in action on Aug. 16, 1914, at the capture of Dabon, one of the German possessions in the Pacific. He went on to Egypt and then to the Dardanelles, having been in the second boat that landed on the beach in a hail of lead. Through this he passed almost without a scratch, and it was on May 30 that he sustained his injuries. The man who saved his life was killed by the same bayonet that wounded Crosby.

With all these injuries the young soldier lay in agony on the battlefield for 28 hours and was eventually dragged to a place of shelter by a man whose leg was broken.

BIG FORTRESS STORMED

Germans Use Gas at Ossowetz But Are Dislodged by Russians.

NEW MOVE TOWARD DVINSK

Russians Yield More Ground South of Riga and Retire Behind Defenses.

NAREW FRONT IS BROKEN

LINES TO SOUTH STILL FIRM

LONDON, Sunday, Aug. 8.—Reports from the eastern front show that the Germans on their northern front have pressed close enough to Kovno to open their attack on the fortress. Ossowetz, also strongly fortified, is under attack.

Unofficial reports that Kovno was being evacuated by the Russians reached London yesterday, but a Russian official statement indicates that they still are in possession of the city, which is the capital of the Government of Kovno, in Lithuania. It is a fortress of the first class. Ossowetz is about fifty miles northeast of Warsaw on the Narew River, and about the same distance southwest of Kovno.

The German official claim that the Russian line has been broken near Lomza and the mouth of the Bug River, where von Hindenburg has been battling for three weeks, suggested to London observers that the Russian retirement may have been voluntary, the purpose of protecting the Warsaw retreat having been accomplished. The official report from Petrograd, however, shows that the Russians are contesting every foot of ground on this front.

In the Baltic area, the further advance of von Bülow's army toward Dünaburg, (Dvinsk,) and the attack on Kovno show an increasing danger in the Grand Duke's military position.

General von Bülow with 340,000 men is carrying out sweeping flank movements much on the same lines as those with which General von Kluck opened the campaign in the west, though in different circumstances and in a much more difficult country. General von Bülow's left wing, which joins up with the separate army operating south of Riga, on its further advance toward Dvinsk has caused the Russians to retreat across the Jara River.

Hereafter General von Bülow's progress is likely to be slower. Between the Jara and Dünaburg there are great swamps, while between Kovno and Vilna, his second objective, lie the Niemen River to the south and the Sventa and many other streams to the north and east, all of which lend themselves to defense.

The besieged fortress of Novo Georgievsk, at the junction of the Vistula and Narew Rivers, the most westerly place retained by the Russians, still holds out, although the Germans claim to have captured one fort.

There is little change in the other sections of the Polish salient. The Russians are still holding the eastern bank of the Vistula, including Praga, a suburb of Warsaw, and at least are delaying the German advance across the river, while in the southeast neither General von Mackensen nor Archduke Joseph Ferdinand has made much progress, being still little more than twenty miles north of the Lublin-Cholm Railway, which they crossed a week ago. The resistance which the Russians are offering here, and that which has delayed General von Hindenburg in the north, have kept the roads clear for the escape of the Russians from the inner encircling operation.

Berlin Report of Gains.

The official statement from Berlin is as follows:

East of Poniewesch the Russians retreated behind the Jara.

Toward the West front of Kovno, progress was made and 500 Russians were made prisoners and two machine guns were taken.

The armies of Generals von Scholz and von Gallwitz have, after stubborn fighting broken the resistance of the enemy near Lomza and the mouth of the River Bug.

The total results of the fighting from Aug. 4 to Aug. 6 amount to eighty-five officers and more than 14,200 men being taken prisoners. Six cannon, eight bomb throwers and sixty-nine machine guns also were captured.

The troops investing Novo Georgievsk have penetrated as far as the Narew River.

The fort of Dembe was taken from the South. The Vistula as far as Bienkow has been reached.

In Warsaw the position is unchanged. The Russians continue to bombard the town from the eastern bank of the Vistula.

Our airships dropped bombs on the railway stations of Nowo Minsk and Siedice.

Near and north of Ivangorod the position remains unchanged.

Between the Bug and the Vistula

the German troops stormed the enemy positions near Ruskowola, southeast of Lubartow and northeast of Lentschna, and forced the enemy to evacuate his positions there.

The following official statement was issued at the War Office in Vienna:

Between the Vistula and the Bug fighting is proceeding. Austro-Hungarian troops south of Lubartow and the Germans northeast of Leczna penetrated the enemy's linea.

Orderly Retreat from Warsaw.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7, (via London.)—Warsaw was evacuated by the Russians without a struggle in its immediate vicinity in order that the Polish capital might escape damage. The retreat was businesslike and orderly.

All the war stock had been previously removed from the city, along with the rolling stock of the railroads. The Russians planted artillery to prevent the rebuilding of the Vistula bridges by the Germans.

According to official information a large part of the evacuating army remained close to the city prepared to contest any effort made by the Germans to cross the Vistula in pursuit.

Novo Georgievsk, in spite of its investment on three sides, still has railroad communication to the southeast through Nowy Dwor and Yablona. The former town is immediately across the Bug River at the junction of the Vistula. The fortress presents a serious obstacle to the co-operation of the forces of Prince Leopold of Bavaria at Warsaw with those operating along the Narew.

The Germans on the Narew are being held a few miles from the left bank of the river, notwithstanding the bringing up of heavy German reinforcements, and the apparently serious efforts made in the last three days to break through into the rear of the Russian Warsaw defenders.

In the vicinity of the Baltic capital of Riga the Germans have been forced back toward Mitau. The Teutons appear for the time being to have abandoned their efforts in the direction of Riga, and intend instead to prevent flanking of their positions from the direction of Poniewesch. Nevertheless, it is expected in Petrograd that Riga will be the scene of an early renewal of activities.

The railroads are not taking shipments destined for Riga. Historic monuments are being removed from the city, and the exodus of the people continues.

RUSSIANS STILL IN PRAGA.

Rearguard Actions Aid Main Retreat from Warsaw.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ZURICH, Aug. 8, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—A special telegram this afternoon to the Zurich Neue Zeitung from Berlin states that the Russians still firmly occupy the Warsaw suburb of Praga on the eastern bank of the river.

Fresh artillery duels are taking place across the river. This rearguard resistance is proving of great value to the main body of the Russian Army.

GERMANS DESCRIBE CAPTURE OF WARSAW

Forts South of City Stormed—Entering Forces Welcomed by the People.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (via London.)—According to press dispatches from Warsaw now reaching Berlin, the Polish capital fell as the result of a midnight storm against the forts on the south of the city.

A division of Prussian reservists had the honor of making the first breach in the fortress line, and they entered the city at 3 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 5.

These troops had been heavily engaged for two days and two nights with the forts, which, though deprived of heavy artillery, were capable of offering highly effective resistance to the infantry.

The forts in Warsaw had been destroyed last Winter when Field Marshal von Hindenburg's drive from the west threatened the Russian lines along the Vistula and when the evacuation of the city seemed imminent. They later were rebuilt as supporting points for infantry and were surrounded with intricate entanglements of wire, ditches, and extensive fields of buried mines to explode under the feet of storming columns.

The fall of the west front of the fortress occurred almost simultaneously with the capture of the southern forts by Prussians. Mixed divisions of Saxon, Bavarian, and Württembergian troops carried the western forts, so that all four of German kingdoms were represented in the victory.

The troops attacking from the west had at times to do severe fighting in working their way within storming distance of the forts. The Russians resisted stubbornly, and retired under the cover of night.

The German troops were welcomed to Warsaw as liberators, according to the report forwarded to Berlin by Kurt Aram, a special correspondent of the Lokal-anzeiger. Telegraphing under date of Aug. 6, Aram places emphasis on the statement that the city was not evacuated without a conflict. The forts were protected by barbed wire, trenches, pitfalls, and mines against infantry attacks. The city is not mentioned as having been damaged.

The inhabitants of the Polish capital, the correspondent says, filled the streets and welcomed the in-marching troops with every sign of real enthusiasm and rejoicing. The streets were richly beflagged. The Polish peasants who long had been restrained in the city began leaving in force early on the morning for their farms, driving their livestock and conveying their household effects, and they greeted the Germans with tears.

The Warsaw correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt confirms the report that the German troops met with a joyous reception. The streets, he says, were filled with Poles, Jews, Germans, and Russians, who waved their hats joyfully to the German soldiers. Many of the inhabitants were seen standing in the vicinity of the castle, although an infantry battle with the Russians was proceeding on the east of the building.

The electric street cars were running as usual, the correspondent says, and almost all the shops were opened. Very little damage had been done in the city proper. The earthworks about the forts show the German artillery made many fair hits.

The correspondent at Ivangorod of the Lokal-Anzeiger points out the occupation of that fortress in itself is less important than the fact that it makes possible an important increase of concentric pressure on the Russian troops in South Poland. The offensive of the armies of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand and Field aMrshal von Mackensen, he adds, continues northward and the effect on the yet unchanged East Galician front is likely soon to make itself felt.

100,000 IN MUNICH CELEBRATE VICTORY

MUNICH, Aug. 7, (via London.)—A crowd of more than 100,000 persons, representing all classes of society, assembled last evening on the historic Koenigsplatz of Munich to celebrate the German victory at Warsaw and Ivangorod.

This gathering is being talked of as the greatest in the history of the city. The manifestations of patriotism were remarkable in themselves, but they were overshadowed by the evidences of a deep religious feeling on the part of the assembled multitude. During the celebration aeroplanes circled in the air over the Koenigsplatz, and the hum of their motors could be heard constantly above the sound of thousands of voices.

Every inch of the great square, from the Glyptothek to the Art Museum, and from the Propylaen to the Arcistrasse was filled. With bared heads the people stood in the light of the setting sun, and before giving expression to the national pride in the success of German arms in Poland, a fervent prayer went up to God.

The celebration began at a quarter past 7, with the simultaneous ringing of all the church bells in Munich. For two hours previous to this time crowds had been streaming from all directions to the Koenigsplatz, bedecked with flags for the occasion. At half-past seven, to the accompaniment of a military band which had taken up its position on the pillared portico of the art museum, the crowds sang the Ambrosian Te Deum in constantly swelling volume. It was then that four aeroplanes circled above the square, now rising and now sinking to a hundred feet above the heads of the people, the whir of their motors joining in with the sound of the singing of the crowd.

The Te Deum was followed by the singing of another choral. Detachments of police and firemen had been ordered to the square to preserve order, but their services were not needed. These men joined in the singing of the second anthem, "Now Thank Ye All Our God," in which they were led by Herr von Burscht, Lord Mayor of Munich.

After this, the Lord Mayor in a voice heard distinctly in all parts of the great square, made a short patriotic address, closing with a call for three cheers for King Ludwig of Bavaria, Emperor William, and Emperor Francis Joseph.

After this the assemblage joined in singing "Hail to the King," the melody of which is the same as "America." Other patriotic songs were then sung by the crowd.

The religious note was maintained to the end, when several thousand persons, still bareheaded, sang the old hymn of thanksgiving to God.

It was almost dark when the demonstration came to an end. After nightfall every restaurant in the city was filled to overflowing, and the streets were jammed with persons waving flags. This was the informal part of the celebration. So far as the number of participants was concerned, it exceeded the demonstrations following the fall of Przemysl and Lemberg.

FOUND THE GERMANS DEPRESSED IN VICTORY

British Official Eyewitness With Russians Says Teutons Realize They Cannot Win in End.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Professor Bernard Pares, who has been the British official eyewitness with the Russian armies, and is now back in London, summed up yesterday for The Daily Chronicle his impressions of the Eeastern campaign.

"The war in Poland has revealed Russia at her best," he said. "When I left the Third Army in Galicia at the end of June the Germans were fifty miles south of Lublin. They took a month to get there and that's not bad work for the Russians. When we retreated from Gorlice they took precious good care not to press us too much. On one occasion a Russian corps of 6,000 men, hampered though they were by lack of adequate artillery and munitions, actually took 7,000 prisoners, more than they themselves.

"Both Germans and Austrians are in a chronic condition of depression. It is hardly credible, but nevertheless true, that after their great successes in Galicia they somehow realized then, as they realize more than ever now in spite of any temporary advantage, the fact that they cannot win unless we choose to lose.

"I say deliberately and emphatically that on the whole of the Russian front, and I could go where I liked and talk to whom I liked, I have not seen or heard of anything brutal or beastly done by Russian troops. They have fought most humanely in this war, almost too humanely sometimes think.

"Quite apart from the enthusiasm with which the Slav populations, Poles, Czechs, and Ruthenians, greeted their appearance on Austrian soil, the remarkable fact must be recorded that a very large number of Austrian civilians quite voluntarily accompanied the Russians when the latter yere forced to retire. Not only do they treat the wounded German or Austrian prisoners as well as their own people, they often actually treat them better. I had many personal illustrations of this and of the manner in which the sulkiness of the German captive was soon worn down by the sheer kindness of his Russian attendants. Their Slav prisoners are treated with the greatest tolerance and often may be seen walking with perfect freedom in the streets.

"Of the German side I was told no such amenities redeemed the ruin of war. Their troops were brutal, arrogant, and often drunk. German prisoners, unlike Austrians, are sometimes found so hopelessly intoxicated they are not sober for twenty-four hours after their capture. On the other hand, I can say with certainty that there is not one case of drunkenness in the whole Russian Army. The drink that Germans often deliberately leave when they evacuate a town is promptly thrown into the gutters."

FRANCE NOT DOWNCAST.

People Refuse to Regard Loss of Warsaw as a Serious Blow.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—Although the abandonment of Warsaw caused deep regret here, public opinion was so prepared that nothing like a shock was experienced.

Russia's vastness has made such an impression on France that the people are confident no loss of territory, if unaccompanied by a sacrifice of armies, can affect Russia's strength. Like the British fleet, mighty Russia represents invincibility, and France feels the eastern ally is retiring only to return with redoubled violence.

Le Temps sums up the general impression as follows: "The evacuation of Warsaw is for us only a grievous test. It could not demoralize us. The magnificent attitude of the Russian Army and people and the union of all the vital forces of the nation for a grand unanimous effort contribute, on the contrary, to justify the faith in final victory, which is now stronger than ever in all allied countries than it was a year ago."

Le Journal des Débats emphasizes the Duma's unity and confidence, despite the German triumph at Warsaw, and says: "Despite their present victory, the Germans are wrong in hoping for internal dissensions in Russia. The Allies refuse to consider incidents, however important, as essentials. They did not think the war won after the victory of the Marne, as now they are confident it is not lost after Warsaw. Let Germany remember the danger of victories which do not insure the final victory. Napoleon went further than Warsaw. The Germans have not as yet shown any superiority over Napoleon."

SAW IVANGOROD FIGHTING.

Chicago Tribune Correspondent Praises the Austrians' Morale.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—The Chicago Tribune will publish the following Rotterdam dispatch tomorrow; from H. J. Reilly, its war correspondent:

"I have just returned from the field headquarters of the Austro-Hungarian Army after a week with the corps of General von Koevoet, on the front at Ivangorod.

"On July 28 I visited the cavalry along the Vistula and saw Novo Alexandria burning. Officers of the cavalry say they saw the Russians burning the houses in their retreat. The Russians burned all bridges to the north.

"On the 29th I visited the infantry opposite the south half of the Russian position in front of the Ivangorod forts. Across 1,200 yards of rolling country, with occasional trees, I saw plainly the Russian trenches along the edge of a wood across an open field. There was occasional slight infantry and artillery fire to the north.

"A Russian captive balloon was fired. On the same night the Germans helped the Austro-Hungarian engineers cross the Vistula, north of Kozienc.

"On the 31st I visited the infantry in front of the Ivangorod forts, and opposite the right flank of the Germans east of the Vistula passed crowds of refugees, in wagons and on foot, carrying household belongings and driving cattle, sheep, and horses.

"From the Austro-Hungarian trenches on the bank of the Vistula I saw German shrapnel and high explosives bursting on the Russian position on the other bank, also the smoke of the burning villages farther south.

"Later I visited the artillery position. The enemy's shrapnel burst 400 yards away on the flank. There was desultory artillery firing all day, during the night the Russians made heavy attacks on the Germans across the river. All failed.

"On the morning of Aug. 1 the Germans on the east and the Austro-Hungarians with seventy guns on the west side attacked the Russians. From the trenches I saw Russian shells bursting on the opposite bank set the village of Tyrzyn on fire, while on the west side Russian artillery projectiles from their position in front of Ivangorod burst over the Austro-Hungarian position to the south. On all sides there were burning villages.

"Nine Austro-Hungarian divisions attacked the Russian positions in front of Ivangorod, which were sufficiently in advance of the Ivangorod forts to prevent the Austro-Hungarian guns from reaching the forts.

"By night most of the enemy's positions, 2,500 prisoners, twenty-nine guns, and fifty machine guns had been captured with slight loss. Then the heavy guns could reach the Ivangorod forts. There are indications of the Russian morale breaking west of the Vistula. There they burned some villages to the east and are now burning all villages and crops in their path.

"In the Austro-Hungarian Army are many regiments, much equipment and ammunition, and food of all kinds is plentiful. The spirit of the men and officers is excellent. They are sure of success. Just as the Germans rest on the defensive in France, while concentrating their strength against the Russians, the Austro-Hungarians rest on the defensive in Italy and Serbia and concentrate on Russia. The unity between the Germans and Austro-Hungarians is complete."

WOMEN BURY WARSAW DEAD.

Part of the Heavy Burden That Has Fallen on Polish People.

In the terrible fighting around Warsaw, the women of the Polish capital had to act as undertakers and gravediggers, in addition to performing other and less distasteful work which in peace times men are generally called upon to do. This information was transmitted to the Polish Victims' Relief Committee of this city by an agent of the committee in Warsaw. A statement issued by the committee in this city says:

"When the men were being slain by thousands on the borders of the city and outlying country, there was no time for burials. Those bodies that received no attention were thrown into shallow trenches and hastily covered with loose earth. The heat of Summer and the rains have literally opened these charnels, which became a menace to the living. The municipal authorities tried to get men to do the work of reburying. Two rubles a day (only 80 cents since the decrease in value of Polish money) was offered. The only volunteers for the gruesome toil were women and young girls. Directed by women of refinement, who under other circumstances could not have been induced to go near such horrors, the women dig new and deeper graves than those from which the decomposed bodies are being taken. The sight of those frail women dragging dead bodies, completely unrecognizable, from their hiding places in trench graves is an unusual one even in these days of heartrending war scenes. In many cases the women have been bereaved of all the men of their families, and the pathos of the situation is augmented because they know that some of the bodies they are burying are those of their own loved ones.

"Interest in the Polish Victims' Relief Fund is spreading all over the United States, through the work of the National American Committee, of which Mr. Paderewski is the head. Checks should be made payable to the National City Bank, marked 'For Polish Victims' Relief Fund.'"

German Police Chief for Warsaw.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (via London.)—Chief of Police Glasenapp of Cologne, Prussia, today was appointed to the head of the Police Department in the conquered city of Warsaw.

RUSSIAN GOODS TO COME IN.

Agreement Almost Complete for Lifting the War Embargo.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Arranging final details to lift the Russian embargo on exports to the United States, a conference here today completed a tentative scheme for handling the traffic, representatives of the Russian Embassy and the State and Commerce departments participating. The plan will be cabled to the Russian Minister of Finance for indorsement. Under proposals made by the United States and accepted in principal by Russia, all Russian exports to this country will be consigned to the Secretary of Commerce and delivered by him to local consumers under guarantee that none of the goods will reach Russia's enemies by reexportation.

The agreement provides that importers shall deposit a bond with the Secretary of Commerce covering all goods to be imported from Russia. It will be held by the Secretary of Commerce pending satisfactory evidence of the final consumption of the goods in this country or until the end of the European war.

Imports to be liberated by the lifting of the embargo include hides, furs, vetch seed, mineral oil and numerous other products.

MUST EXPLAIN OIL SEIZURES.

United States Will Ask Germany Why Tankers Were Captured.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A telegram from the Standard Oil Company in New York embraces all the information that has come to the State Department concerning the seizure of the American oil steamers Llama and Wico, bound from American ports for Stockholm, Sweden. The company received its information from the Danish Petroleum Company at Copenhagen, through the Standard Oil Company's London attorneys. The Standard Oil Company asked the State Department to make representations for the release of the vessels and to obtain permission to repair the Wico, which had been injured in grounding after she had been taken in charge by the Germans.

The reason for the seizures is not known. The ships were bound from neutral ports to another neutral port, and apparently were immune from capture or detention. Both ships were detained at Kirkwall, England, on suspicion that their cargoes, while consigned to a Swedish port, were in reality intended for Germany, but were released after it had been shown that the suspicion was unfounded. One explanation suggested for the seizures by the Germans is that the German Government suspects that Russia was the ultimate destination for the oil they carried. An explanation will be sought by the United States.

The army of General von Bülow is pushing eastward from Poniewesch (1) with the objective of Dvinsk, (Dunaberg on the map.) Further south the German advance has reached the first-class fortress of Kovno (2) and the attack on the fortress has begun. Ossowetz, lying between Grodno and Lomza, is also being attacked.

DEAD MEN'S DIARIES LAUD TURKISH FOES

Pathetic Entries in Notebooks of British Soldiers Who Fell and Were Buried by Moslems.

TELL OF STIFF FIGHTING

One Writer Thought He Bore a Charmed Life, but Finally Was Slain—Showed Mental Strain.

GALLIPOLI PENINSULA, June 19, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Many dead British soldiers have been buried by the Turks—usually after a trench has been taken. Before the body is disposed it is searched for letters or some other means of identification. In the course of this many interesting documents, among them diaries of fallen officers and men, have been found. A number of these were placed at the disposal of The Associated Press correspondent with permission to copy such parts he might care to make use of.

A dozen of the diaries were read. Parts of them are given here. Life in the trenches is pictured as one long round of "fatigue and squadding" and keeping back the Turks, whom nearly all had come to respect and fear.

The diary of Private R. Charlesworth, Eighth Manchester Regiment, 32 years old, is somewhat typical of those kept by men of his station. There is a quaint charm in his simple description of the trip to Egypt and the installing of the regiment in Mustapha Pasha camp, Alexandria. The insects there were a plague, his diary says, and the men were glad when they were transferred to Polymedia camp, in the island of Cyprus.

Then came references to long route marches and much drill. Later the regiment was sent to Cairo. More marches followed. Many men fell out and often officers with humane inclinations would help some poor enlisted youngster by carrying his rifle for him.

The regiment was picked for service in the Dardanelles. It was embarked on the steamer Ionian of Glasgow.

For about a month Private Charlesworth fought at Sedd-el-Bahr, life being a series of alternate shifts of "work and rests." Then comes the last entry:

On the 26th (May) we finished the trench. On the 27th we moved to the second line of trenches.

"A march past for Sir Ian Hamilton" in Egypt appears to have been the most important event to another, whose other entries, made in a calendar, consist entirely of "on" and "off" duty and similar routine remarks.

The diary of another contains the owner's will on the inside page of the cover. It reads:

My will:
Everything I possess to go to my father.
WILFRED HAYES,
6th Batt., Manchester Regiment.

The entries are extremely matter-of-fact.

May 15th. Turks advance.
May 16th. One of our officers shot dead.
May 21st. Nothing doing all day.
May 27th. Not a minute's sleep for three days and three nights.
May 28th. We were obliged to remove to our reserve trench.
May 29th. During the afternoon the 8th B., M. R., (8th Battalion, Manchester Regiment,) were digging in a trench, which they had advanced to during the night, when they were surprised by the Turks, who retired, leaving rifles and equipment behind. The artillery and infantry peppered them. The Eighth Essex were to take back the trench, and the Sixth, who were in the reserve trenches, resting after two nights of advancing and trench digging, had to go and support them. The 8th lost heavily, although the 6th had few casualties. The 8th got the order to advance with fixed bayonets, but funked it, so we 6th would not let them stay in the trench, and pushed them over the parapet. Hand to hand a wounded man crawled into our trench and said that a Sergeant and four men were the only survivors in a trench. Reinforcements were sent.
May 30th. We are still in the trenches and are getting very worn and tired.
May 31st. Turks attacking. Eighth unable to hold their own; one of our platoons to aid. The 8th begin to retire, but the Sergeant in charge of the 6th will not allow them to retire.

Then comes the penultimate entry. It reads:

June 3.—Cousin Richard killed—only me left out of the three of us.

And then the last:

Private William Sykes of the Eighth Battalion, Manchester Regiment, who enlisted as No. 2029, at the age of 17 years and 5 months, had nothing but his letters on his person when found. Most of them were written by his mother, a gentle middle-aged woman, according to her photograph, which the boy carried with him. The letters are addressed as No. 2029. "Our dear son Will." There is a photograph that shows Will among his five sisters and there is another taken when he enlisted, showing Will as a chubby youngster with a wondering, innocent stare in his large eyes. He is clothed in a very smart uniform that is a trifle too large. One can almost sense his endeavor to fill it.

The most remarkable document in the lot is that of a Captain J. L. Lynch, regiment unknown. There is some doubt as to the second initial, which may be intended for an "I" or "J."

His diary is well kept, gives the most minute details, and mirrors a mind constantly under great strain. There are in it many allusions to himself as a "lucky man" or a man with a "charmed life."

The Captain left Rugby on March 17 for Alexandria. The French he met en route he refers to as "those funny little Frenchmen." His stay in Egypt is given in the diary in bleak notes void of interest. On April 21 his ship arrived in Saros Bay. On the same day the Turks fired on the British transport Manita, with the result that about seventy soldiers jumped overboard, of which number sixty were drowned, according to the entry in Captain Lynch's diary.

Of the many entries a few will be given here in the exact words of Captain Lynch:

Sunday, April 25.—I was the sole survivor out of a company of eighty-five rank and file, the majority of whom were killed outright. In the morning, just before we retired, I bandaged a Sergeant of the R. M. L. I., whose brains were hanging out of the back of his head. A sniper suddenly fired a couple of shots, wounding again some of the wounded. I took a little time to locate the devil, and fired a shot, bringing him down a hill 200 feet above. I took the belt from his rifle and put it in my pocket for a keepsake. I was very much surprised to find him to be a German. I gave him a fine death, about six or seven bayonet thrusts just to finish him off. I didn't try to kill him, (sic.)

On May 15 Captain Lynch speaks of a deserter who had been caught and, as he thinks, will be sentenced to death. Four others, he says, have already been sentenced to death, but sentence had been commuted to ten years' penal servitude. Of the four, one was a sergeant-corporal and three were privates, belonging to the Munster Fusiliers and the Worcester Regiment. There is little sleep to be had, and the Turks give no quarter, says the entry, nor do they permit the care of the wounded and killed, because the German officers are against this. Captain Lynch writes of his own trench as being filled with dead men and accoutrements.

May 19.—Turks showed great pluck. We like the way the Turks come up to us in great bundles as the Germans. They fall like ninepins. You can't help hitting the brutes; they simply walk into our bullets.

Saturday, May 22.—Had a very narrow escape. Was unbuttoning my greatcoat. I bent my head to see what had happened, when a bullet hit me a bang on the topknot. Had I not bent my napper I would have been buried by now. My luck must have been in. The bullet was like a ton of bricks falling on top of me. Fighting at its worst at present. The firing is awful.

Tuesday, May 24.—The Manchester Brigade has been split up and sent to different units for discipline, some of them giving us great laughs. Of course, they are only Terriers, [Territorials.]

Saturday, May 29.—Turkish shells are dropping terribly near. Four fragments of German, French, English, and Turkish made shells. They are splendidly equipped as regards fire-arms and ammunition.

Tuesday, June 2.—Digging communication trenches all day long, wishing we were in firing line. Getting messed about something awful. Some strong chemicals have been put in the water to discourage men in drinking it. Wrote Addie another letter.

The last entry reads:

Wednesday, June 3.—Called out last night to go to base, but the order was very soon canceled. We are not sorry to go to our beds.

Captain Lynch must have mistaken some of the blond Turks, with Georgian and Circassian ancestry, for Germans. An inspection by The Associated Press correspondent of the Sed-el-Bahr Turkish trenches and camps has established that today there are not more than a score of Germans at the front and that up to May 4 none at all were active there.

MEN FROM THE FRONT FIND PARIS CHANGED

PARIS, July 25, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The reservist home for the first time after a year at the front realizes less the change in himself than the transformation of Paris. He has acquired his new color gradually and has built up his hitherto unknown muscles almost imperceptibly. The blasé Parisian, who left for the front soft and pallid, with stooping shoulder and spiritless eye, indifferently interested in life, comes back not only strengthened but brightened; his mind has been reopened to impressions. The little revolutions that have transformed Paris, gradually break upon him all at once; he is more like a tourist visiting the French capital for the first time than a man who knows, or knew, his boulevards by heart.

It is an odd spectacle to see the reservists swarming into the Gare du Nord like children full of picnic enthusiasm. They seem to discover something new everywhere; first of all it is the civilian that gets their curious attention. There is first the surprise of the man from the trenches that so many men were left at home; then there is unconcealed amusement at the gravity with which the less reassured of the non-combatants read the official communiques and calcuate the chances of being safe in Paris another Winter. The absence of motor buses, the reduced number of automobiles, and decreased facilities for transportation inspire all sorts of quips and jibes at the "civils"; as for himself, the reservist has increased his stock of resourcefulness. A year ago he would have fumed when unable to find a cab; today he trots off to the subway, satisfied and amused to think that the "civils" must be devilishly annoyed.

When he sits down on the terrace of a café he amuses himself by ordering prohibition drinks and pokes fun at the old boulevardier at his side who takes his substitute for absinthe with a grimace.

Having lost the habit of a soft bed until 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning, he has discovered a new Paris—the Paris of the early hours—that goes cityward from 7 o'clock on and is rarely seen at its best by those who find it only when submerged by the bustle of the later hours. The ordinary sewing woman comes first. A little later the smart class of milliners' models and seamstresses, the shop girls, stenographers, furnishing with the manicures and forelaides, the aristocracy of the great fur cloak and dressmaking establishments.

War has reduced numbers and leveled conditions; the procession is still charming, but with the difference. It is a long line of white and black. No crape here, for their mourning is democratic; rich bereavements alone may wear the aristocratic weeds. Those that work content themselves with black skirt and little jacket with white collarette. Strangest of all, these girls become assiduous readers of the "Journal Official"—the Congressional record of France. They look at once to the pages containing the citations in the orders of the day. Every one of them hopes there will be news of some of the boys at the front. They generally have a little flower to spare, and this an early morning reservist gets, along with one of the touching lessons of war time in Paris.

"How dark Paris is" is a common remark, not that it bothers the reservist, who has acquired something of the sight of a cat at the front, but he wonders how the "civils" can stand it. Knowing that the cafés were formerly closed at 8 o'clock, he wonders why they are not called in the old days instead of the present closing hour of 10:30. "That," the "civil" tells him, "is something in the nature of 'acclimatation'—like life at the front." He has acquired the 8 o'clock habit and this habit has become as strong as the old 2 o'clock in the morning habit.

KRITHIA, Gallipoli Peninsula, July 21.—The correspondent of The Associated Press recently visited Weber Pasha, the German General commanding the Turkish troops operating against the Allies near Sedd-el-Bahr. The General said the situation was most favorable to the Ottoman forces. Had it not been that the allied ships literally overwhelmed the peninsula with artillery fire during the landing operations, he said, not a single British or French soldier would have set foot ashore. But for days and days the allied ships had bombarded every square yard on the southern point of the peninsula, making it impossible to move the Ottoman troops without exposing them to almost instant annihilation. But day after day the Turks dug more trenches and improved them. Then it was the allied land forces ran into a wall of Turkish pluck and endurance.

In those days Weber Pasha was in command of the Ottoman forces behind Kum Kale. Here the French tried their luck. General Weber forced them back. The operations against the Asiatic side at Kum Kale were no feint. Weber Pasha has in his possession the general order of the French landing troops. Kum Kale and its neighborhood were to be taken and held at all cost in order that the Turkish batteries in that locality might be captured. It was feared that these batteries would prove a thorn in the side of the allied troops at Sedd-el-Bahr, because they could sweep, and at present do sweep, every day, the positions on the allied right wing.

The French failed to hold Kum Kale because the Turkish batteries mowed down everything on the ground held by the French troops, and the Ottoman infantry waded in with the bayonet in a manner which not even the French, no mean performers with the bayonet themselves, could stand. So they re-embarked and went to Sedd-el-Bahr, where today they form the allied right wing and are almost daily subjected to a galling fire by the Turkish batteries they were to silence.

SAYS THE KAISER IS CHEERFUL NOW

Dr. Ganghofer Describes the Great Change Wrought in Him by Victory.

HINT OF AN EARLY PEACE

Novelist Tells of the Emperor's Prophecy Which He Cannot Yet Disclose.

An interview with "a changed Kaiser, a joyous, triumphant Kaiser," is described in the Münchener Neueste Nachrichten by Dr. Ludwig Ganghofer, the German novelist, who at an earlier stage of the war described a meeting with the Kaiser on the West front, and again in the East just before Italy's entry into the war, when the weight of adverse events was pressing heavily upon the German ruler. In the latest article, however, Ganghofer describes the War Lord triumphant as the German forces swept through Lemberg and onward into Russian Poland.

"Let me narrate, without omission, wandering back to the Lake of Janow and feeling again the glowing evening hour in which I saw that the German Kaiser had arrived," he writes. "I did not want to stay, did not wish to intrude; wanted to go away after I had seen with joy how happy and lively the Kaiser was, how healthy and fresh and full of strength he looked—no longer so serious and severe as on the 8th of May, when I was permitted to see him at the depot at Brzeskow, that time when the impression of the victorious Spring days on the Dunajec was embittered and overshadowed for him by worry about the decision of Italy. Worry? No! What then spoke so seriously and severely out of the eyes of the Kaiser was neither care nor wrath—it was the painful sorrow for an event which he saw coming and in which, in spite of all, he could not believe, because it seemed incomprehensible and impossible to him in the loyalty of his own nature.

"In those days that followed, from the 20th to the 24th of May, the question intruded itself a hundred times upon me, 'How will this heavy disappointment affect the Kaiser?' And now, when I saw the Kaiser in the wood of Janow, standing over there in the clearing, under the thunder song of the cannon, so erect, so joyous in the fateful hour, and so full of life—now I had my answer, the answer that made me happy! As the Kaiser was, so he is still! Those who are strong within do not change. Let happen what may, they do not bow, they do not stoop under their burdens. Therefore they are victors. One foe more or less does not count.

"I wanted to depart.

"'Herr Doctor,' inquired an officer, stepping up to me, 'will you not wait?'

"I shook my head. My clothes were soiled and dusty, my hands gray, my face covered with perspiration.

"'I beg of you, stay! The Kaiser has already seen you. Here he comes.'

"With a cordial smile the Kaiser extended his hand to me:

"'Ganghofer! Are you everywhere?'

"I reported where I had come from, and the Kaiser made me happy by saying:

"'The news has just come in that the Russians have been driven out of the advanced point of support by the next corps.'

"'Indeed?' It came as a cry of joy from my heart. One always hears joyful news from the Kaiser! I had to tell him about myself, and the Kaiser asked how long I would remain with the army. I told him at least until Lemberg.

"'You are good,'' laughed the Kaiser gayly; and then he grew serious: 'You are right; energetically to wish for something which is necessary helps to attain it.'

"And when he heard that since early morning I had been on my legs, he asked immediately: 'Have you eaten your midday meal anywhere?' I shook my head.

"'For Heaven's sake! Then you must have something at once!'

"He ordered a cup of tea brought to me and two big slices of cake; thrust one hand into a tin box that stood on the table, and stuffed my coat pocket with swieback. And while he was speaking with me I had to nibble all the time, for he kept urging me: 'Eat, please eat!'

"In reporting to him about my travels on the front in the last few weeks I told him also that I had met Sven Hedin in Przemysl. The Kaiser's eyes lighted at the mention of the name, and he said quickly: 'I am very glad that you made his acquaintance. This Swede is a splendid man. If you see him again, pray greet him cordially for me.'

"Then followed a few moments in which an embarrassing fear seemed to choke me. High above us a whirring sound made itself heard in the air, ever louder and louder. A Russian aviator! He came from the east, glowed in the red evening sun like a lightning bug, and flew over the clearing almost perpendicularly above us. Surely he must see the many persons down here! And it he—no, it could not think out this harrowing thought! And now the fear has already passed. Behind the rapidly vanishing gadfly of war a little cloud of shrapnel puffed up. The Kaiser stood there calmly looking up and said:

"'Too low.'

"The next shots also fell short of the flyer. The Kaiser nodded meditatively.

"'Ay, to have wings—for the others that always means to come too late.'

"He turned suddenly toward me, looked at me, and again in his eyes there was that sorrowing earnestness like that at the depot of Brzeskow on May 8. And when he spoke his voice had a subdued ring, although he emphasized each syllable severely and slowly:

"'Ganghofer, what do you think about Italy?'

"Could I but portray the tone of these words! That was no query that demanded an answer from me; it was a painful recollection of the Kaiser, a confession of his inmost thought, a renewed amazement at the impossible that could not happen, but had nevertheless happened. In Brzeskow the Kaiser had the firm belief: 'Even if a part of the Italian people may be led astray by the war jingoes, we can depend upon the King!' And now the glance of the Kaiser, in this half murmured query, so shook me that my eyes almost grew moist, and that silently I gritted my teeth. Only after a pause could I say:

"'Your Majesty, it is better as it has come to pass. Better for Austria and for us. The clean table is always the most valuable piece of furniture in the honest house.'

"The Kaiser nodded. He breathed deep, straightening up; and again joyous calm shone in his eyes.

"And then, in farewell, the Kaiser told me something that fell like a brilliant prophesy into my joyous, startled soul. Today I must still keep silent about this something, although I know that it would be a refreshing draught for millions in the homeland, a deep well-spring of faith, a new steel band for holding them together. But for important reasons I may tell about this word of the Kaiser only on the day when it shall have become truth. That day will come soon.

"The evening began to draw in. Under the restless grumbling and rolling echoes the Kaiser went from battery to battery. The trip home became for me a dreaming joy, a foreshadowing fraught with rich pictures.

"On the folowing night, at Jarosiav, about the first hour of morning, the Commanding General von Mackensen sent word to me:

"'Depart as early as possible! The Russian position at the Lake of Janow has been captured. Tomorrow Lemberg will fall.'"

Shrapnel Dropped Italian Dirigible.

BERLIN, Aug. 7, (via London.)—An official statement given out today by the German Government says: "At midnight of Aug. 6 the Italian airship Citta da Josi, while endeavoring to approach Pola, was brought down by shrapnel before it could do any damage. All the crew, consisting of three naval officers, one mechanic, and two men, were taken prisoners. The airship was taken into Pola." Italy has officially admitted the loss of a dirigible near Pola.

FRANCE AIDS THE PRESS.

Republic Will Take Duty Off Print Paper During the War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—The newspapers here are jubilant over the announcement that the import taxes on print paper will be removed during the war. Paper had reached a price which was making the issue of newspapers impossible.

Other commodities are also greatly increased in price, including woolen goods, owing to the destruction of the Roubaix and Lille mills. Arrangements are now being made by the Lyons silk weavers to convert their looms to work on wool.

Flannel, which Rheims supplied at 22 cents a yard, is now being imported from Holland at 55 cents. Serge has jumped from 40 cents to $1 a yard.

Cloth in general has increased 50 per cent. Zinc has increased 800 per cent, and is now used exclusively for galvanizing barbed wire.

Shoes are 30 per cent dearer, and enamel kitchen ware 20. Owing to hospital demands it is impossible to buy iron beds.

MUST SHOW NATIONAL FLAG.

Norway Issues Rules Governing Colors of Visiting Shipping.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The State Department has been notified by the Norwegian Legation that the Norwegian Ministry of Defense has issued the following rules applying to the display of national flags by merchant vessels:

"Every vessel must fly its national flag while within the limits of a Norwegian military port.

"When entering a military port a vessel must hoist her flag

FINALLY CAME TOO NEAR

And He Was Forced to Leave a Tower Whence He Saw Fierce French Attack.

AFTERMATH OF WOUNDED

One Emergency Hospital Established in a Church, with Desperate Operations Performed Before Altar.

From a Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, July 17.—While there was, of course, no spice of illicit adventure about my last "trip to the front," since I was going under the personal authorization [deleted by the censor] of the Great General Staff and with the consent of three other Generals—Major [deleted by the censor] (the Press Division) having performed the latter-day miracle of rounding up the indispensable sequence of a commander in chief of an army, corps commander and division General who were willing to harbor an American correspondent "for one day only"; and, although I was not to have the thrill of hunting for a battle—both sides agreeing that there was one on between Arras and La Bassée—nor even any use for a brand-new pair of spurs purchased at considerable expense and over which I had consistently stumbled from Berlin to Frankfort, thence via Metz, to the town of X, where they were mercifully removed, still it was worth traveling nearly 1,000 miles for a one-day stand at the front, if only for the rare chance of personally checking up the German and Joffre official reports about what was doing on June 22, and awarding the palm for naïve mendacity accordingly.

I was not sorry to motor away at dawn from this [deleted by the censor] along tree-lined chaussées (noting only that the Germans were keeping these favorite motor roads of American millionaires in the pink of condition;) through anonymous villages, past waving acres of wheat and broad fields wherein early birds in the form of bearded Landsturm men were making hay before the sun shone. The Germans have been as thorough in cultivating this rich slice of France as in digging trenches and holding them. I gathered the impression that France was going to feed a large part of the German army of occupation.

We sped through St. Quentin, which seems none the worse for the wear of war, and on with the delightful knowledge that there are no longer any speed traps. We begin to get "warm" when a sign is passed reading "To Arras, 18 kilometers," but leave the Arras road while the going is still good, and finally pull up in an exceedingly dirty little French village named X. (by the censor) before a mean cottage occupied by the Division General and his staff, where we accumulate two staff officers and considerable information.

A Bavarian Prince, I learn, is to join us here for a visit to the firing line. He is, however, already a quarter of an hour late. Here I get my first taste of the delightful democracy of the fighting front.

"He doesn't seem to possess the punctuality one expects of Princes," says a young staff officer, Captain L. [deleted by the censor.] I inquire who Prince Luitpold is, anyway, but get no advance information.

"I'm sure I don't know," says another staff officer. "There are so many Princes floating around. Nevertheless, when Luitpold, Crown Prince in Bavaria and brother-in-law of King Albert of Belgium, finally turned up, he made an instant hit with staff officers and staff correspondent because of his very unassuming, almost shy, disposition. This young 'königliche Hoheit' wore the field-gray uniform of a Uhlan regiment and had all the earmarks of being a fine fellow. It continually comes to you as a shock out here how little titles count, how much the man, in this democracy of death.

A short motor spin brought us to D., the "city of endless thunderstorm." We heard the distant rolling thunder of heavy artillery, and I was told that there had been few hours of the day or night in the last six weeks when one of these artificial thunderstorms did not show up on some part of the not distant front. Sometimes, though, the thunder bolts fall right into D., for it is a favorite resort for French raiders who misguidedly think there is something worth hitting there. The coming of French flyers was as regularly expected as daily bread, I learned, the French inhabitants having been the only sufferers so far. Curiously enough, the French had not succeeded in hitting a church or even a hospital flying the Red Cross flag, while here, I believe, the odds of collo than bombs in D. The Germans have the right idea—that you can't win a war with paper charges of barbarism. I have still to hear an atrocity story from the men at the fighting front.

From D. our itinerary becomes algebraic, because the military censor [deleted by the censor] has been trained to pass names of places within the German lines if I don't tell what I see in and near them; or he will pass what I see if I don't mention names; and of the two the latter is the more profitable alternative.

At X., on a street corner, two splendid, red-striped, field-gray-trousered Generals were waiting to receive the Prince and correspondent. They had fought so long together that, even as is said of the long wedded, they had come to resemble each other. Both looked, at first blush, like very gentle souls, and I dare say they were—in peace times. They had refined, finely chiseled, almost delicate features, with small, closely cropped war mustaches and war-barbered hair—snow white the one, iron gray the other. But both had eyes of tempered steel, sharp as a hawk's, and with a far-away look. They kept always looking toward the cannon thunder. And both had been, drawn, and faces that mirrored the strain they had been and still were under; an occasional ghost of a smile intensified the grimness of their determined mouths. Their nerves seemed about as tightly drawn as human nerves can be strung; they seemed constantly on edge, expecting something to break; and as they talked with me it was obvious that they were thinking of something far more important. Both were very quiet.

They were General N., commander of the "Iron Corps," Joffre's evil genius—for he with one corps had checked Joffre's Winter offensive in Champagne, as the blue Pour le Merite at his throat confirmed, and now he had turned the trick again; and Lieut. Gen. N., who with his devoted division had seen more and harder fighting from the very start than any other in the army, I was told. Both had to be coaxed hard to talk about themselves.

The Record of the "Iron Corps."

"I always seem to turn up just before trouble starts," General N. said with paradoxically cheerful grimness. He and his "shock absorber" division had turned up in Champagne just in time for Joffre's Winter offensive; he had arrived opportunely for the fighting at Hartmannsweilerkopf in Alsace, that ended with its capture; he had got into the glorious scrimmage between the Meuse and the Moselle, where Joffre again failed to make first down; he had fought against the English at Langemarck; and the very day after he arrived here, hell and Joffre broke loose with the battle for Lille. These were his principal engagements since the first of the year, which didn't seem at all a bad record. He and his division had been continuously in the heart of the hardest fighting since May 9 until two days ago, when the division was pulled back into reserve for a well earned rest. That was the reason why General N. had time to guide us personally to the fighting lines and explain the still raging battle.

I saw many of the men of this "resting division"—some mowing hay in the fields, other enjoying the novelty of a leisurely toilet; still others—cavalrymen—renewing acquaintanceship with the horses they had not seen for seven weeks. None of them looked as if they had had continuously close shaves with dodging death in those seven weeks of desperate fighting. It certainly had not cracked their morale, which was all there yet. Here, too, we witnessed an interesting ceremony—a troop of mounted Jägers bidding good-bye to their colors before putting them into cold storage and starting for the trenches on foot. They went through it smartly as if they were at home on parade, only the flag was neatly rolled up and covered with a black rainproof "overcoat." It reminded me that I had never yet seen troops advancing at either front with flying colors. There seems to be a silent conspiracy to rob war of its old oil-painting picturesqueness and reduce it to a business conducted along strictly common sense lines.

General R. excused himself on the plea of work and repaired to his desk. The rest of the party advanced, not in the close formation of which, according to "eyewitnesses" on the other side, the Germans are so passionately fond, but in a wide-open, "safety first," skirmish line of six motor cars at hundred-yard intervals. There is nothing that takes the joy out of joyriding so effectively, next to a taximeter, as shells promiscuously dropping around the pretty countryside—particularly in this flat country, where you can look around for miles. There is not even comfort in watching them drop several miles ahead or to the right and left, when you are speeding that way at thirty or forty miles an hour. Particularly when you see houses in villages going up in brick dust—villages which staff officers cheerfully point out as those through which you have to pass to get to the ultimate front. With native Teuton tactlessness my motoring partner would every once and a while point to yawning holes in the fields beside the road and tell me what calibre projectile had made them—holes big enough to bury a horse in, or a half-dozen NEW YORK TIMES correspondents of assorted sizes and shapes. All this to prove to me that we were well within the range of the French heavy artillery, (sometimes with a sly animadversion on American ammunition, particularly its excellent explosive qualities.)

The Procession of Wounded.

There was undoubtedly much worth noting on this first lap of the road to Souchez. But the susceptible neutral correspondent who lost his enthusiasm for shell fire months ago is devoting more attention to his brandy bottle than his notebook, in preparation for more to come. I knew we were "getting warm" when we began to pass a procession of wounded, straggling rearward along the road, afoot, by motor car, and in horse-drawn conveyances. This was a rather closer approximation to the oil paintings as you see them in the Metropolitan Art Gallery, except for the uniforms. You had to be something of an expert, too, to tell the French from the Germans, for gray-blue and field-gray were almost indistinguishably dirty. The pedestrians mostly had bandaged heads or arms in slings. You noted the curious comradeship of the casualty list; for two wounded French prisoners helped support a more painfully injured German soldier, and German soldiers were performing the same good offices for limping Frenchmen. Motor cars and wagons were mostly occupied by French prisoners. French and Germans—the seriously wounded—were indiscriminately piled into the motor ambulances. Hundreds of wounded and prisoners, strung out for miles! And we were passing only part of the night's and morning's casualty list—the living part.

We were later to see another part—the dead, those who were about to die, and those whom the surgeons still had hopes of pulling through. The fact that there was not transportation for all—for the slightly wounded Germans and the many French prisoners—indicated heavy fighting ahead. I asked General N. where the prisoners came from, and he said they (the Germans) had made an attack in the course of the night, which had lasted well into the morning hours, leaving me to infer that these were part of the "bag." Two days later I read with real interest the German and French official reports of June 23, covering the events of June 22.

The German General Staff reported: "South of Souchez we made good progress in the trench war."

Joffre's midday report read: "In the region of Arras the enemy, after artillery fire of great intensity, attacked at several points. He was everywhere completely repulsed except in the southeast, where he succeeded again in getting a footing in one piece of trench." And in the evening bulletin Joffre reported: "In the region north of Arras, the German counter-attacks ended toward morning."

You pay your money and take your choice.

"At Your Own Risk, Gentlemen."

There is one infallible method of telling where that elastic term the "front," that covers a multitude of journalistic "stories," really is, and the exact moment when you get there. When you are invited to abandon the comfortably cushioned tonneau of your military touring car—when, in short, you are predicted to get out and walk—when you do walk, and, finally, when a German General, or whatever the ranking officer of the party happens to be, draws himself up to his full height, looks as solemn as an owl or a college President giving moral advice to the freshmen on the first Sunday after matriculation, and says earnestly, "Gentlemen, if there is an American correspondent on hand, ("Königliche Hoheit" if the Prince is around,) "I cannot assume responsibility for your safety beyond this point. If you want to go on you must do so at your own risk." Always an anxious moment, requiring the first aid of the clandestine brandy bottle, before you plead to be allowed to go onward, which in the present case meant upward, for this uneasy little ceremonial took place in the shadow of a towerlike edifice which the General showed every intention of letting me climb if I gave the high sign. An English-speaking staff officer said it was 210 feet high, and I had no reason afterward to doubt his information. [Deleted by the censor.]

"But we can't all go up," General N. said anxiously, looking at the miscellaneous assemblage gathered in the shadow of the edifice and composed of six black-leather-jacketed military chauffeurs; six "ordonnances" to match, whose present function in life was to blow brass military horns ("Tahtee—taah-taah," phonetically spelled) to warn other travelers to clear the road for a General; the Surgeon General of the Army Corps operating here; an officer from the Crown Prince of Bavaria's staff; an officer of the Great General Staff; [deleted by the censor] two division staff officers; Prince Luitpold, Duke in Bavaria, and THE TIMES correspondent.

"We can't all go up," General N. repeated anxiously and puzzled. He was thinking not so much of us as of the tower-like edifice. He amplified this thought presently.

"If too many of us move about up there, they may see us," he explained, motioning toward the hills ahead, where Argus-eyed artillery observers of the enemy were, he intimated, watching for military faults from atop of high places." [Deleted by the censor.] "We must take turns and go up in small groups."

I had become of a retiring disposition, and graciously offered my chance to anybody who cared to take it, but the General cut off my strategic remark. I was booked for the pioneer group. By a process of elimination the storming party finally simmered down to General, Prince, and correspondent, and in that order we negotiated the exhausting 210-foot climb. The towerlike edifice was as full of holes as a Swiss cheese. The French had repeatedly shot it up with shrapnel, the General explained. [Deleted by the censor.]

The General was, however, far more reassuring than the view through these artificial peep-holes, particularly the higher you got. The old General was just as agilely at home here as if he had clambered around inside, say, church steeples, all his life. The young Bavarian Prince, too, didn't seem to mind a bit the prospect that the French might take it into their heads to send over another shower of shrapnel or pump a few shells into the tower. At intervals of terrific bangs, at intervals of a few seconds, that made the interior of the edifice re-echo and the whole structure fairly quiver, caused the rearguard to refuse to mount another step, until the General kindly explained to me that the tower had not been struck, that the commotion was caused by the fire of heavy German mortar batteries. [Deleted by the censor.]

Before reaching the top of the tower we passed artillery officers, [deleted by the censor;] the Lieutenants with their eyes glued to field glasses, but peering very judiciously through a gap in the masonry without exposing themselves; a subaltern, with the inevitable telephone instrument in hand. [Deleted by the censor.] The officers stopped observing long enough to salute us stiffly, the ranking officer rattling off a report as to who they were and what they were doing there. General N. asked half a dozen quick, very professional, and hence (to the correspondent) puzzling, questions about the fire of the heavy mortars, which he did not explain. Apparently each gun had its own name, however, and that a Greek letter, for identification purposes, for I recall hearing him ask, "How's the Gamma mortar firing?" My own impression, formed a few minutes later from the vantage ground of the top of the tower, was that all German guns were hurling 21-centimeter shells to the south of Souchez, and Joffre's evening report, which I read a few days later, rather confirmed this, the Generalissimo reporting: "In the region of Arras in the course of the day there occurred only an extraordinarily lively artillery fight between Souchez and Ecurie."

Prince, General, and TIMES correspondent lined up on a rough pine board bench that had been hauled to the top of the edifice by the Germans, and for an hour watched and listened to what was left of the battle for Lille, their noses on a level with the parapet and close enough to the battle to make field glasses unnecessary except for the finer details of the picture. You felt like a fan on the bleachers, except that you weren't allowed to get excited and jump up or stretch yourself in the lucky seventh. Still life was the order up there.

Following the Fight on a Map.

First the General spread out a large staff map on our several knees. A blue water-color streak ran across the map, indicating the French lines, and back of the line were marked Roman numerals indicating the various French army corps the Germans thought they were fighting, with Arabic numerals for divisions. There was also with initials instead of a number—the famous Moroccan Division. Further up the line were indicated the British formations thought to be opposed to the Crown Prince of Bavaria's army, and among those immediately adjoining the French on their left I remember a London Rifle Brigade and the Coldstream Guards.

Then the General turned toward the most conspicuous feature in the landscape, the sharp naked shoulder of the Lorette Heights. It took field glasses to see what had once been the chapel of Notre Dame de Lorette and is [deleted by the censor] the gray remnants of the Souchez sugar factory—two spots where more blood was spilled, where death and glory assayed higher to the square inch, than probably anywhere else on any front. The barren slope of Lorette was streaked with abandoned trenches; the present German trenches could be made out at the base, the French trenches at the crest were indicated by the fact that German shells were breaking there. He pointed out where in front of Lorette lay the famous "Schlammulde," or slime-hole—one of the most dangerous assignments a German soldier can draw at present. He pointed out the deep-lying village of Souchez, [deleted by the censor] the hamlet of G., held by the Germans, the village of M., but still held by the Germans, and the hilly ground beyond, [deleted by the censor,] along the crest of which I gathered the Germans were making a stonewall stand.

There certainly was a lively artillery fight on, just as Joffre afterward wrote. No matter where you looked, you saw shells splashing, smoke rising. You saw them dropping, sometimes singly, sometimes in bunches. Patches of woods where German batteries were suspected to be in hiding were favorite targets of concentrated fire. Flamlets like villages or dirty gray-brown surf breaking against the crest as shells followed, wave after wave. There was a half mile of surf that I could see, and probably several miles more of it that I could not see, for the line was soon lost beyond the more densely wooded slopes. In spots the shells followed each other in such quick succession that the smoke of the first had not begun to blow away before the next one arrived.

Shell Fire Becomes Too Hot.

The tower of smoke mounted higher and higher—till the concentrated fire was suddenly switched to some other spot. It must have been most unpleasant to be in those trenches, you thought. And the General thought so, too, for as he watched that deadly surf breaking against the German lines he remarked that that was heavy fire, and that it took nerve to hold out under it. And all the while the many German batteries that we could see from my watch tower were working overtime; batteries before and behind us, to right and left, from horizon to horizon. This was "drum-fire!" Curiously enough, there was not a single aeroplane aloft, either French or German. But four German captive balloons hung low in the sky. A fascinating spectacle—that one could have watched for hours, if the General hadn't suddenly said he thought we had better climb down. His more practiced eye had discovered that French shells were beginning to "feel" for a German battery. [Deleted by the censor.] As a matter of fact, they did even better, which accelerated my departure. The super-spectacle had suddenly lost its fascination. A last automatic sweep of the fire-swept panorama; a last look at Lorette to fix it forever in mind.

Once down and out, the General slyly offered us the choice of advancing to the trenches or retreating to luncheon. I voted unanimously for luncheon, as the ill-concealed amusement of the younger staff officers. As there was still an hour to kill, however, we roamed up and down the division front. We reviewed a reserve battalion going into action, the men singing as usual and taking their dinner with them, for each company had a steaming field kitchen in its wake. A wave of the General's hand excused them from the formal goosestep. They were husky Bavarians, and looked like tough customers in a hand-to-hand fight.

In a deep-trenched village, deep in the fire zone, we came upon a little German band—a baker's dozen of field-gray figures blowing tarnished brass. There was a reason for this open-air concert. They stood on the street corner, in front of a small red brick church. Sunning itself outside the church lay and lounged a company awaiting the order to move on to the trenches; from which a steady stream of slightly wounded were returning and entering a cellar, for this was the first "Hauptsammelstelle," or main collection place for the slightly wounded. Going or coming, the German fighters were being subjected to the inspiriting treatment of the little German band, for the Germans rightly estimate the moral value of music—particularly of stirring patriotic tunes, whose magical effect was noticeable on the wounded, and was not lost on the sound soldiers.

In this church services are conducted every hour of the day and night by relays of chaplains. The pews had all been removed, the centre aisle marked off on both sides by boards, all the remaining space covered with thick straw, on which the wounded were laid out in rows to rest until they were able to stand transportation to the rear under their own power. Nearly all those in this collection place had been struck by shell splinters. In the few minutes that I was able to remain in the church, two slightly wounded came walking in. A sergeant promptly filled out a blank form card with all the data about them, and then they were marched up to the altar, where they bared their breasts and were at once injected with anti-tetanus serum, of which a large stock, enough for thousands of doses, was piled up on a little kitchen table in front of the altar. The altar made an excellent "drug store." Here, in front of the golden crucifix, were lined up the most frequently used drug bottles, among which I noted one marked "tincture of valerian." The injection against lockjaw over, the emergency bandages applied in the trenches were looked over, and in these two cases found to be quite satisfactory. The wounds being comparatively slight, the men were soon able to start on foot for the railroad station, a few miles away, to catch a military train in the direction of home.

The surgeon in charge of the church told me that this was a comparatively quiet day; that when the French charges were at their height and the artillery fire heaviest, they had once had as many as 1,800 cases. [Deleted by the censor.]

A Primitive Operating Room.

The desperate character of the fighting here was indicated by the number of hospitals per square mile. We visited a first collection place for seriously wounded in the ground floor of a factory building. Here were more than a hundred cots made of boards hastily knocked together—every wooden cot taken by French and Germans—on which lay the terribly mangled and the dying, all under the influence of merciful opiates. There was a veritable rush on the primitive operating room which had been a lavatory in peace time. The corps specialist—a Geheimrat Professor—was performing a laparotomy as I looked in—sewing up seven holes drilled through the small intestine by shell splinters—and apparently losing no time about it; for on a stretcher on the cement floor at the foot of the operating table lay another victim awaiting his turn for the same operation, while out in the hall were several stretchers full of serious cases.

We reached a small field hospital just as it was in the throes of packing up and moving; for these hospitals are subject to change at short notice. Surgeons and patients all regretted leaving their happy home in this handsome chateau surrounded by parklike grounds, but the hospital was more badly needed at another point of the corps front. In less than two hours after the order came, the wounded had all been sorted out, and those who could walk were lined up in a squad on the front lawn, awaiting the order to march, the others being loaded into ambulances. Other wagons were being packed with the knocked-down cots, the bedding, drugs, and surgical supplies. It was a revelation as to what could be done in the moving line even to one who had dwelt in Harlem flats.

On the way back to corps headquarters we looked in at a little wayside station of a one-track railroad which was in working order right up to the front. A score of soldiers, all wounded in the fighting of the night and early morning, sat patiently waiting for the next military train to take them back to the base where they could make connections for home. It was pathetic to watch these poor fellows struggle to their feet and try and stand very stiff and salute the moment they caught sight of the red stripes on the General's trousers. He motioned them to omit the salute and questioned different men as to how, where, and when they had been wounded.

Here one noticed the striking contrast between the stolidity of the Rhinelanders and the temperamental Bavarians. Thus, a Rhinelander, in most matter-of-fact tones, answered that he had lost three toes, and added, philosophically, "But one doesn't need toes to fight." He thought he'd be all right again in a week and back in line; at least, the surgeon had told him so. A chunky little Bavarian, with some of the madness of battle still in his feverish eyes, simply refused to talk to his General sitting down, though he certainly deserved a rest, for his right foot was bandaged, his left arm in a sling, and he had a rag around his head. The General would push him gently back into his seat, but as often he would jump up again and try and salute with his free hand. He was still quivering with excitement and could tell only a very broken story. "Our battalion charged. * * * French fire too hot. * * * Our company had to fall back. * * * Tried again. * * * Got only half way to French trenches. * * * Reserves came up and swept us along with them. * * * I don't know what happened after that, because I dropped shortly afterward."

Soldier's Tribute to Our Shells.

Typical was the answer of an intelligent-looking Rhinelander with an injured arm, when asked what the trouble was.

"Amerikanische Granate," (American shell,) he replied.

Surgeon General B. asked him how they knew when a shell was of American manufacture. "Oh, we know all right," he said, smiling. I gathered from his explanation that the proof was in the exploding; that particularly destructive shells that always went off were American, and that conversely, if there were many "Blindgänger," or duds—shells that failed to explode, why, then they were French ammunition or English.

NET CATCHES NORSE BARK.

British Trap for Submarines Encountered Near Liverpool.

A Norwegian report of the existence of British nets for the capture of German submarine raiders is given in a Christiania dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung of July 19. The dispatch says:

"Four men of the Norwegian bark Superior arrived in Bergen yesterday. They tell that on the trip to Liverpool with a cargo of wood they ran in the open sea upon a gigantic and powerful steel net forty miles from Liverpool, and that they were caught by the net, which passed through the fairway supported on gas bags. As soon as they ran upon the net four serial signal lights immediately flashed up. These were fixed in hollow trunks of trees.

"The ship was caught so tightly that an English cruiser which hurried up had to release it, in which act the ship damaged a piece of the net and the light-buoys. The meshes of the net were a square meter in size, and the wires themselves half a centimeter thick."

EXPLAINS NECHES NOTE.

British Chargee Says Seizure of Vessel Was Not an Act of Reprisal.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Colville Barclay, Chargé of the British Embassy, called at the State Department today to explain the recent British note on the seizure of the American ship Neches. The British note, he said, because of its brevity, did not fully present the British reasons for the action; that the ship was not taken in reprisal for violations by Germany of the rules of naval warfare, and that the rule regarding such detentions and seizures was not intended to apply to the United States alone but to all neutral nations.

State Department officials said the explanation placed the case in a different light, and would be recognized in the forthcoming reply to the London Foreign Office.

SAILINGS FOR WAR ZONE.

Cunard Liner Leaves Boston with Large Cargo of Foodstuffs.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—The steamer Largo, under charter to the Cunard Line, left this port today for Liverpool with a large cargo, principally of foodstuffs.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7.—The following ships cleared from here today for the war zone:

The Johan Siem, Danish, for Copenhagen, with a cargo of grain.

The Malvern Range, British, for Liverpool, with a cargo of wheat.

The St. Andrew, Swedish, for Gothenburg, with a cargo of coal.

HONOR FOR ITALY'S KING.

Victor Emmanuel Elected a Foreign Member of French Institute.

PARIS, Aug. 7.—King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has been elected a foreign member of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres, one of the sections of the Institute of France. The King is an authority on medals and coins. His book on the subject received the Academy prize in 1914.

The French Institute now has among its members two heads of States, the King of Italy and President Poincaré of France, and one former head of a State, Theodore Roosevelt.

British Cruisers at Callao.

LIMA, Aug. 7.—The British cruisers Kent and Newcastle arrived at Callao this morning and are taking on provisions. The warships will leave this port tomorrow.

ENGLAND'S ERRORS A WARNING TO US

Her Unpreparedness for War Less Than America's, but Due to Like Causes.

FEARED A STANDING ARMY

But Her 150,000 Home Troops, at Least, Had the Drill Which Our Regulars Lack.

By ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

LONDON, July 9.—The situation in which Great Britain finds itself in this great war is so similar to that in which war would place America that a study of it is of special interest.

To be sure, the difficulties under which Great Britain is laboring are not as great as ours would be, and she has the use and protection of her extraordinary navy, which we, in like circumstances, would not have. However, the points of similarity are many and striking.

War came upon England under a Liberal Government. This Government had been in power seven years. It stood for all that is best in our Progressive and in the liberal side of our Democratic Party.

It passed a Home Rule bill for Ireland. It had brought to the front religious equality in Wales. It passed a series of measures for the subdividing of land ownerships. It stood at the very front in its enactments for the benefit of workingmen. It found means for increasing revenue by taxing those best able to pay. It was, to be sure, not free from the leaven of those who believe impracticableness and progress to be the same thing, but it was able to retain the support of this element without seriously yielding to its demands. To its managerial credit, it maintained the supremacy of the national fleet. It thought necessary, however, to neglect the army in many essential details in order to provide funds for its altruistic purposes.

Parsimony in Artillery.

Parsimony was especially shown toward the artillery arm, in the battery organization adopted, and in the guns themselves. The field pieces in use were greatly inferior to the French 75s, which could have been obtained by paying the cost of re-equipment; the field howitzers were inexact in shooting; but more damning to the makers of the budget was a lack of high power field glasses and range finders.

Parsimony, backed by aristocracy, was responsible for such small pay to officers that only men with some independent means could afford to be officers, and hence from these was required less technical skill than demanded of officers in the Continental countries.

The British Army recognizes its own weakness, and for years had preached reorganization upon the Prussian system.

The present Government must face the fact that it did not even stand neutral in this contest, but led the opposition to the reform. War found the English regular army at home only 150,000 strong. It found territorial troops, semi-recruited and semi-organized regiments which, however, could not be called into foreign war without their consent.

However, lest the casual reader pass too harsh judgment upon the Parliamentary politicians who sent to their death soldiers less trained and equipped than their enemy, let us give them credit for greater patriotism and foresight than the American Congress has ever shown.

The English Army was not divided into a number of small army posts, in order to furnish "pork" to many Congressmen as possible, but was kept in units, so battle tactics could be learned.

Opposition to a Standing Army.

With all Europe organized in comprehensive fashion, the reason for Great Britain's backwardness is to be found in the hereditary opposition to a standing army, which, incidentally, we inherited along with other English customs; in a false sense of security behind the barrier of the Channel, and in a sense of racial superiority and self-content, which will be referred to later, and, more influential than the rest, in recent years, a group which found mental and sensual pleasure, as well as financial and political profit, in preaching a propaganda of national atavism.

Shortly before the war broke out came the army crisis over Home Rule. Sir Edward Carson organized a military force to resist its enforcement. When the Government began military steps to enforce it the army balked. Field Marshal Sir John French resigned the position of Chief of Staff, other officers resigned their commissions.

The Secretary of War tried to find a middle ground between the Home Rule people and the enemy, failed, and resigned his portfolio.

The Radical party, which saw no further than the seashore, demanded the instant dismissal of the army and the "immediate" organization of a democratic force to coerce Ulster.

The Prime Minister is the keystone of the arch of the British parliamentary system. Upon him devolves the responsibility of preventing the structure from tumbling to the ground.

It must be said of Herbert Asquith that these terrible times he has held together the most antagonistic elements ever present in a Government. Following the attitude which has allowed England to exist as a democracy for centuries in a continent of autocracies, he put nation before party and retained in command of the army his personal and political enemies.

In addition to his other cares he took on the Ministry of War. A more partisan course would have destroyed his country.

Then the crash came. Nothing was further from the minds of Britishers than war. Why the country was at all prepared demands a word of explanation to Americans.

Virtue of a Strong Cabinet.

The members of the English Cabinet, even more than the American, are selected for their political strength rather than special fitness. But the members once selected, the portfolios are divided with the idea of giving to each member the work for which he is best fitted instead of giving the offices in order of their dignity to the Cabinet members or in the order of their political importance, as with us. Not the most important politician, but the politician most informed on foreign affairs, is made Minister of Foreign Affairs. That member of the Cabinet most capable of assisting the navy is made Secretary of the Navy. (I purposely use the American phrase.)

Thus, while Sir Edward Grey is a less gifted man than Mr. Bryan, he is a more efficient Minister of Foreign Affairs, and while Mr. Churchill, if tried by a hundred tests, might show less all around ability than Mr. Daniels, he, in contrast to the latter, added to instead of detracted from the work of the naval expert under him.

Also, Sir Edward Grey and Winston Churchill put the duties of their offices above politics.

When all British eyes were on the crisis in Ireland Sir Edward Grey, a politician, was watching the handsized cloud over Belgrade.

Churchill, still more a politician, but a patriot, benefiting by the domestic excitement, held the great fleet mobilized, ready for the rupture. He even had the courage and patriotism to order, without sanction of Parliament, the supplies that would be necessary for the beginning of war.

Ministers Saved the Nation.

It is not necessary to point out that in neither our foreign nor naval branch have we been so manned as to take the steps which were taken by the British Radical Ministers that saved their nation.

The first military preparations were splendid. Lord Kitchener, the most widely known British General, was made Secretary of War. Sir John French, considered the greatest British tactician, was placed in command of the active force, although he was a well-known opponent of the Government.

The army's preparedness was such that an army of 150,000 men was landed in France with more equipment per man and with less effort than had transported Funston's brigade to Vera Cruz three months before.

I dwell upon this fact now so that when the reader sees later how hopelessly inferior to Germany, Russia, France, and Austria England's land power turned out to be he may realize in some measure the desperate condition of our own unpreparedness.

Landed, the British army advanced to Belgium, was caught in the collapse of the French offensive, fought splendidly in retreat, using effectively its only superiority over the Germans—rifle shooting—turned at the Marne, and fought its way back to Ypres, where it now is.

How was it that even in face of a hostile Government this army from the outset of war has been able to do what no English or American army has ever before been able to do at the outset of war?

The answer is twofold. First, the army had been kept in large units and manoeuvred in large units. Second, the initiative of the officers had not been dulled by the persecution that exists in our army and which seems unavoidable when civilians who have never lived under military discipline receive military power over others. I refer not so much to Presidents and Secretaries of War and Navy, although none of these are guiltless, as to Chairman of Senate and House military and naval committees and to the membership of both houses.

Kitchener announced his assumption of office by two statements: That England needed an army of 1,000,000 men, and that they would take the offensive in May and not before. (His exact language was: "The war will begin in May.")

Both the numbers and the time required seemed absurdly high, and it needed all his popularity, at that time amounting almost to idolatry, to obtain the public acquiscence. How conservative they were is shown by the fact that now 2,500,000 in the number named, apart from losses, and that on July 1 the new army is not ready to make war.

REFUSES BRITISH WAR ORDER.

St. Louis Concern Won't Make Shells to Kill Men "Forced to Fight."

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7.—A large metal company here has refused an order to make ammunition for the British Army. To the British purchasing agent C. F. Blancke, President of the company, wrote:

"We are equipped to make war ammunition, but when we stop to consider that this ammunition will be used in the killing of men who through no choice of their own are forced into this war, and that our large output can be used to cause the death of thousands, we realize the condemnation that could be meted out to us by other neutral and right-thinking American citizens who are praying for the end of this bloody war. So we would not care to enter into a contract to furnish ammunition to help continue this war, no matter how profitable in a financial way such a contract would be."

PRESIDENT TO RETURN TO CAPITAL THIS WEEK

Mexican and Other Problems So Pressing That He Decides to End His Vacation.

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 7.—President Wilson has decided to return to Washington to take up the Mexican situation, diplomatic exchanges with Great Britain and Germany, and other pressing official business. Under ordinary conditions the President has found it possible to direct the activities of the departments from the "Summer White House" here, but within the last few days so many problems demanding quick action have developed that he feels he should go to Washington.

The exact date of the President's departure has not been decided on, but he probably will be back in the White House before the end of next week. He may return to Cornish later if public business permits.

Soon after his return to Washington the President will see Secretary Lansing and other officials, to discuss the next step in his Mexican policy. He will talk over with Secretary Redfield the investigation of the Eastland disaster, and will confer regarding national defense with Secretary Garrison and Secretary Daniels and Congressional leaders. He will see Attorney General Gregory regarding the investigation into the status of the seaman's law.

AMERICANS FINED IN LONDON

Two Gave New York as Birthplace Who Were Born Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Max Myer, an American giving a business address in London, was fined $25 at Gray's yesterday for stating his birthplace was New York, whereas he was born in Berlin. He told the court he was ashamed of his German origin and concealed it on landing at Tilbury.

Mollie Meyer, an American widow of Russian birth, was similarly fined for also stating she was born in New York.

GRAFT INQUIRY IN NAVY.

Enlisted Men, Seeking Promotion, Said to Have Been Held Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The Navy Department has been investigating charges made by a former petty officer in the navy that a species of graft has been going on in the Department for some time at the expense of enlisted men, who were slated for primotion to the petty officers' ratings. One of the employes of the Department has been examined, and is said to be under surveillance. Officers on duty in the Department have said that the alleged graft system was impossible.

According to the charges, the system was worked by some employe who had foreknowledge of orders of promotions and orders for the transfer of enlisted men. It was charged that when he saw by an order that an enlisted man was Master of Arms rating he would write to the man before the order was mailed and promise for a small sum to have him promoted. Men who wanted to be transferred and had made application were also notified by letter, it was alleged, that the transfer could be procured for a small sum.

Commanding officers have the right to give advanced ratings to enlisted men. Afterward the advancements are sent to the department for approval and entering on the records.

In view of this practice, officers do not understand how the alleged graft scheme could be worked successfully. But an investigation was made, and this gave color to reports that it had been in operation. It was indicated at the Navy Department that if the practice had been in operation it could not have brought any large returns.

CANAL TRAFFIC IS HELD UP.

Slide at the Gaillard Cut Reduces Depth There to Twenty Feet.

PANAMA, Aug. 7.—An earth movement at the Gaillard Cut in the Panama Canal has reduced the depth of the channel at that point to less than twenty feet. This has delayed the passage of ten vessels, including the steamer Finland, bound from New York to San Francisco with 500 passengers.

It is stated that traffic probably will be resumed Monday.

ROMANS MEET KING'S CHILDREN

Latter Help at Lottery for the Red Cross in the Gardens of the Quirinal.

MOBBED BY CROWD OF 50,000

Carabinieri Fight Way Through the People to Clear a Space for Prince and Princesses.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 12.—Probably never before in Italy have the members of the royal family had such familiar intercourse with the people as at the lottery for the benefit of the Red Cross, which ended yesterday in the garden of the Quirinal.

The fourteen-year-old Princess Yolanda conceived the project and recruited from the leading families in Rome a hundred young girls to assist her. It was entirely a youthful affair conducted by girls and boys of from 10 to 18 years of age.

The "committee of one hundred," made up of the prettiest girls in Rome, requisitioned the few automobiles not already taken by the military authorities and from the shops of tradesmen and the studios of artists and sculptors they carried off more than 50,000 donations, ranging from a stuffed parrot to a life-sized reproduction of the Venus of the Capitol.

The girls from the biggest orphanage in Rome were asked to assist and the Giovani Esploratori (Boy Scouts) and the Giovani Esploratrice, (Girl Scouts) were enlisted to sell tickets, do police duty, and form a bodyguard for Prince Umberto and his sisters Yolanda and Mafalda, whenever they came to do their share of the work. For the Prince and the two Princesses also did their stunts for an hour twice a day. The little twelve-year-old Prince, dressed as a sailor, went about the first day with a tray suspended from his neck, selling postcards, while Yolanda and Mafalda peddled flowers. The Queen and the Queen Dowager Margherita accompanied them.

The first attempt to fraternize with the populace was not a success, or, rather, was too much of a success, for the royal children were almost suffocated by the affection of the people. No sooner did they appear in the courtyard of the palace than some 50,000 persons rushed toward them, fighting for an opportunity to buy post cards and flowers. It was a new experience for the three youngsters, and they seemed rather dismayed at first at the tumult. The Boy Scouts formed a square about the Prince, and the Girl Scouts did the same for the Princesses, but the crowd broke through the barrier made by the wooden staffs of the Scouts and pressed so closely around the Prince and his sisters that for a time it looked as if they might be trampled under foot.

The Carabinieri fought their way into the mob and finally cleared a breathing space for the three children, from whose faces the perspiration streamed in a quite plebeian way, for the hottest of guns was also assisting at the spectacle. The Queen and the Queen Dowager looked more than a little alarmed, but by this time the children were frankly amused and delighted by the excitement; notwithstanding their discomfort. In a few minutes the Prince had sold his postcard photographs and the tray was heaped so high with bank notes that one could only see his vivacious black eyes laughing above them. A Boy Scout arrived with more cards and a big basket, into which he swept the pile of money.

No Change Given.

The Prince handed over the postcards himself to all purchasers and said "grazia" very sweet

WASHINGTON ACTING ON DISGUISE STORY

London Officials Investigating Report of British Tanker Masconomo Flying American Flag

FENNER AMPLIFIES TALE

Wireless Operator Who Sent Affidavit to State Department Is Found in San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTO, Aug. 7.—Through the American Embassy in London the State Department is investigating a complaint made by the Germany Embassy here that the British ship Masconomo covered her sides with signs bearing the name "Texas," flew the United States flag, and otherwise disguished heself as an American vessel while passing through the war zone off the British coasts.

The charge of the German Embassy became public through a statement given out in New York yesterday by the German Information Service, containing the copy of an affidavit purporting to have been made by Paul Richard Fenner, a wireless operator, asserting that he wos working on the Masconomo at the time the alleged deception was practiced. The German Information Service stated that the affidavit was given out by order of the German Embassy.

The State Department has received several complaints that British merchant ships have disguised themselves as American vessels. All have been investigated, but usually without result.

One of the complaints was that the British ship Cormoran disguised herself as an American ship while passing through the German war zone within a stated period. The State Department's investigation showed that the Cormoran was not in those waters at the time given.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Paul R. Fenner, the wireless operator who made the affidavit that the British steamer Masconomo disguised herself as an American vessel when passing through the war zone, lives at 1,131 Masonic Avenue, this city, and his affidavit was sworn out here before a local notary, H. C. Hinds.

Tonight he showed the following letter from the Department of State acknowledging receipt of his affidavit, which he sent to Washington:

Department of State,
Washington, June 21.

Mr. Paul R. Fenner, 1,131 Masonic San Francisco:

The department acknowledges receipt of your letter of June 10, 1915, addressed to the President, inclosing an affidavit to show that the British tank steamer Masconomo on March 1 obliterated all signs of her real identity and represented herself to be the American vessel Texas.

In reply you ree informed that the department has instructed the American Ambassador at London to request the British Foreign Office to make an investigation of the matter.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
JOHN E. OSBORN,
Acting Secretary of State.

Fenner also amplified his statement of the Masconomo incident, saying:

"Almost from the time we left Bombay we were on the lookout for danger. Having been warned in advance, before entering the Suez Canal we filled hundreds of bags with sand and piled them on the bridge to protect the ship's officers from the Turkish snipers on shore. The vessel was fired upon at several places, but no damage was done and no lives were lost.

"After leaving Gibraltar the Captain received a code message, which we could not decipher, and we learend later that we had traversed mine-strewn waves for miles.

"The cipher message was a warning to avoid the danger, but we were lucky enough to miss the mines. From the Isle of Wight up through the Straits of Dover to London we flew the American flag, and this is undoubtedly what saved us from destruction, for the waters of the Channel were reported thick with German submarines.

"At one time we were challenged from the English coast, and the vessel was flooded with light from a battery of searchlights. The signs bearing the names 'Texas' were plainly visible, but our Captain replied, giving the true identity of the ship. After that we proceeded without molestation to the Thames, and reached London safely. We did not undress at night in the Channel, and all the bats were swung out."

BURY ERIE FLOOD VICTIMS.

Stricken City Mourns While Thirteen Funerals Are Held.

ERIE, Aug. 7.—Thirteen funerals of victims of Tuesday night's flood were held today and Erie was a city of mourning. All regular business was suspended, and only the work of clearing away the débris left by the flood and disinfecting those portions of wreckage and streets that threatened pestilence was proceeding.

The State police were kept busy today controlling sightseers and keeping them from impeding the wrecking force. Mayor Stern communicated with the officials of the several railroads that enter Erie and asked that the usual Sunday excursions to Erie be cancelled, as the city would be unable to care for visitors.

No more bodies were recovered today, but one death of a workman was recorded. A team of horses engaged in hauling débris ran away, throwing out the driver and breaking his neck.

BUYS FRANKLIN BREWERY.

Former Head of James Everard Company Pays $600,000 for Plant.

David N. Neuberger, a lawyer of 74 Broadway, and the former head of the James Everard Brewery, bought the plant of the old Franklin Brewery Company, at Franklin and Flushing Avenues, Brooklyn, for $600,000 last week, according to the announcement made public yesterday.

It has been said that he intends to thoroughly remodel the property and after it has been brought up to modern requirements, will again return to the brewery business. The name of his new company or those of his associates were not announced.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Improved Order of Red Men of Greater New York will make an excursion up the Hudson to Newburg on Aug. 12 on the steamer Grand Republic.

The Lutheran Church Athletic Association has been formed in this city for the purpose of bringing into closer friendship the members of the various Lutheran Church societies. The next meeting of the association will be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at 58 Christopher Street.

August Wilhal, 4 years old, of 1,820 Unionport Road, the Bronx, was killed yesterday afternoon by a New Rochelle trolley car in Morris Park Avenue near Unionport Road. The boy left a bakery in Morris Park Avenue with his older brother, Henry, and was struck as he was attempting to run across the avenue.

Otto Klein, 60 years old, janitor of the five-story apartment house at 124 Bradhurst Avenue, jumped from the roof yesterday morning to the pavement of the rear courtyard and died before the arrival of Dr. Jennings of Harlem Hospital. Klein lived for a few minutes after his fall and said he wanted to die. His wife said she knew of no reason for the suicide.

The body of Robert Coon of 442 Forty-second Street, Brooklyn, engineer of the tugboat Elsie K., was identified yesterday by his brother, Leroy, in a Staten Island undertaking establishment. Coon was aboard the tugboat during the storm of Aug. 4, when she sank in Gravesend Bay.

Preparations for a strike of the workers in the dressmaking and tailoring trades on Fifth Avenue were announced last night by the officers of the Ladies' Tailors' Union, pending further consideration of the demands of the union by the employers.

MISS McALEENAN INJURED.

Knocked Down by Auto at Tag Day Benefit in Allenhurst.

Special to The New York Times.

ALLENHURST, N. J. Aug. 7.—Miss Katherine McAleenan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McAleenan of New York, was injured this afternoon at a benefit for the Children's Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, Mount Morris Park, N. Y., given under the direction of Franklin Simon of New York, one of the hospital Directors.

Miss McAleenan was one of a group of young women who were conducting a "tag day" campaign. She was assigned to the bridge at Deal Lake. When a Mr. Luther approached in his auto Miss McAleenan signaled him to stop. She was directly in the path of the automobile. As she stepped to one side Mr. Luther swung his car out in the same direction and knocked the young woman down.

When friends reached her Miss McAleenan was uncon..cious, but at her Summer home tonight it was said she was not hurt seriously. With her were Miss Helen Simon, daughter of Mr. Simon, who was Chairman of the General Tag Day Committee; Miss Elizabeth Waters, Miss Adelaide Reynolds, Miss Marguerite Jelliffe, the Misses Agnes and Margaret O'Connor, Miss Mildred Kline, the Misses Anna and Julia Murray, Miss Ruth Gregory, Miss Elizabeth Cone, Miss Alice Gaffney, and Miss Alice Johnson. The headquarters of the tagging squadron was the Simon Summer home in Cedar Avenue.

John Kopp, who disappeared from his home in Oroville, Cal., more than fourteen years ago, and whose relatives have been unable to find any trace of him, left an estate of $162,000, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Spencer. The entire estate passes in equal shares to his brothers and sisters—John and Albert Kopp, Louis Gucker, and Mrs. Amelia Nargraf.

There is no tax placed on the inheritances, because Kopp died a resident of California. The items enumerated in the report as being in New York State include cash in the hands of the City Chamberlain, $6,855; stocks and bonds from the estate of Christiana Kopp, deceased mother of Kopp, and held by the Chamberlain, $105,408; a house and lot at 237 East 103d Street, $18,000.

Objection is made to this last item, as the administrators refused to recognize the legality of the investment, which was in the original form of a mortgage on the property. On a foreclosure by the City Chamberlain the premises were sold and bid in by the Chamberlain for $18,000.

DROPS FAKE BOMBS ON CAMP

Aviator Gives Demonstration for Vermont National Guard.

Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, received a telegram yesterday announcing that the State of Vermont would add an aviation section to its National Guard. This decision follows the demonstrations given by George A. Gray, the aviator who was assigned by the Aero Club to assist in the Vermont National Guard manouvres which are now in progress.

After reviewing the Guard yesterday, Charles W. Gates, Governor of Vermont, made a flight with the aviator, and flew for some time above the parade grounds. Congressman Greene also went up, and both were very enthusiastic over the immediate establishment of an aviation section for the National Guard.

Gray has made a number of flights during the manouvres, giving bomb-dropping demonstrations, during which he struck the camp and headquarters many times with one-pound dummy bombs. General Tillston, the commanding officer, said yesterday that he favored the use of a military aeroplane in connection with the work of Norwich University, a State military school.

FIRE AT SUMMER EMBASSY.

Italian Envoy Buses Himself Moving Valuables from Blazing House.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY FARMS, Mass., Aug. 7.—Fire today in Pitch Pine Hall, the Luke cottage, occupied as the Italian Summer Embassy, caused a loss of $1,500. The fire was confined to the ell. It evidently started from the kitchen range. Count Vincenzo Macchi di Cellere, the Ambassador, and attaches of the Embassy were kept busy for a time moving valuables from the house.

The cottage formerly was occupied by J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Philander C. Knox and others. It is owned by Arthur F. Luke of New York.

officials will keep watch in the event of a strike to see that none of the work is transferred from a plant where there is a strike to another plant by the subletting of contracts.

As the crisis of the fight approached, Keppler yesterday reiterated in an official statement the denial that German influences were back of the strike.

"I am getting many letters from all parts of the country concerning the reports of German influences," said Keppler's statement, "and I am trying to make it clear to the laboring element of this country that the machinists are out for the eight-hour day. Otherwise they are strictly neutral, notwithstanding that many Germans are concerned in the eight-hour movement of the machinists. But they are by no means a predominating influence, nor do they in any way influence the action of the international union officials or dictate the policy of the international metal trades unions.

"Before we hold our general conference tomorrow on the New England situation, we want to kill the reports of German influence which have seemed to have considerable foundation because of statements by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and other persons. But Mr. Gompers has said that he did not refer to the machinists, but to seamen and longshoremen, when he charged that German influences were back of American labor troubles."

Keppler said that his going to New England did not mean that the machinists had weakened their fight for the eight-hour day in New York City.

Investigate in Brooklyn.

Following a statement by Keppler yesterday that the union was preparing to call a strike at the plants of all manufacturers in this section who continue to refuse metal trades workers the eight-hour day, he sent Business Agents Deering, Carney, and Bramley on a tour of Brooklyn shops to sound the strike sentiment. He said that the situation was such that the union might call a strike at any time against the shops which have held out against the union's demands.

The significance of this attitude lies in the fact that a majority of machine shops of the metropolitan district are members of the National Metal Trades Association, which has gone on record as ready to fight the eight-hour demand to the end. The Garvin Machine Company, whose plant has been closed since last Monday, when the 200 machinists struck, is a member of the association.

There was a conference yesterday of the men who are on strike at the Garvin plant, and another of the men of the Nathan Manufacturing Company, which has granted the eight-hour day, but which, the labor leaders say, has made a corresponding cut in wages. The labor leaders insist on at least the old scale of wages for the eight-hour day.

Keppler said the coming week might see a strike at the plants of several more New York companies making munitions of war. It was announced that probably the next plant to be hit would be the American Machinery & Foundry Company of Brooklyn, to which, Keppler asserted, the Garvin Company let its contracts at the beginning of the strike at its own plant. He said it was against the laws of the union for machinists to work on orders of a plant where a strike was in progress.

Henry C. Hunter, counsel for the National Metal Trades Association, to whom are referred all inquiries as to the Garvin trouble, said he knew nothing of the Garvin Company's having sublet its contracts in order to fill them to the American Machinery & Foundry Company or to any one else.

"So far as I know, the Garvin Company has not let out its work or contracts to any other concern. Even if it did, I would not be free to discuss it," he said.

Garvin's to Stay Closed.

George K. Garvin, President of the Garvin Company, refused to discuss Keppler's allegation that the plant had sublet its contracts in a manner that might involve the plants which took them. Both Mr. Hunter and Mr. Garvin said their plant would be closed until the strikers gave in. Keppler, on the other hand, said the machinists would never go back until their demands were granted. Of the 700 men out of work because of the Garvin strike less than 200 are machinists, but the absence of the machinists makes it impracticable for the other men to work.

When Keppler was told that there was a report that the Garvin Company had changed its mind about letting its plant stay idle and would employ strike-breakers, he said it would be impossible for the Garvin officials to find any machinists out of work, that all the surplus supply had gone to work in English munition plants.

Keppler said that so far the campaign for an eight-hour day had benefited more than 200,000 men, and that before it was over fully 2,000,000 workers would receive benefits directly and indirectly. He added that many hundreds of non-union men who have benefited by the campaign he is directing were asking to join the union.

A. Schrader's Son Company has promised a sliding scale of hours that will mean an eight-hour day by next May, when a new shop will be completed. Officials of the machinists' union will confer this week on whether to accept the compromise. Officials of the company say it is impracticable to grant the eight-hour day with the present orders and their present factory.

ARMS STRIKE IS ENDED.

Machinists at Ilion Plant Will Return to Work Monday.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 7.—The piece-work workers in the Remington Arms factory at Ilion will be at work on Monday morning, according to informatinn received here tonight. A number of those who have been out during this week have announced their intention to return to their machines and no one has been heard to say that he was in favor of continuing the strike.

Little will be said about terms of settlement. It is generally understood that Manager T. C. Tyler has assured the men that if their expectations are not met at a fair trial of the new schedule, a further increase in wages will be given.

REJECT LOCOMOBILE OFFER.

Men Vote to Strike if Eight-Hour Day Is Not Granted.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 7.—The bonus proposition recently made by the Locomobile Company of America to its employes was rejected at a meeting tonight of about 800 employes. The meeting by an almost unanimous vote decided to make a demand on the company for an eight-hour day, with time and a half for overtime work.

A committee representing the different departments of the plant was named to lay the demand formally before the company officials Monday. Another meeting will be held on Monday night, at which time the committee will make its report. It was also decided that if the company does not grant the eight-hour workday a strike will be called.

George J. Bowan, business agent of the machinists, was General Chairman of the meeting, which was addressed by a number of local and State labor leaders, who urged the men to stand firm in their demands and assured them that organized labor generally was behind them.

STRIKE OF 1,800 AVERTED.

Bosch Magneto Company, in Plainfield, Grants Eight Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 7.—The Bosch Magneto Company, the largest of the nine Plainfield factories, in which the machinists have threatened to strike, announced today that it had granted the demand for an eight-hour day. This is acceptable to the men.

J. J. Keppler, Vice President of the International Machinists' Union; Thomas E. Carroll, the organization's representative who is looking after the Plainfield troubles and New Jersey machinists, and Business Agent Hugh Riley said there would be no strike among the 1,800 Plainfield machinists. The meeting of the demands has restored harmony, and in a majority of cases a rise in wage scales also has accompanied the eight-hour grant.

HOLYOKE CAR MEN STRIKE.

Company Directors Refuse to Arbitrate Trouble That Caused Tie-Up.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Aug. 7.—The Directors of the Holyoke Street Railway Company voted this afternoon not to arbitrate with the 250 striking trolleymen who went out this morning, on the ground that the latter are no longer their employes.

The good offices of the State Board of Arbitration were accepted by the trolley men who voted to submit their differences to arbitration at the close of a public hearing in the city hall this afternoon, but the company officials decided to stand pat.

Street railway traffic in Holyoke and Amherst is completely paralyzed by the strike. The men went out at 1:30 o'clock this morning, following the breaking off of negotiations between the company and the men. Power workers are also out, and company officials announced that no attempt would be made to run cars tonight.

Special trains to points north and south of Holyoke were run by the Boston & Maine Railroad this morning. With the exception of a few licensed taxicabs of Holyoke no attempt was made to run jitneys, as the city ordinances of Holyoke require a license by the Board of Aldermen, and that body has adjourned until September. Five hundred night workers of the Fisk Rubber Company of Chicopee Falls, who live in Holyoke, were sent to their homes in auto trucks furnished by the Fisk Company. The majority of people employed in Holyoke's business district walked to work, and no disorder was reported by the police.

Lodgers Write Miss Anne Morgan, Asking Her to Save Their Home—See Dangers Ahead.

Many well-to-do persons who had read that the Jacob A. Stamler Deep Sea Hotel for Girls, in which 100 working girls live, is to be closed on Aug. 28 unless it receives additional financial support, called on Captain Frank D. Sheeley, skipper of the hotel, yesterday. Some offered to help in finding new homes for the girls, but Captain Sheeley said last night that he had nearly made up his mind that the hotel was bound to be closed and the old ship dismantled

In a letter to Miss Anne Morgan, Mary Smith, one of the guests on the old ship, said it would save many of the girls if the hotel could be continued, as "wolves in sheeps' clothing" had put in an appearance and were trying to get on the track of young girls who were earning so little that they would have difficulty in living anywhere except on the Jacob A. Stamler.

Skipper Sheeley said yesterday that the reference to wolves probably applied to one of the letters received recently, in which a home was offered for "a pretty girl of 16 or 17."

One letter that Captain Sheeley was not inclined to class as dangerous came from a man of Bayonne, N. J., inclosing a newspaper picture of a group of girls at the hotel, with a cross penciled on one of them, with a statement that the girl indicated made a deep impression on the writer and that he was anxious to marry her. Captain Sheeley said that the letter seemed to come from the heart, and that he meant to investigate and verify the good intentions of the man. If he turns out to be all right and is seriously smitten by the picture of the handsome working girl Captain Sheeley said that he would throw no unnecessary obstacles in the young man's path.

There were several other letters from men who wanted wives. These men, too, will be checked up. No orders have been given to throw overboard the eligible bachelors that call on the ship. Captain Sheeley said that several of the girls on the boat were engaged, but that there had been no increase in the number of engagements due to the publicity given to the contemplated closing of the hotel.

The appeal to Miss Morgan, written by Miss Mary Smith and signed by practically all of the girls living at the hotel, follows:

Miss Anne Morgan, President of the Vacation Fund Committee:

My Dear Miss Morgan: Pardon the liberty taken by a total stranger to you in writing this letter in behalf of one hundred-odd working girls who make their home on board the Stamler. A number of our girls are members of your Vacation Fund and members of St. George's Church and have met you on various occasions. They assured me that your interest in working girls was first in your heart, and that is what prompts me to act as spokesman. Our girls are so dependent upon the upkeep of the Stamler that to be compelled to vacate by the 28th of this month would mean to be thrown upon the mercy of a cruel world.

Some of the girls are but 16 years of age, earning but $3 a week. Others are not working at all, due to present conditions. Already the Captain of the ship, Mr. Sheeley, has come in contact with wolves in sheeps' clothing who are ready to lead our honest girls in the wrong path.

I feel sure that if out of the goodness of your great big heart you would be good enough to investigate for yourself you would do a great good. If you personally feel that you cannot do anything for us, perhaps you might be able to interest some of your numerous friends. I know that you do so many good things in your quiet way that it must be a burden to you. The Stamler has been "Home, Sweet Home" to us girls for a great many years. I feel sure that if the late John Arbuckle were alive today he would never cause our hearts to suffer the pains we are now undergoing.

Again I beg of you in behalf of the girls to try and help us in whatever way you can, so we can remain together as one large family. Many of our girls have already tried to secure similar accommodations at the same money they are now paying, but without success. I honestly believe that the closing of the Stamler will mean the end of a lot of us girls. I hope to hear from you, and kindly think carefully this over and give us a ray of hope.

With deepest love from all the girls, we hope to hear from you soon.

Very sincerely yours,
MISS MARY SMITH.

Captain Sheeley said there appeared to be no chance to keep the ship hotel going, unless an outside income of between $1,000 and $1,500 can be obtained to make a sum sufficient to pay interest on the value of the ship to the Arbuckle Deep Sea Hotel Company. Girls have been receiving board and lodging there for $2.80 a week.

OSBORNE RETIRES FOR REST

Goes to Country After Conference with Commissioner Weinstock.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 7.—After an hour's conference this evening with State Prison Commissioner Weinstock, Warden Thomas Mott Osborne of Sing Sing Prison announced that he was going "for rest and comfort to a little country town." He said he would return on Tuesday. That is the date, according to unofficial reports from Albany, on which the Warden is to be removed from office.

"I know that Superintendent Riley is at his home in Plattsburg," said Warden Osborne. "Up to date I have received no word from him. The report of charges is still a matter of newspaper talk, for I know officially of no charges having been made against me. Until I receive them I am going on with my work here. When they are made I shall be prepared to meet them. If I receive word I shall confer with Superintendent Riley—that is, if he wants to see me."

Commissioner Weinstock went to the prison with visitors, and after they had inspected the prison he saw Mr. Osborne in the Warden's private office. When Mr. Weinstock went away to his automobile the Warden held a conference with Joseph Green, who is his attorney in the matter of P. J. McDonald, confidential agent of Superintendent Riley, who is charged by Mr. Osborne with having assaulted him on the railroad station platform here.

The Warden said he would press the assault charge against McDonald when the case came up on Aug. 12.

KIRCHWEY LAUDS OSBORNE.

Sing Sing's Head Praised by the Man Spoken of as His Successor.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Aug. 7.—Professor George W. Kirchwey, who within the last few lays has been mentioned as possible successor first to Warden Osborne of Sing Sing, and then a possible successor to Superintendent Riley, was one of the principal speakers at the conference on discipline at the Fair Hope League Summer School today. Miss Katharine B. Davis, Commissioner of Correction, was another. Professor Kirchway's talk was largely a plea for more humane and rational treatment of prisoners. He made frequent reference to Wardn Osborne and almost always in praise of his methods. Miss Davis discussed many phases of prison life, touched on the recent accusations of graft and gave the opinion that college women did not go to prison.

"Discipline in Prison" was Professor Kirchwey's subject. "A prison is, after all, very much like any other community," he said. "Prisoners have just as good an idea of living up to discipline as the members of any other community."

The cause of most of the trouble in prisons, Professor Kirchwey thinks, is that the prisoners have been made beasts by being treated like beasts. The whole present prison system must be abolished, he believes, because it is founded on the idea of battering prisoners into being better men. He expressed the opinion that the best way to have prisoners accomplish really good work was to put men like Osborne in charge of them. He does not, however, agree with Mr. Osborne's theory that all prisoners are normal men. He believes that the unruly ones—where the conditions are humane—are abnormal and should be treated accordingly.

GERMAN SHIP SOLD HERE.

New Yorkers Buy the Steinbek, Now Tied Up in a Pacific Port.

SEATTLE, Aug. 7.—The German ship Steinbek, which was loading lumber at Bellingham when the war began and was interned at Eagle Harbor, near Seattle, has been sold in New York to American shippers and will be placed under the American flag.

The purchase price was $70,000, or double the amount for which the Steinbek was bought a year ago.

BRYAN'S SECRETARY QUITS FEDERAL JOB

R. F. Rose, Efficient as Foreign Trade Adviser, to Enter Private Employment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Robert F. Rose, who came to Washington from Montana early in the Wilson Administration to become confidential secretary to Secretary of State Bryan, today tendered his resignation from the office of Foreign Trade Adviser of the State Department. The fact that Mr. Rose is one of Mr. Bryan's closest friends had nothing to do with his retirement. He wished to resign while Mr. Bryan was Secretary of State, and would have tendered his resignation had Mr. Bryan remained in that office. Mr. Rose is to engage in private employment. Secretary Lansing was reluctant to have him leave the department service, but Mr. Rose had made arrangements to which he was obliged to adhere.

"I am concerned that no misunderstanding shall exist in the matter of my resignation," said Mr. Rose today. "My relations with Mr. Bryan have nothing to do with my action. He does not know of it, and I have not heard from him since he left Washington in June."

Mr. Rose, who was appointed Foreign Trade Adviser on June 5, 1913, was known in the State Department as Mr. Bryan's personal representative. He had been a shorthand reporter in Chicago for twenty years and in Montana for four years. He met Mr. Bryan in the political campaign of 1896, when he was assigned to accompany Mr. Bryan on the latter's 20,000-mile speech-making trip as correspondent of the Associated Press. He reported Mr. Bryan's speeches, sometimes as many as thirty-two a day; did his own transcribing on the typewriter most of the time, wrote descriptive reports of the Bryan campaign, and filed for telegraphing on some occasions as much as 35,000 words a day. He was Mr. Bryan's private secretary in the 1900 and 1908 campaigns. After he became Trade Adviser one of the first big questions handled by Mr. Rose was that of obtaining a market in Austria-Hungary for cottonseed oil.

Mr. Rose was sent by Mr. Bryan to Niagara Falls as a representative of the State Department during the A B C mediation proceedings. When war came on new conditions were created and the work of the Trade Adviser's office changed. Goods necessary in the United States were placed under embargo by all the belligerent and several of the neutral countries. Mr. Rose conducted the negotiations with the foreign countries and obtained permission for the importation into this country of sugar beet seed, cyanide, dyestuffs, and other commodities until the British Order-in-Council stopped their importation.

Perhaps the most important matter handled by Mr. Rose was that of getting dyestuffs out of Germany and cotton into that country. Early in the war an embargo was placed by Germany on shipments of dyestuffs, cyanide, and other chemicals, and it was only after strenuous negotiations that permission was received from Germany to import dyestuffs, cyanide, and the other chemicals, on the condition that they be brought in American vessels and a guarantee given against their re-exportation. At the time there was less than six weeks' supply of dyestuffs in this country, and it has been asserted that unless this commodity had been obtained, more than 600,000 workmen in the textile industry would have been thrown out of employment. The cyanide situation was even more depressing. In the entire country there was not enough cyanide to keep the gold and silver mines of the West and Mexico going for four weeks. In Mexico alone more than 12,000 miners were threatened with loss of employment.

As soon as the permission was granted, Mr. Rose called a conference in Washington which resulted in the chartering of the American boat Matanzas, which was sent to Rotterdam under ballast to bring back the dyestuffs and cyanide. The Matanzas had been out two days when a telegram was received from Germany stating that unless the Matanzas was loaded with cotton the dyestuffs and cyanide could not be loaded. Mr. Rose drafted a telegram to Germany stating that the Matanzas had gone, had no wireless, and could not be recalled, but that the German Government could be assured that future boats flying the American flag would be sent with cotton.

Mr. Rose then called on the cotton men. They were fearful of Great Britain's attitude, and only after hard work was there a cotton exporter found who would tse advantage of the German market, even though cotton was not contraband. The first shipment of 6,000 bales to Gothenburg for Germany was made by the Harriss-Irby Cotton Company. No banks would finance it, and the needed insurance could not be obtained. The company carried its own insurance and sent the cotton at an expense of more than $300,000.

Mr. Rose went to the banks and pleaded with them. He pointed out that cotton was then selling in Texas at 5½ cents a pound, and that unless some relief could be given to the South there would be disastrous consequences. He visited the dye stuffs people and asked them to pay for the American cotton sold in Germany with the money which they were to pay for dyestuffs. These arrangements had been practically completed when the banks lent a sympathetic ear to the cotton exporters.

It was through Mr. Rose's individual work with the marine insurance companies of this country that marine insurance was obtained for the cotton going to Germany. The Monte went into Bremen loaded with cotton—the first ship flying the American flag which had entered that port in forty years. This blazed the way. Cotton exporters estimate that Germany received upward of 2,000,000 bales of American cotton, and the price in New York went to 9¼ cents and 10 cents a pound.

In March the British Order in Council was issued. Mr. Rose opened informal negotiations with the British Embassy, and goods at Rotterdam paid for before March 1 were brought out.

WIRE RATE CUT MET BY WESTERN UNION

Night Leased Service Reduced One-Half, Following Same Move by Postal.

OPENS BIG FIELD TO NEWS

Expected to Prove Profitable Through Great Increase of Business.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has reduced by one-half the night rate on wires leased to newspapers and press associations, a step which was taken by the Postal Telegraph Company one week ago and followed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on Wednesday last.

The rate has been $12 a mile per year for press associations and $10 a mile per year for individual newspapers. These rates have stood for nearly forty years, almost ever since the leased wire business began, and it is held by officials of all the telegraph companies involved that the enormous volume of new business which will be opened up by the reduction will more than compensate for the cut. This is particularly true in view of the fact that the wires leased for press use at night are used for commercial purposes in the daytime, and hence every wire which is used for that purpose represents a double use as against a single use for those which lie idle at night.

This will give an opportunity to many smaller newspapers to maintain leased wires in connection with the principal cities, and will give the chance to still smaller ones to form local press associations which can get the news of the world at large, which the residents of the smaller towns have been demanding with much greater vigor since the present war began than in times past.

The cut of the Western Union rates affects a much greater mileage of wire than does that of the Postal. The latter affected about 75,000 miles altogether; while of Western Union wires, The Associated Press alone leases nearly 24,000 miles. Thus this new cut to meet the Postal rate will save The Associated Press about $144,000 a year.

The great papers of New York and Chicago will be the biggest gainers by the cut, however, for their leased wires to Washington and other points have always been a heavy item of expense.

While it was impossible to obtain last night exact figures as to the mileage of wires leased for press uses from the Western Union, it is believed that it will amount to several hundred thousand, and that the saving to The Associated Press, The United Press, smaller associations, and individual newspapers will therefore run into millions.

A large part of this, of course, will be reinvested in the extension of leased-wire service, and the consequence, as forecasted by Vice President Charles C. Adams of the Postal earlier in the week, will be a benefit to the ultimate consumer, whose newspapers will be able to give him more news. This, of course, is especially true in the smaller cities.

The mileage of wires leased from the Postal is about 75,000. Of late years the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which operates under an agreement with the Western Union, has immensely extended its leased wire business, and the cut which it made earlier in the week is expected to have the same result with it as with the other companies.

80 JEWISH BLIND UNITED.

Hebrew Association Reports Success with Its Social Centre.

The Hebrew Association for the Blind celebrated its first anniversary last night in the Bank of the United States building. The program included addresses by the President of the association, Benjamin Berinstein, and Nissim Behar.

"In the past year, we feel that we have been successful," Mr. Berinstein said. "Out of five hundred Jewish blind in the city, we have some eighty in the association, and there are sixty sighted persons who are also members. We have established, what I believe is the first social centre for the blind, a place where they can go any time they wish and have reading and games. We have also done a little on the employment side. Several of our members are piano tuners, and recently a blind orchestra from the association played for a dance."

In an interview, Mr. Berinstein declared that the organization was frankly sectarian.

"The others have done their best," he said, "but conditions on the east side make it impossible for them to reach the people, especially as many of the families regard blindness as a disgrace and conceal their afflicted member as far as possible. I know of one man who was never out of his room for twenty-two years."

BROMINE GAS FILLS STREET.

Police Dump Bottles in Lot Before Any One Was Overcome.

West Twenty-eighth Street, near Twelfth Avenue, was treated to a realistic scene of trench warfare under the conditions of a German attack with asphyxiating bombs yesterday afternoon when a case of bottles containing bromine, a gs-producing chemical exploded when two cases of the liquid fell off a truck passing through the street.

Joseph Levine, a truckman of the National Cartage and Warehouse Company of 114 Liberty Street, after loading his wagon with the cases at the Pennsylvania Station, set out for their destination at the pier of a tramp steamer at the foot of Fifteenth Street. At Twenty-eighth Street a severe jolt threw two of the cases from the wagon. The moment the bromine was exposed to the air it exploded, filling the street with dense fumes.

Some one telephoned to Inspector Owen Egan of the Bureau of Combustibles. When he arrived he established a danger zone, and, with the aid of the police, dumped the two cases into a vacant lot before any one had been affected by the gases.

FINDS LOST FATHER DYING.

Mrs. Casper's Search of a Year Comes to Dramatic Ending.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 7.—After a search of more than a year for her missing father, John Kasler, of Wallington, Mrs. Anne Casper of 103 Lodi Road, that town, found him this morning dying in the General Hospital, this city. Kasler is 73 years old.

On the death of his wife Kasler went to live with his daughter. Before he disappeared he showed signs of a feeble mind. Some time ago the Passaic police arrested an aged man for vagrancy. Unable to tell his name or whence he came, he was sent to the County Jail at Paterson for examination. While in the jail he suffered a stroke of paralysis and he was removed to the General Hospital here.

Mrs. Casper today called on the Passaic police again to try to find her father. They took her to the hospital, where, on seeing Kasler, she threw her arms about him and kissed him. The aged man failed to recognize his daughter.

Kasler is dying of paralysis and he will remain at the hospital. Mrs. Casper is heartbroken.

TO CREATE NEW CARDINALS.

Reported That a Red Cap Will Go to Archbishop Ireland.

ROME, Aug. 6, (via Paris, Aug. 7.)—The next consistory will be followed by a Council of Bishops, at which Pope Benedict will create several new Cardinals, says the Agenzia Nazionale.

Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minn., and Monsignor Leccaria, Private Chaplain of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, it is reported, will be among those added to the College of Cardinals.

Carranza's official representatives in Washington would be glad to confer with representatives of any element of the Mexican people "with a view to furthering the common interest, the peace and the welfare of their nation." But Secretary Lansing is understood to construe this statement and the brief as a whole as an invitation to Villa and Zapata to sue for peace and not as an offer to meet them on equal terms in an honest effort to re-establish law and order in Mexico. It was plain from what was said at the State Department today that officials there were not impressed with the suggestions that they understood the Carranzistas wished them to adopt.

This Government's Position

Answers to questions asked Secretary Lansing today confirmed statements heretofore made in Washington dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES concerning the attitude of the Wilson Administration toward the present situation in Mexico. This Government holds that the Mexican revolution ended with the overthrow of Huerta and his departure from the country. The present factions were united in accomplishing that result, and the United States has obtained statements from the factional leaders which show that all have the same ideals and are working for the same end and that their differences are personal and not based on principle. In these circumstances this Government regards the warfare in Mexico as merely a contention of factions. It would not be wise, therefore, to recognize any particular faction as entitled to the moral support of the United States and other nations. A settlement should be obtained by the factions composing their differences with the resultant effect of the establishment of a central Government, which would have the support of the Mexican people.

Statements in amplification of this view were made at the conferences held at the State Department Thursday and Friday by the Secretary of State, the Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentina, and Chile, the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala, and Paul Fuller of New York, who had been one of President Wilson's investigators in Mexico.

This Government holds that the advantages possessed by Carranza are not equivalent to compete control and ability to pacify Mexican territory. The United States takes the position, therefore, that, as Villa and Zapata are willing to make peace, Carranza should join them in an agreement.

That the diplomatic representatives of Latin-American Governments who participated in the State Department conference this week were inclined to share this view was indicated by their agreement to ask their Governments to appeal to Carranza, Villa, Zapata, and the Carranzista and Villista Governors of the various States of Mexico to compose their differences and arrange for the establishment of a Provisional Government in the national capital.

Hesitate at Intervention.

It is believed that Carranza will decline to heed the appeal, and therein lies the main difficulty that confronts the conferees. The United States Government is of the opinion that if Carranza refuses to join with Villa and Zapata in establishing a central Government he should be eliminated from consideration and recognition accorded to a Government established with the support of Villa and his adherents. Some, at least, of the Latin-American conferees appear to be unwilling to indorse such a program, mainly on the ground that there would be danger that the new Government, in spite of its formal recognition by the United States and other American nations and further support given to it through cutting off supplies of arms and ammunition to the Carranza forces, would be unable to cope in a military way with the Carranzistas. Hence, to keep the new Government in power, armed intervention might be necessary. The United States Government is not willing at this time to consider armed intervention on its part, and some of the Latin-American countries do not look with favor on the prospect of armed intervention by the United States at any time.

When the conferees on the Mexican situation reassemble in New York next week they will give consideration to this problem. Latin-Americans participating in the conference are understood to be of the opinion that nothing should be done that might in any way be an infringement of the sovereignty of Mexico. Assurances have been given by the United States that it has no intention of acquiring any Mexican territory or obtaining any undue advantage in that country. While this is understood and appreciated by the Latin-American conferees, it was made apparent that their Governments are somewhat apprehensive of an armed undertaking to pacify Mexico. It is believed that this feeling is due to a considerable extent to the fear that should the United States undertake armed intervention with the approval of Latin-American Governments a principle would be established which might react on some of the Latin-American nations in the event that they became engaged in protracted civil strife.

Carranza's Strength Not Conceded.

In answer to questions today Secretary Lansing would not concede the contention of the Carranzistas that they controlled the greater portion of Mexican territory and were maintaining peaceful conditions. This contention, it was said, was not borne out by official information in the possession of the State Department, but the department, it was admitted, did not have the fullest advices on the subject.

A question asked with particular reference to the principles upon which the present contest in Mexico is being waged brought the answer that the revolutionary movement against the old Cientifico element, which had controlled Mexico, ended when Huerta was driven from the country and that the present struggle was not in behalf of the reforms for which the revolution had been sought but merely a factional contest. This Government, it was brought out, did not regard any single factional leader as entitled to the credit of representing exclusively the purposes of the original revolution. As for Villa and Zapata, they shared with Carranza control of Mexico, although they had been weakened recently. This made it necessary that the status of all factions should be considered and that they should be brought together to establish a constitutional government if possible.

It was said at the State Department today in behalf of Secretary Lansing that the brief filed by Attorney Douglas for the Carranza Government was received at the department yesterday, but was not laid before the Pan-American conference by Mr. Lansing. Mr. Lansing had not completed the reading of the brief today.

In his brief, which practically asked for recognition, Mr. Douglas quotes Carranza as saying:

"'We are ready to confer with any Mexican element for the welfare of our common country, but we must not yield or throw to the winds the victory which now enables us to realize the aims of the revolution."

As interpreted at the State Department, these sentiments are not consistent with the view that Carranza is willing to compose his differences with Villa and Zapata on equal terms as the United States Government insists.

General Villa has been notified by his Washington agents of Carranza's attitude, and an early response is expected.

Copies of the Carranza brief have been sent to each member of the Pan-American conference and to President Wilson.

Active consideration of the Mexican problem has been reflected by increased activity in the War Department. Plans long ago made for military occupation of Mexico have been recently readjusted. Attention lately has been given to the accumulation of supplies and tentative arrangements for land and water transportation of troops.

The date of the meeting in New York of Secretary Lansing and Mr. Fuller with the diplomatic representatives of the six Latin-American Governments has not been disclosed, and may not have been determined. It was reported today that the conferees would reassemble in New York on Tuesday. All that the State Department would say was that the conference would be resumed next week.

NORTH HAVEN, Me., Aug. 7.—Secretary McAdoo left here this afternoon in response to a telegram from Washington. He expects to reach New York tomorrow morning.

CARRANZA DEFIANT; SAYS HE HAS WON

Deprecates Pan-American Peace Movement and Declares Intervention Would Be War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 7.—General Carranza was asked by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today for an expression of his opinion concerning the Pan-American conference for the pacification of Mexico which was recently held at the State Department in Washington.

"I do not know yet what was considered at the conference," he replied, "hence I cannot express any exact opinion. But I must declare that such a conference for the pacification of Mexico can have no practical result, as the civil struggle is about finished, the Constitutional army, of which I am First Chief, having vanquished everywhere the reactionary forces. This conference is the result of the work of the losers, who are near the American Government, and who, in their desperate condition, have no other recourse than treason to their country. In spite of all, we Constitutionalists will save our country once more."

"Do you believe the United States will attempt armed intervention?" General Carranza was asked.

"I do not believe," he replied, "that the American Government will be guilty of so great an error, rather, say crime, as intervention would be nothing else than war—a war even more disastrious than the one that we have just had, and one totally unjustified not only because the United States has no right to intervene in our domestic affairs but also because as a result profound hatred would last for many years between the two countries, which have cultivated for a long time relations of true friendship. For intervention there cannot be even the pretext of doing a humanitarian act, for the destruction and the misery that would be the consequence would bring greater evils than those which it was sought to remedy. The only persons interested in intervention are the vanquished reactionaries and the plutocrats who for so long have disposed of the destinies of the nation and who are not willing to conform to a government organized by the people, in which liberty and justice will be supreme."

CARRANZA'S CLAIMS AND PEACE OFFER

Asks Recognition and States His Willingness to Treat With Enemies.

The plea for recognition submitted to Secretary of State Robert Lansing by Judge Charles A. Douglas, chief counsel of the Carranza Government in this country, was given out here yesterday. It is a printed document of forty-one pages, and deals with every feature of the Mexican problem from the Carranza standpoint. Among other things, it is stated that Manuel Vasquez Tagle, who is said to be looked upon with favor by the Washington Government as the man to serve as President ad interim of Mexico while a new President and Congress is being elected, is unsatisfactory to the Carranza element, because, to use the words of Judge Douglas, he is neither "impartial nor strong." The document is in seven parts, with an appendix written by General Carranza himself.

The sixth part is that in which the plea for recognition of Carranza by the United States is made.

"The recognition of the Constitutionalist Government at this time," the document reads, "will be entirely in accord with the accepted principles upon which the Government of the United States has always acted in matters pertaining to the recognition of new Governments.

"Following the established precedents, it is not necessary that General Carranza's Government be in control of the entire territory of Mexico. It is not even necessary that he occupy and control the capital. It is only necessary that he be acknowledged to be the head of a de facto government capable of maintaining its power and manifesting a disposition to adhere to the obligation of treaties and of international friendship.

"A striking precedent is found in the recognition of the Benito Juarez Government. President Buchanan instructed Mr. McLean, in whom he had reposed discreitonary authority to recognize the Government of President Juarez if on his arrival in Mexico he should find it entitled to recognition according to the established practice of the United States, that it was not an essential condition to recognition of a Government that it should be in possession of the capital, but that it was enough if it was 'obeyed by a large majority of the country and is likely to continue.'"

Judge Douglas then cites as precedents the instructions sent to Minister Morris at Paris on Nov 7, 1792, by Thomas Jefferson, then the Secretary of State, who in the course of his instructions told Minister Morris that "it accords with our principles to acknowledge any Government to be rightful which is formed by the will of the nation substantially declared."

The Diaz Precedent.

Another citation is from the message of President Hayes to Congress in 1877 on the subject of the recognition of the Porfirio Diaz Government in Mexico. In the course of that message President Hayes stated that it was "the custom of the United States when such revolutionary changes of government have heretofore occurred in Mexico to recognize and enter into official relations with the de facto government as soon as it should appear to have the approval of the Mexican people, and should manifest a disposition to adhere to the obligations of treaties and international friendship."

Other citations are from the special message sent to Congress by President Pierce in 1856 with relation to the recognition of the Rivas-Walker Government in Nicaragua, in the course of which message President Pierce stated as the American policy substantially what President Hayes subsequently said with reference to the Diaz Government in Mexico.

"A generally accepted definition of a de facto government," the brief continues, "is a government of paramount force.' It will not be questioned that Mr. Carranza possesses such a government—and more. Not only does it control a well-organized and well-ordered military force, of which Mr. Carranza is the head, but an organized civil government as well. His Cabinet is composed of members of known ability and integrity, and through them he is now administering the affairs of the nation."

Judge Douglas then quotes a proclamation of Carranza, the statement by the First Chief that a recognition of his Government would "more rapidly consolidate peace and establish the constructive constitutionalist government, thus sustained in its reforms and in the program of the revolution, whose object is the greatest good for the greatest number."

"To this," says Judge Douglas in his brief, "I can only add the suggestion that a recognition would end once for all the intolerable intriguing that is now being carried on, inside and outside Mexico, to force the Administration to intervene. To serve this purpose the press is filled with the most exaggerated reports of Mexican outrages and Mexican sufferings. Recognition would convert the foreigners in Mexico into supporters of the Government recognized instead of continuing its detractors, as they now are. They would become helpful factors in restoring order instead of being disturbers, as many of them are.

"The effect on the Mexican people would be even greater. The people of Mexico recognize as never before their dependence on the good-will of the United States in their status among the nations of the earth. So long as it is left open for each faction in Mexico to proclaim its own probable selection for recognition, doubt and uncertainty will affect the loyalty and the allegiance of the Mexicans themselves in a great degree. This question settled, those influential Mexicans who are now doubtful and undecided would at once rally to the support of the Government recognized. Neither Juarez nor Diaz presented the strong claims for recognition, under the precedents established by this Government, that are presented by the Constitutionalist Government.

"So far as our own interests are concerned, it would seem that the sooner the Mexican question is out of the way the better it will be for our national life. Recognition of the Constitutionalist Government will not only mean peace and order in Mexico at an early day, but it will remove from our political discussions a subject which is bound to cause much irritation and controversy among our people."

Unwilling to Compromise.

Judge Douglas in part seven of his brief tells of a conversation he had with General Carranza and his advisers, on the subject of compromise, or consent to a neutral man to act as the executive head of Mexico pending the resumption of the constitutional order. General Carranza said:

"All these suggestions about a new and impartial man to take my place to call the elections emanate from the enemies of the revolution or from people who do not understand the actual situation. They assume that after the military work is completed all that is left is to call the elections. All the reactionary elements would like to have it that way. If they could induce us to step into this trap they would have a more complete victory over the revolution than if they had prevailed in the field. You must not overlook the fact that the important—the vital—work of the revolution remains to be done after our armies are in undisputed control. It is then that we will promulgate the great reforms on our program in respect to equal and just taxation, homesteads for the people, popular education for the masses, and others. These reforms must be promulgated—as 'war measures'—by military decree in the first instance by the chief of the revolutionary forces. This is our program, and this is the only way by which the people of Mexico have ever obtained any substantial reforms. This done, the election for Congress will be called, and when the newly elected Congress convenes, then, as I stated in my proclamation, I will submit to it, for its approval, modification, or rejection, all the laws which have been decreed by me as military chief. The Congress will probably approve these reforms in substance. The revolution will then be at an end. The Congress will be the chief power of the nation, and Government under the Constitution will be immediately resumed. * * *

"If the same course had been followed by Madero, Mexico would have peace and order at this time. The present crash who for so long have disposed of the destinies of the nation and who are not willing to conform to a government organized by the people, in which liberty and justice will be supreme."

The Congress will probably approve these reforms in substance. The revolution will then be at an end. The Congress will be the chief power of the nation, and Government under the Constitution will be immediately resumed. * * *

"If the same course had been followed by Madero, Mexico would have peace and order at this time. The present congress will then order the Presidential election under the operation of the Constitution, which will then be in full force by its own vigor. Now you can understand the speciousness of these urgent pleas of the reactionaries with your Government that a member of the old Madero Government be agreed upon to take my place. If this were done, he would assume the executive power under the Constitution, in form at least, and if he did he could easily control the Constitution. He could not decree laws to carry out the reforms of the revolution, and the reactionaries would have the whole reform program defeated, or at least deferred to the uncertain or dilatory action of future congresses, as was the case with the Madero movement.

Ready to Confer with Villa.

"In respect to all other matters, we are not unyielding. Any citizen of Mexico who in good faith has a suggestion to make for the welfare of the country, I and others concerned in the Government will gladly hear and confer with him. There has been no time when Villa or the commanders acting under him could not have obtained a conference with Obregon or our other commanders, in a military way. We are ready to confer with any Mexican element for the welfare of our common country, but we must not yield or throw to the winds the victory which now enables us to realize the aims of the revolution."

Judge Douglas then states that either Mr. Arredondo, the special representative in Washington of the Constitutionalists, or Mr. Cabrera, who is a member of Carranza's Cabinet and is now in Washington, will be glad to confer with the representatives of any of the Mexican factions "with a view to furthering the common interest, the peace, and the welfare of their nation."

Oo Señor Tagle, who has been most mentioned of late as the most available candidate for the provisional Presidency of Mexico, Judge Douglas in his brief, among other things, says:

"Assuming that Tagle is impartial and strong, and therefore fitted for the office of provisional President, and he is neither, his designation by certain elements in Mexico, and his recognition by this Government as provisional President, could only be based upon the theory that he is in line of Cabinet succession, and that he is today, and has been ever since the faithlessness of Lascarain, the constitutional provisional President of Mexico, and that upon his taking the oath of office he would become the duly qualified President under and pursuant to the provisions of the Constitution of of Mexico. And upon Tagle's qualifying, the Constitution would be instantly and automatically restored. If the Constitution is in this manner restored, it would effectually prevent the putting into effect of the principles of the revolution as 'war measures' by military decrees, because these things can only be done in the way indicated, and during the extra-constitutional period. The plans, purposes, and principles of the revolution would therefore become ineffective, dead, and the revolution would be as if it had never been fought, and the ideas underlying it, as if they had never been conceived, and Mexico would be as Mexico was before, except for the loss of life, destruction of property, and the paralysis of business. It would indeed be a short-cut route to complete victory for the enemies of the revolution. * * *

"But assuming for the purposes of the moment that Tagle is technically legally in the line of succession, it cannot be hoped that he can be provisional President in fact, unless he has support there or elsewhere—support either from within or without—and whatever the character of his support, it much continue to abide, or he will surely fall—and if he takes office like Lascarain, for the moment, that he may deliver it to another, the donce of his power and authority must likewise and to the same extent have support or he will fall.

"When the revolution has triumphed or has so far triumphed as to have with it more than 90 per cent. of the Mexican people, can it reasonably be expected that one, not an active, thorough revolutionist, will have the real support even of a respectable minority of the Mexican people—and would his support be weaker or stronger if he be installed into office at a time and under circumstances that would bring about surely the defeat of the principles for the support and enforcement of which the revolution was fought?"

In reference to the extent of military and political control exercised by Carranza in Mexico it is pointed out that the Carranzistas now exercise authority over 13,359,838 Mexican people, as against 1,471,600 who live in territory controlled by the other factions. Carranza has in his control 431,889 square miles of territory, whereas the opposition controls 272,586 square miles.

Carranza is characterized as a man of high attainments, fine education, a deep student, and a man familiar with the free institutions of the United States and other countries. There is no truth in the statement often made that Carranza is hostile to the United tSates.

"Perhaps," adds Judge Douglas, "there is no man in Mexico who has so abiding an admiration for American institutions and the American people."

"Mr. Carranza," the brief continues, "is anxious for the friendship and cooperation of the United States, for the sake of the people of Mexico—indeed, he admits that Mexico can scarcely prosper without the active, sympathetic and friendly co-operation of the people and the Government of the United States. If he and those associated with him shall hereafter be clothed with the executive power and authority of Mexico and shall be strengthened in the exercise of this poyer and authority by the friendly co-operation and recognition of the United States, the people of the United States will find in Mr. Carranza an active, loyal friend.

"Notwithstanding all the calumnies that have been heaped upon him—and they have been heaped upon him because his enemies feel that he will so enforce the law as to make all equal before the law—with equal rights to all and special privileges to none—no one has dared at any time to challenge his honesty of character, his integrity of purpose, or his patriotic effort to help Mexico. And surely no one can successfully attack the soundness of his democracy or the principles for which he stands."

MUST CHOOSE A CONSERVATIVE

General Juan A. Hernandes, Governor of Puebla and Military Commander of the southern region of Mexico under Diaz and Huerta, who arrived in this country from Spain on July 12, said yesterday at his apartment at 100th Street and Riverside Drive, that the Pan-American conference might bring permanent peace out of the situation in Mexico by supporting a strong man who represented the conservative and educated class of Mexicans, rather than selecting a revolutionary chief whose fortunes were bound up with those of Villa or Carranza.

"Most of the men of the better class of Mexicans," General Hernandez said, "have been driven into exile. The educated and brainy men, the leaders of the conservative classes, the men who under Diaz made Mexico a real nation, have been forced out of the country. There are in this country thousands of men of the conservative class of Mexicans who have been exiled, whose property has been confiscated and who are, many of them, doing manual labor for their existence in this country. Men of this kind must be returned to Mexico, however, before there is any prospect of permanent peace or of the future development of the country.

"If the man selected to head the country is a representative chiefly of the bandits, mercenary soldiers, and professional revolutionists, it is certainly plain his rule will be short, unless he receives support from the outside. Yet there is a great danger that, in order to obtain the good-will of Carranza or Villa, or both, the conference will pick out such a man. I have been given to understand that the representatives of the South American powers, however, realize that peace and good times cannot be brought to Mexico except under the rule of some man representing the better classes of Mexico.

"No Administrative capacity has been shown by any of the revolutionary chiefs in Mexico. Carranza has been a failure at every enterprise to which he has put his hand. At present he is a dummy. The strong man on his side is Obregon. Villa, who has now for a long time been in complete control of Northern Mexico, has shown his talents for government there in only one way—that of seizing everything and selling it. He is the great exporter. He has confiscated cattle and crops and marketable objects of every kind, down to household furniture. His idea of ruling is to sell everything, down to the personal chattels of his victims, and put the money in his own private treasury. Villa, however, is rapidly passing off the stage of Mexican politics, and is no longer important.

"One of the ways in which Carranza showed his theory of government was to turn all the professors out of the Mexican universities and to put new men, for the most part thoroughly incompetent, in their places. There is no hope for Mexico in such a man or any of his kind."

General Hernandez was asked to name the men he thought should take the lead in restoring order to Mexico.

"It would seem to be taking sides if I should name any men," he objected. "I have retired from politics, served for fifty-six years in the Mexican Army, for twenty-six years as a General. I am old and I am completely through with public life. I want nothing for myself."

GEN. SCOTT OPTIMISTIC.

Believes He Will Be Able to Reconcile Mexican Factions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Major General Hugh L. Scott, Chief of Staff of the Army, halted a few hours in Chicago today on his way from Washington to El Paso, and said he was confident of his ability to do much in bringing the warring factions of the Southern republic into agreement.

"I do not want to say anything about success," he said, "but I feel optimistic."

VILLA CHUCKLES OVER NEWS.

Told That Carranza Was Willing to Hold Peace Conference.

EL PASA, Texas, Aug. 7.—General Villa received with a chuckle Washington dispatches today stating that General Carranza had signified his willingness to meet his adversaries in a peace conference.

"I will make no comment," he said, "until I have more light."

General Villa has summoned military officials from all parts of the territory he controls for a meeting tomorrow at Juarez.

George E. Carothers, Special Agent of the State Department, said today that, pending the arrival of General Hugh L. Scott on Monday to confer with General Villa at Juarez, all action of the northern chieftain against foreign merchants and mining corporations would be deferred. Copies of the official manifesto of Aug. 2, received today, fixed execution as the punishment for merchants who failed to declare all merchandise in their possession.

An emphatic denial of the report that Sebastian Vargas, State Treasurer of Chihuahua, was executed Thursday, was issued today by General Villa.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Aug. 7.—Mrs. Francisco Villa, young wife of the Mexican chieftain, arrived here today with her month-old daughter and a party of fifteen relatives, friends, and servants. She came from Juarez. A member of her suite said that General Villa had several days ago his first opportunity to see the baby.

DOUBLE AMERICAN GUARD.

Our Machine Guns Command Scene of Expected Nogales Battle.

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 7.—General Calles, the Carranza commander, drew closer to Nogales, Sonora, today, and was expected to attack tomorrow at daybreak. In anticipation of a battle, a double guard was placed on the international line and a machine gun platoon placed on Titicomb Hill, overlooking the city. United States cavalrymen patrolled the border near the city.

Governor Maytorena, the Villa commander, insists that he will resist Calles's attack. He rushed 850 cattle into the United States tonight. The population of Sonora was reported to be subsisting on the meat of burros, horses and dogs.

Mexican raids on the American side again were reported today. It was said that yesterday 500 horses and cattle were taken from ranches near Duquesne.

KILL THREE MEXICAN BANDITS.

Their Fight with American Posse Lasts Only Ten Seconds.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Aug. 7.—Fighting against twenty, three Mexican outlaws were killed by a posse last night at a farmhouse thirty miles north of here. One posseman was slightly wounded. The fight lasted not more than ten seconds.

The posse heard that the dozen bandits which raided Sebastian yesterday and killed two Americans had separateu, most of them going to their homes on the American side of the border. The posse, led by State Adjt. Gen. Henry Hutchings, Sheriff W. T. Vann of Cameron County, and Ranger Captain Henry Ransom, galloped up to the suspected house, encircling it. Most of them left their mounts near the back porch. Two Mexicans on this porch opened fire. The possemen replied with rifles. A third Mexican, seen trying to run from the house, was shot down.

Officers have arrested twenty Mexicans, all residents of the American side of the border, on suspicion of being bandits.

DR. JOWETT LAUDS WILSON.

Tells English Audience the American People Favor the Allies.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 7.—A copy of The Stroud Journal, a newspaper of Stroud, England, has been received here containing a report of an address made recently in that place at a Red Cross meeting by the Rev. Dr. John H. Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York. The minister talked on the American attitude toward the war and praised President Wilson. The Stroud Journal says, in part:

"Dr. Jowett said he had been ashamed to read some of the sneers and reproaches of English papers on the attitude of the American Government, and declared they were doing a great deal to prejudice the good feeling which exists between England and America. He knew perfectly well, he declared, that the attitude of the American people was solidly one with the Allies, and he was sure that there was not a single morning or evening paper, with the exception of one printed in German for Germans of New York, that was not absolutely on the side of the cause championed by the British people.

"It was the cosmopolitan charcacter of the people which created the difficulty the President had to face, Dr. Jowett declared. He believed in the honesty and honor of the American Government. President Wilson was a great Christian and a Presbyterian to boot, and he was not merely a man who bore a label, but he carried the conviction and could be found in church Sunday after Sunday."

Germans Make Another Raid on the British Fishing Fleet—Danish Vessel Ablaze.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The British fishing smacks Hesperus, Ivan, Ces, Fisherman, Heliotrope, and Challenger have been sunk, presumably by German submarines. The fishing crews were landed today.

The Danish steamer Hans Emil has been set on fire. The crew was saved.

The Rygja to Fly American Flag.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Povisional American registry was granted today to the steamship Rygja, the fourth of twelve foreign built vessels proposed for admission by the American Transatlantic Company. The Rygja is at Copenhagen.

Toadstools Kill Painter.

THOMPSONVILLE, Conn., Aug. 7.—Alexander Schroeter, a portrait painter of New York City, died here tonight as a result of eating toadstools, which he mistakenly gathered for mushrooms.

He was born in Germany forty-eight years ago, was a graduate of Leipsic University, and had been in this country sixteen years.

SAY MISS BENSON WAS WIFE.

Lawyers Assert She Married a Mr. Foster Before Suing J. S. Foster.

That Lillian Benson, the actress who sued Jay Stanley Foster, President of promise of marriage, was the wife of another man named Foster at the time that she alleges Banker Foster promised to marry her was the allegation made yesterday by Hardy, Stancliffe & Whitaker, the defendant's attorneys.

The attorneys filed an affidavit with Supreme Court Justice Weeks setting forth this allegation in support of their request for judgment against Miss Benson, because of her default in not appearing before Justice Weeks in court on Thursday.

The attorneys allege Lillian Benson was married to one Foster in 1905 and thereafter lived with him as his lawful wife, and they say upon information and belief, that no divorce or separation was procured, but that she was still the wife of the said Foster when she asserted Jay Stanley Foster was courting her.

LAST VETERAN OF '61 TO LEAVE THE ARMY

Col. John L. Clem, "the Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," to be Retired Next Friday.

GRANT COMMISSIONED HIM

Won the Chevrons of a Sergeant When He Was a Child—Fought in Many Battles.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 7.—An army order will be issued on Monday announcing the retirement from active service at one minute after midnight next Friday of Colonel John L. Clem, U. S. A., the only civil war veteran now on the active list. On Friday Colonel Clem will celebrate his sixty-fourth anniversary, which is the age fixed by law when officers of the army must retire. Colonel Clem, who is famous throughout the service as "Johnny Clem, the drummer boy of Chickamauga," will be retired with the rank of Brigadier General, an honor accorded by act of Congress to all civil war veterans who hold the rank of Colonel on reaching the legal age of retirement.

Than the dapper little officer, so long on duty in the War Department at Washington and for so many years a daily visitor to the Army and Navy Club in the capital, there is no more popular officer in the army. Likewise there is no more capable officer connected with the Quartermaster Corps, of which he has long been the ranking Colonel.

Colonel Clem is the son-in-law of a Confederate veteran, and this fact he often cites in conversation with friends as proof of the fact that he is the most "united American" extant. He is loyal to the core when it comes to his comrades of the Grand Army, and yet there is no Southerner who can be more lavish in his tribute to the valor of the men who followed Lee and Jackson.

COL. JOHN L. CLEM.

Clem was just a little Ohio "shaver" of 10 years when President Lincoln issued his first call for volunteers. The Third Ohio Infantry was recruited in the Newark (Ohio) district. In the regiment was an officer, Captain McDougal, a friend of Johnny Clem. The future senior Colonel of the Quartermaster Corps was an orphan, and there was no near relative to stop him when he sought out his friend McDougal and begged permission to accompany the Third Ohio to the front.

Joins Michigan Regiment.

Clem told McDougal that he could carry a gun provided it was not too heavy, and also that he could beat the drum "to beat the band." Captain McDougal, however, could not see the proposition in the same light as did his enthusiastic young friend, and told him point blank he was entirely too little and too young for such dangerous business as that of a soldier in wartime. All this happened in May, 1861.

But Clem did not lose hope. Early in June of that year the Third Ohio started for the mobilization camp at Covington, Ky. A little boy smuggled himself into one of the baggage cars, and the following day climbed out of the car very tired, very dirty, and very hungry, in Covington. The lad was "Johnny" Clem.

Also at Covington was the Twenty-second Michigan Infantry. Clem decided that he would try and get a berth in that regiment, and so he boldly sought out the tent of the Colonel and walked right in. The "kid" from Newark told the Colonel that he wanted to go to the front with the regiment. The Colonel laughed and patted the boy on the back.

"You are a game little fellow, all right," said the Colonel, "but this is no place for children like you. If you were a foot taller and some years older maybe I'd take you along, but as you are neither of those things I am afraid you will have to stay back here with the home folks."

But Clem refused to be left behind, and was so persistent that the Colonel finally agreed to let him go along as a sort of combination regimental mascot and emergency drummer boy.

The soldiers rigged him out in a uniform, they provided him with a drum and also with a musket, the barrel of the gun being sawed off short so as to make it possible for the little fellow to carry it.

One of the first battles in which the regiment figured was that of Shiloh, where the Confederate General Albert Sidney Johnston was killed and where the fame of Ulysses S. Grant, as a soldier, may be said to have begun. In that battle Clem got into the very hottest of the fight. He came very near losing his life when a shrapnel shell exploded within a few feet of him. A fragment of the shell crashed through his drum and the shock of the explosion hurled him unconscious to the ground, where he was subsequently found and rescued by his bigger comrades.

After the battle the soldiers nicknamed Clem "Johnny Shiloh," and the name stuck to him until a greater fame came to him at the terrible battle of Chickamauga.

At Chickamauga the boy was again in the thickest of the fight. He fired right and left with his little sawed-off musket. General Thomas and General Rosecrans both heard of the heroism of the little Newark boy at Chickamauga and he was personally commended for his coolness and bravery by both of them. It was General Rosecrans who then and there made Clem a Sergeant, the youngest non-commissioned officer who ever served in the armies of this country.

Shot a Confederate Officer.

Now comes the story of how Clem won the title of "drummer boy of Chickamauga." The brigade to which the Twenty-second Michigan was attached had been ordered to hold its position, which position happened to be a very dangerous one. The brigade fought for all it was worth but the job could not be done, and finally the order came for it to fall back to a safer position. As the brigade retreated "Johnny" Clem managed to get lost. He got mixed up with a command that was almost surrounded by Confederates, and the dead and dying were all about him.

The boy realized his predicament and made up his mind he would not be captured, and so he did what any healthy youngster of his years would do and started to run. He ran like a "scared rabbit," and when he stopped running he was in a little clump of woods all by himself.

Cautiously he came out of the woods and he ran full tilt into a Confederate Colonel. The Confederate officer looked at the little boy with the little gun and despite the awfulness of the situation he had to laugh.

"My, but you are a little fellow to be in this business," said the Confederate, "but war is war, and I think the best thing a mite of a chap like you can do is to drop that gun."

Instead of dropping the gun Clem brought it to his shoulder, pointed it at the Colonel and fired. The Colonel fell badly wounded and Clem turned on his heels and ran for all he was worth. Finally he landed back with the Twenty-second Michigan and ever afterward they called him "the drummer boy of Chickamauga."

As for the Confederate Colonel he recovered after many weeks in the hospital, and after the war Colonel Clem learned about him and wrote and told him how glad he was that he had not killed him.

"When I heard that I had not killed that Confederate officer it was the best news I ever got," Colonel Clem remarked years afterward.

At Chickamauga three bullets passed through Clem's cap. Afterward he participated in the battles of Perryville, Murfreesboro, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek and Atlanta. At Atlanta he was wounded twice. He was dellvering a dispatch from General Thomas to General Logan when his pony was shot from under him and another grazed his right ear. The second wound was when a fragment of shell struck him in the hip.

General Thomas and General Logan, both became warm personal friends of the youthful Sergeant, and when the war ended they kept track of him and when Grant was elected President he sent for Clem and told him that he wanted to send him to West Point. In the late Fall of 1871 Clem appeared at West Point to stand his examination. But he did not pass, for he lacked the preliminary education necessary.

Bitterly disappointed, Clem went back to Washington and saw his friend, the President. Clem told Grant all about his shortcomings and asked him to give him a little more time to brush up on mathematics and other subjects, of which he did not then know any too much.

"I can beat that scheme," replied President Grant, "and you won't have to go to West Point at all. I will make you a second Lieutenant of regulars right now." And that is exactly what Grant did. The order commissioning him was signed Dec. 18, 1871.

In 1874 Clem was promoted to a First Lieutenant. He was made a Captain in 1882, a Major in 1895, a Lieutenant Colonel in 1901 and a Colonel in 1903.

Phillips Denies Offering Bribe.

Ex-Under Sheriff John M. Phillips, at one time a well-known politician in Queens, and who was recently suspended from the position of purchasing agent for the State prisons, pleaded not guilty to a charge of attempting to bribe Detectives Gaffney and O'Connell of Inspector Boettler's staff when arraigned before Magistrate Leach in the Long Island City Court yesterday, and he was released on $2,000 bail for examination on Friday of this week. The alleged attempted bribery grew out of the arrest of Phillips by the two detectives on July 31 on a charge of bookmaking.

Two Die After Eating Poisoned Fish

Gustave Stohe, 60 years old, janitor of 24 East Ninety-ninth Street, was found dead in his bed yesterday morning, and his cousin, Peter Barges, was found in the apartment suffering from what Dr. Jennings of Harlem Hospital said was ptomaine poisoning. Both men had eaten fish purchased from a peddler's wagon. Barges was removed to Harlem Hospital, where he soon afterward died.

HAITI'S SENATE ASKS PLEDGE OF INTEGRITY

American Occupation Arouses Fear That Independence of Island Is Threatened.

LIKELY TO BE REASSURED

But United States Government Is Expected to Insist Upon Control of Customs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The occupation by American forces of Government property in Haiti and the reinforcing of the American landing party have aroused the fears of Haitians for the sovereignty of their country. Today, acting on a resolution of the Haitian Senate, Solon Menos, the Haitian Minister at Washington, called at the State Department, and asked for assurances from the United States that the integrity and independence of Haiti would not be impaired by the American occupation.

It is expected that these assurances will be given, but whether they will satisfy whatever Government may succeed to power at Port au Prince is a different matter. Already one or more protests against the occupation of Haitian forts and Government buildings have been registered by M. Menos. The placing of a guard on the gunboat Pacifique, which constitutes the Haitian Navy, official confirmation of which was received today from Rear Admiral Caperton, will also probably be resented.

Protests, however, will not deter the United States from carrying out its plans. These plans seem now definitely to include the occupation of the island until peace is restored. The United States will then seek with the new Government of Haiti an arrangement similar to that under which the customs of Santo Domingo are administered by American officials.

Customs receipts are the largest item in the spoils of a successful revolution and their control by the United States would remove a constant source of domestic unrest, besides providing a sinking fund for the payment of international obligations which have constantly threatened Haiti with military occupation by Great Britain, France, and Germany.

Secretary Lansing conferred today with Rear Admiral Benson, Acting Secretary of the Navy, and word was sent to Rear Admiral Caperton expressing the desire of the State Department that no force be used unless absolutely necessary to preserve order and that there should be no further occupation of the republic than was necessary to keep peace.

It was said that the two Haitians killed yesterday by marines were resisting the order to disarm all natives not enrolled in the Haitian Army.

The American officers are to supervise the collection of customs to the extent of guarding against any diversion of funds. Further information is being sought by the Navy and State departments as to the exact extent to which American forces are in possession of custom houses.

General Bobo, who commands the party that overthrew the last Government, and who is now apparently making a clean sweep of all other factions, has shown a reasonable spirit toward the Americans by promising that his men on approaching Fort au Prince will disarm. If his promises prove sincere, it is probable that the United States will interpose no objection to his election as President of the republic.

Today's advices indicate, however, that when the Chambers of Parliament convene tomorrow for the Presidential election there may be rivals to General Bobo. Among possible candidates mentioned here today were M. Cauvin, a lawyer, who has already held office in the Government service, and M. Dartiguenave, President of the Haitian Senate.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Aug. 7.—Quiet prevailed here today following the occupation by the American naval forces yesterday of the office of the port and the national palace for the purpose of maintaining order and safeguarding life and property. The Americans did not take possession of the Custom House, which is still in the hands of the Haitians.

MacClinton, Answering Wife's Suit, Tells Where Affection Lies.

Mrs. Amy MacClinton, in a suit for a separation from Seth B. MacClinton, who is official stenographer for Stanley Dexter and head of the Putnam Reporting Company, at 20 Nassau Street, yesterday submitted to Supreme Court Justice Weeks a signed statement by her husband in which he pledged himself as committed to a preference for Miss Edna Morton, who is employed in his office.

Mr. MacClinton has replied to his wife's charge of cruel and inhuman treatment, saying that "temperamental" differences are the source of their marital troubles. The statement, in which Miss Morton joins him, according to Mrs. MacClinton, says in part: "We will submit to no final separation of any kind, whether a divorce results or not. We have carefully considered the future, and as both of us have passed the age of childhood, we feel that we can best judge whether happiness lies in that direction."

Justice Weeks has granted Mrs. MacClinton $20 a week alimony pending the trial of the suit.

Bates's Body Arrives Today.

The body of Lindon Bates, Jr., who was lost on the Cunard liner Lusitania on May 7 and which came ashore on the beach of Eddy Island, Galway Bay, Ireland, 230 miles from where the ship went down, will arive today on the American liner St. Paul. It will be taken to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow, where a private burial service will be held. A special funeral car will take the body to Mount Lebanon, N. Y., where it will be buried on the family estate.

BOY'S TABLE NOW AT FAIR.

Bears Signatures of President and All the Governors.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 7.—Sidney H. Doggett, a student at the East Orange High School, has received word from Charles F. Pancoast, Secretary of the New Jersey State Commission at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, that a table which he made is on exhibition in the New Jersey building. The table has a leather top, on which are inscribed the great seal of the United States, the seals of the States, the signatures of President Wilson, and all the Governors.

The table was started on its travels for the collection of the signatures a year ago and has just arrived at San Francisco with the list complete. It was lost for a time when the Governor of Texas misunderstood what the package was and let it lie in the belief that it was meant for his predecessor. Young Doggett learned carpentry as a high school student and made the table in his spare time.

To Show Our Military Weakness.

The American Defense Society, cooperating with the Special Relief Society, opened a permanent exhibit yesterday at 239 Fifth Avenue to show the lack of military preparedness of this country. The exhibit is to include the military equipment of all nations, with explanatory cards showing the deficiencies of each, particularly of the United States. The exhibit will include field guns, machine guns, aeroplanes and aerial equipment, munition statistics and naval statistics, while dummy figures will show the peace strength of the various armies of the world. Miniature warships of all types will also be a feature of the exhibit.

CHARITY GIFTS BY A WOMAN.

"You Never Pay More at Best's"

$10,500 FOR NOTES TO ANOTHER'S WIFE

Max Kinstler Says Bernstein Bought Letters, but Failed to Regain One.

QUOTES IT IN DIVORCE SUIT

"I Saw Your Beast; He Is Raving Mad," Clothing Man Is Alleged to Have Written.

Isidor Bernstein, head of the Bernstein Brothers clothing house, paid $10,500 to regain a batch of love letters which he wrote to Mrs. Eva Kinstler, wife of Max Kinstler, a cigar merchant, who is being sued for a divorce in the Supreme Court, according to Kinstler's affidavit, filed in the Supreme Court yesterday in opposition to a motion for alimony made by Mrs. Kinstler. Kinstler has set up a countersuit for divorce.

After Kinstler had received the money, he said in his affidavit, he reproduced one letter which he retained "inadvertently." Bernstein denied having written the letter, which Kinstler asserts was written to his wife by the clothing man when Mrs. Kinstler was at Lake Mohecan several years ago. The epistle reads:

"Most dearest angel of mine: My love, how is your good little heart? I hope you are sensible now to forget your troubles and think of having a good time up there. Don't stint yourself whatsoever. Listen, my only love, my angel, my evening star! But don't be flattered—it is my heart that is on fire. My soul is yearning for your true and sweet love.

"Oh, my God, how I love you! I cannot tell you all in words, but if I could only have you now I would crush you to my heart and you and I would be one body, one heart, and one soul, one everything. I hope to be with you soon and to tell you, mouth to mouth and heart to heart. I will hold you forever and forever.

"Sweet Angel of Mine."

"Yesterday you wrote me that you keep me as your best friend—in fact, as your husband—and then you want me to excuse you for being so outspoken, but you cannot control your feelings. God bless you for that. I want you to be as open to me as I am to you. Don't hide a thing from me, as I have one thousand reasons why you should not. The first reason is because I love you with all my whole heart and soul, and nothing is too much for me to do for you, and the other nine hundred and ninety-nine reasons are the same. Do you understand, Sweet Angel of mine?

"I saw your beast. He is raving mad, but I quieted him down. I will have another talk with him and let you know the result. He thinks you are in Cleveland. I advised him to keep cool and wait. I will close with my heart full of love and devotion to you and your sweet baby. God bless you both.

"Yours forever and ever,

"YOUR OWN ISIE."

The Kinstlers were married in 1910, and they have a daughter 4 years old. Mrs. Kinstler asserts in her complaint that her husband misconducted himself in company with Mrs. Ida Cohen in February last.

Kinstler denies the statements of his wife, and says the suit was not brought in good faith, but to compel him to be free from her so she can continue her relations with Bernstein, "who invaded my home and broke up my happiness." He recites in his affidavit that eight months before the suit was started his wife and her mother offered him $500 for a divorce, but he declined the offer.

Love Letters Bought.

The cigar man also recites that his wife was a stenographer for the Bernstein clothing house at the time he married her, and that Bernstein "was no doubt attracted to my wife because of her good looks." Kinstler also says that Bernstein sent Mrs. Kinstler to Lake Mohecan without the cigar man's knowledge. Also, that when he "inadvertently" came into possession of love letters written by Bernstein to Mrs. Kinstler he (Kinstler) engaged a lawyer to sue the clothing man for alienating the affections of Mrs. Kinstler, and also to sue Mrs. Kinstler for a separation. When Bernstein's lawyers learned that the love letters were genuine, Kinstler says in his affidavit, the lawyers induced their client to buy them and avoid the alienation suit.

Kinstler relates the circumstances under which he obtained possession of the letters. He alleges that his wife disappeared and that he was unable to find her. He taxed Bernstein with knowing where she was, and the clothing man said that she was in Cleveland, Kinstler asserts. It was on this occasion, according to Kinstler, when he was referred to as a raving beast.

The affiant then says that he learned of his wife's whereabouts at Lake Mohecan and surprised her by appearing there. When she took her daughter to dinner, Kinstler declares, he went into her room, opened her trunk, and found nine love letters written to her by Bernstein. He took them down to the veranda to read, he says, and his wife tried to take them from him by force. When she was unable to get hold of them, she wanted to telephone to New York, but he would not permit her. She then swooned, and he took her home at once.

Kinstler says further that Mrs. Ida Cohen, whom he engaged to procure evidence against his wife and who is named as co-respondent in the suit against him, got an offer of $500 to place him in a position which would constitute sufficient evidence for a divorce. Mrs. Cohen refused to make an affidavit to this effect, he says, unless she first received $200.

Bernstein and Mrs. Kinstler deny any improper conduct on their part. Mrs. Kinstler saying that her husband's charges are "frivolous." Justice Weeks has granted her nominal alimony.

NEW DEPARTMENT AT N. Y. U.

Four-Year Course in Commercial Training to be Offered.

Students in the College of Arts and Pure Science of New York University no longer will be obliged to confine their endeavors to purely academic and non-professional studies. According to plans contemplated for the collegiate year beginning next September, a four-year course in commercial training will be offered as a distinct department of the University College, which is at the University Heights division of the university.

Students who elect the course leading to the degree of bachelor of science in commerce, will be subjected to the same rules governing admission and other requirements as students choosing the regular academic subjects in the College of Arts and Pure Science. This will necessitate full time attendance at all prescribed recitations and lectures, so that students in this group will not enroll for part time as do the majority in various commercial branches in the larger department of the university at Washington Square.

The new course has been designed primarily for the requirements of those students who do not take work in the collegiate branch as a preparation for any of the professions, but as a foundation for the entrance upon a business career. While the regular study of prescribed subjects of general educational value will be adhered to during the first year, the work for the sophomore term will include studies of corporation finance, banking, bookkeeping and economics. The final two years are to be devoted almost exclusively to work along strictly technical lines, with supplementary study in research problems in the laboratory.

RELICS OF LONG AGO DUG UP IN SUBWAYS

Excavators Uncover a Prison Wall and a Well Sunk by the Early Dutch.

CANNON NEAR THE BATTERY

Sharp Lookout for Mementoes of Battle of Long Island Falls to Bring Reward.

Not the least interesting phase of subway building is the uncovering of interesting objects that have long been buried. Every month is marked with some such find, often not of sufficient historic interest to be noted in the reports of the excavators, but of great interest to the individual or the gang making the find. An engineer engaged on the work said yesterday that there were bound to be historic objects brought to the surface when it is considered that the excavators are burrowing through the most historic ground in the New World. Sometimes the finds are only a few coins, as for example those uncovered when the old flagpole at the Battery was taken down, to the uncovering of old prisons or historic buildings.

Many months ago Charles M. Higgins of 271 Ninth Street, Brooklyn, called the attention of the Public Service Commission to the fact that the excavation for the Fourth Avenue subway in that Borough would pass through the subsurface of the battlefield where the Battle of Long Island was fought at the beginning of the War for Independence. The route of the subway crosses a part of the battlefield in Fourth Avenue between Third and Fifth Streets. Mr. Higgins asked that the contractor be requested to look for relics. The commission notified the E. E. Smith Contracting Company, which had the contract for that part of the subway, to look for relics. They did so, but with no results. The work is now finished and during its progress no finds rewarded the diggers, who were kept always on the lookout.

It is the opinion of Mr. Higgins that the present street level is about ten or fifteen feet higher than the marsh lands and solid ground across which the soldiers of the Revolution fought the British. The fact that nothing was found was rather a disappointment to Mr. Higgins, for he expected the work would yield many valuable and historic relics. He said that the battle raged around an old stone house which stood at the corner of what is now Fifth Avenue and Third Street. He expected that the relics might be found anywhere along Fourth Avenue between First and Eighth Streets.

One of the most curious experiences was when the new Broadway subway between Park Place and Murray Street ran into the old Beach tunnel. This was a brick tube constructed in the late '60's for underground travel. The scheme of operation was ingenious. The design was to have circular cars fitting closely the inside of the tube. These were to be propelled to and fro by air blasts, and for this work powerful blowers were built. The enterprise never got beyond a semi-experimental stage. The tube was opened in 1870 or 1871, when one car was operated. There still live many men who remember taking a ride in the wonderful Beach Railroad.

The road, however, was never finished. It was covered over, and it remained but a memory in the back of the minds of a few men. When the Broadway work was started this old line was one of the first curiosities uncovered. The Degnon Contracting Company excavated and removed the old structure. To engineers the old tunnel was of more than ordinary interest because in its construction the hydraulic shield was used for the first time in America. The Public Service Commission presented the shield to Cornell University, where it is now exhibited.

A subway workman in the excavation at Broadway, near Reade Street, uncovered several bones one February day. He was about to toss them to one side when another of the gang came across more bones. It was decided to call the foreman. It was done and the latter cautioned the men to go carefully, as the bones were no doubt human bones. In the course of the work at that particular place three human skeletons were uncovered. They were buried about six feet under Broadway. An investigator from the Public Service Commission made inquiry at the New York Historical Society. The records were examined and the fact was brought out that at one time there had been a burying ground in the locality of Broadway and Reade Street. It dated from the early eighteenth century and was used to some extent during the British occupation of New York in Revolutionary times. It is supposed the skeletons were those of persons buried in this cemetery and not removed at the time the street was cut through.

At about the time of the discovery of the skeletons another contractor on the Broadway subway working in Trinity Place, just back of Trinity Churchyard, exposed an old well and the ruin of an old building. Both were several feet below the surface of the street, and the well was immediately beneath the retaining wall on the west side of Trinity Churchyard. The well was four feet in diameter and lined with stone. It had been filled in with earth and covered over. Local historians advanced the theory that it may have been one of the six wells sunk in this part of Manhattan in the days of the Dutch rule in New Amsterdam.

In April, 1914, F. L. Cranford, Inc., contractor for Sections Nos. 1 and 1-A of Route No. 5, covering the lower part of the Broadway subway in Manhattan, reported the discovery of a subterranean jail underneath Church Street and midway between Dey and Cortlandt Streets. The discovery was made at a depth of about thirty feet. The workmen at first uncovered the top of a stone wall. As soon as its character was discovered the workmen took some pains and no little pride in the uncovering of their "find." It proved to be the wall of a prison fitted with windows fortified with iron bars. The wall extended from a point about eight feet below the surface to the bottom of the excavation.

An antiquarian who examined the wall came to the conclusion that it was part of a prison that had been erected in the early days of the Dutch settlers. From its barred windows the prisoners could perhaps look out upon the Hudson in days when Indian canoes were the principal craft on that stream and when the arrival of a sailing ship brought the entire town to the Battery. "That old wall could tell of many a heartache," was the comment of a sentimental foreman.

The ends of the prison wall are still under ground, awaiting the coming of other excavators, for, as the subway ran directly through it, the contractors simply demolished the centre.

At the Battery an old cannon was excavated, and the contractors on the Battery section of the Seventh Avenue subway reported the finding of two cannon balls a short distance below the surface near the Battery station of the existing subway. Both were of iron, encrusted with rust, one about two inches and the other about four inches in diameter.

TOBACCO "CURE" MAY KILL.

Applied to a Wound, It Apparently Causes Blood Poisoning.

George W. Combs, 70 years old, of Freeport, L. I., is in a critical condition of blood poisoning as a result of applying chewing tobacco to a deep wound in his left hand caused by the slipping of a saw while he was at work in the Freeport shipyard. His arm has become infected, but, because of his age, amputation is considered impossible, as the shock, attending surgeons declare, would probably kill him.

Combs thought little of his injury at first. A fellow-workman sugested the application of chewing tobacco to the wound "as an old-fashioned remedy." Combs followed the advice, and his arm swelled to twice its natural size. Dr. William J. Steele of Baldwin, L. I., who is in attendance, says his chances for recovery are slight.

DUPED CITY OF $10 MONTHLY

Had Good Wages, but Wife Begged of Poormaster for a Year.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 7.—Depending on the city for the ordinary necessaries of life and taking care of the luxuries himself, Rosario Mistrat of 152 Columbus Avenue lived a life of ease during the past year or more.

Notwithstanding the fact that he made $2.60 a day, he sent his wife to Poormaster John Meader every week to plead for food. The woman received orders for food to the amount of at least $10 a month for more than a year. She pleaded with eyes filled with tears, that her husband was out of work and the six children starving.

A short time ago Mr. Meader and a district nurse visited the Mistrat house. Entering the kitchen door, they detected odors of cooking food. In wash tubs they found a quantity of cracked ice completely surrounding at least thirty bottles of beer, and in another place were two bottles of choice wine, one partly used.

In the dining room sat Mr. and Mrs. Mistrat, the children, and a number of friends, eating and drinking. The officers then left, and later a warrant was issued for Mistrat's arrest. He pleaded guilty this morning to imposing on the city. When a $10 fine was imposed he sent his wife to a bank to draw the money.

Commission Seeks Kaiser's Soldier.

Justice Callaghan of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn signed an order yesterday for the appointment of a commission to take the testimony of Ernest Vollmers, a German soldier, in a suit filed in Nassau County. Vollmers is an officer and is said to be now on the western battle line. Just how the commission is to get to Vollmers in the trenches was not explained in court.

POLICE NAVY GUNS STOP SWIFT PIRATE

New Rapid-Firers on Launches Put to Use for First Time on the Hudson.

FIND LOOT WORTH $1,800

Harbor Patrol Boats Now Equipped to Stop Any Vessel, and, If Need Be, Sink Her.

Persons about Battery Park studied with interest yesterday a long, low, rakish launch tied up in Harbor A. It was captured from river pirates a few nights ago in the North River opposite Forty-eighth Street by Acting Captain James W. Hallock and his men after they had fired three shots at the pirates from a police launch with one of the new rapid-fire automatic guns.

Hallock and his men spied the motor boat some fifty yards ahead. They suspected from its contour and because it was navigating without lights that it was one of the pirates that annoy both shippers and the police. Hallock started in pursuit, the pirates increased their speed, and there began a pretty race. The police launch, the faster vessel, after a pursuit of half a mile, rapidly began to overhaul the pirate. As the pursuers came within hailing distance they saw that there were two men in the craft, and called to them to stop in the name of the law. The pirates replied with oaths and jeers.

Then it was that persons on other craft and along the waterfront were startled by the boom of the police launch's rapid-fire gun. It was not until the excitement had died down that they learned that the shots came from a rapid-fire gun which the police were using for the first time in an attempt to rid the waters of pirates. The gun was fired three times in rapid succession, and at the first report the pirates changed their course, heading shoreward. The police hesitated to fire again, fearing a stray shot might injure some citizen. They were then, however, only twenty-five feet behind the thieves, and they made a desperate spurt to cut them off from land. Just when it appeared that their efforts would succeed the thieves reached a pier opposite Forty-eighth Street, and, abandoning their craft, climbed quickly to the pier and escaped in the dark.

The captured launch was painted a dull gray, a color adopted by pirates to make their craft difficult to see at night. A search of the boat revealed $1,800 worth of rubber, which had been stolen from a lighter.

Commissioner Woods and Inspector Thomas Myers have just finished transforming the harbor police service into a miniature navy. Each of the ten police launches has been equipped by the Police Commissioner with an automatic .30-calibre rapid-fire gun capable of firing 400 shots a minute. The cartridges are fed from a belt, and the shots carry two miles. The guns, carrying rangefinders, are mounted on the forward decks. The police steamer Patrol has been supplied with two rapid-fire Hotchkiss one-pounders, one fore and the other aft. The Patrol also carries four of the automatics. It is estimated that the new equipment has increased the efficiency of the harbor police 50 per cent. One incentive to arm the boats was the fact that the police are giving much time to patrolling the piers where transatlantic liners are moored. All suspicious vessels are held up and searched.

Commissioner Woods found that many methods in vogue in the service were antiquated and with Inspector Myers he set about raising the standard. In this he has had the co-operation of the United States Navy and Rear Admiral Usher, Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, detailed Navy Quartermasters to instruct the police in the operation of the guns, and a wigwag code of flag and lantern signals.

Since the first of the year the harbor police have taken sixty-four prisoners, of whom thirty-four were charged with felonies. They have recovered more than $9,000 worth of stolen property, and have taken from the water 395 bodies, sixty-five of which were brought to the surface with grappling irons.

Arrested at Hotel McAlpin.

Edwin J. Cormack, former superintendent of the Waterbury (Conn.) County Club and the Waterbury City Club, was arrested at the Hotel McAlpin, charged with having had $1.85 worth of telephone calls and a milk punch charged to him on the ground that he was a guest of the hotel when he was not. In court Cormack gave his address as the Hollywood Golf Club, Deal Beach, N. J. He was held in $500 bail, but probably the charge will not be pressed. The prisoner recently was under observation in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital.

DR. DAVIS HELD BACK BY LACK OF MONEY

She Holds Many of Investigators' Recommendations Had Been Planned by Her.

HAYES WILL NOT RETURN

Commissioner Hopes to Bring About Many Reforms on Blackwell's Island.

A copy of the findings of the State Prison Commission in the investigation it made several weeks ago into conditions at the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island reached Commissioner of Correction Katharine B. Davis yesterday morning. In the report the commission denounced the administration of affairs on the island and recommended the removal of Warden Patrick Hayes. The report came to the office while Dr. Davis was away, but it was at once forwarded to her by Deputy Commissioner Burdette G. Lewis.

Dr. Davis spent the day at Bedford Hills. Her opinions of affairs on Blackwell's Island have been forcibly expressed, particularly when, as a witness, she appeared before the State Prison Commission. The three great handicaps she found on the Island, she said, were antiquated equipment, inadequate for present needs, lack of money to make needed improvements, and a Warden of the old school. A handicap to future improvement she finds in the fact that now that Warden Hayes is to be retired, she has to go to the civil service list to get a Warden instead of going out and engaging one of the best prison men in the country. This step she was about to take, she said, when the Civil Service Commission stopped her.

Many of the changes the Prison Commission recommends to Governor Whitman, Dr. Davis said, she had planned ever since she took office. This desire to reform conditions was manifest back in the Gaynor Administration. At that time a set of plans for reform was submitted and while not carried out in their entirety they have been from time to time developed, especially whenever money could be obtained.

Investigation Caused Unrest.

In a speech to the commission Dr. Davis deplored the investigation, for, she said, it not only stirred up a spirit of unrest among the 1,200 inmates, but it gave publicity to changes that were being quietly made, such as the strict medical examination of the men and the separation of the sick from the healthy. As for the recommendation that the prisoners suffering from tuberculosis be separated from those unaffected, Dr. Davis, on a recent tour of inspection, showed just how Warden Murtha had made arrangements a year ago to care for the women prisoners on Hart's Island and suffering from the disease, and is building a hospital for the men patients. Patients from Blackwell's Island are to be sent there. In the meantime, the separation urged by the Prison Commission is now in effect.

The principal objection of the commission to the administration of Warden Hayes is met by the statement that the Warden is now on leave and upon his return will retire. Many of the objections of the Prison Commission, both the Commissioner and the prison physician say, cannot be met because of physical impossibilities. In the first place, Commissioner Davis has said, the penitentiary is too overcrowded to admit of each prisoner having a cell to himself. Doubling up under present conditions was, she said, absolutely necessary, because of lack of space. Until new buildings were provided or some of the prisoners taken elsewhere the administration will be unable to regulate the amount of cubic air space allowed each prisoner. Dr. Davis will, however, it is said, try and carry out the recommendation of the commission that some of the prisoners be allowed to sleep in the corridors. The success of this experiment will depend largely upon the behavior of the prisoners.

That prisoners are confined in their cells from an hour to an hour and a half each day, is a matter of testimony, but, the Commissioner said, it was necessary to confine them because the time of their confinement is during the visitor's hour. The practice will have to continue because, she said, the administration is handicapped by lack of proper recreation ground. For the same reason, she said, she was unable to carry out the commission's recommendation that prisoners be given more outdoor recreation.

Dr. Davis has never ordered or approved the method of punishing culprits by turning a fifty-pound hose on them until they were unconscious, as was done at least twice under Warden Hayes's administration. She explained that this form of punishment had been used "to meet an emergency" and she had promptly ordered that it be discontinued.

To Start a Commissary.

Lack of laundry facilities, is the answer to the charge that prisoners' clothing was not sufficiently clean. Already it is planned to meet the objection of the investigators that prisoners are not allowed to purchase sanitary articles, tooth brushes, soap and other toilet necessities, by establishing at the penitentiary a commissary department.

It is also probable that Dr. Davis will take some steps to make the "cooler" more "comfortable," though it is known that she believes in some form of punishment which will really carry with it at least inconvenience. As to the prisoners being confined in their cells over Sundays and holidays, Dr. Davis said, she did not believe the health of any had been menaced by this confinement. She pointed out they go out to church, to meals and to wash, which prevented the confinement from being continuous.

There is one charge for which the Commissioner has no excuse to offer and that is "No. 10—That prisoners are not allowed daily newspapers." She told the commission that she did not believe in prisoners reading the daily papers, which she characterized as being daily records of crime. She allows the prisoners to have magazines, but newspapers have been excluded from the penitentiary by her orders, and she is not likely to change them unless ordered to do so.

The prison officials, at the request of Prison Commissioner Hurd, has been considering the building of a fence across the Island so as to separate the penitentiary, under the charge of the Commissioner of Correction, from the City Hospital, under the charge of the Commissioner of Charities. It has been felt that this must be done before the question of allowing the prisoners outdoor recreation is considered.

During the next twelve months many changes are planned for Blackwell's Island, it is believed, from the fact that the budget request for the Department of Corrections for 1916—which is now before Mayor Mitchel—is reported to call for an increase of almost $500,000 over the 1915 allowance, which was in the neighborhood of $1,312,000.

HARRY SCANLON GETS STAY.

Harry Scanlon of 57 Prospect Street, Long Island City, who was convicted before Justice Scudder in the Queens County Supreme Court last June of participating in an attack on Mrs. Clara Ellert in Joe Cassidy's old Democratic club house in Long Island City, has obtained a certificate of reasonable doubt from Justice Kelly in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. Following his conviction, Scanlon was sentenced to three years in Sing Sing, the same sentence given to James Heffernan convicted of the same charge, who is now in Great Meadow Prison. Scanlon has been kept in the Queens County Jail pending the outcome of his application. In his decision Justice Kelly took the precaution to say that unless the case was prosecuted vigorously he would revoke the certificate.

Heffernan and Scanlon were process servers in District Attorney Matthew J. Smith's office and they were charged with having taken Mrs. Ellert, 17 years old, who had gone to the District Attorney's office looking for bail for her husband, to Cassidy's club house on a pretext of getting her a lawyer.

GRANTS BAIL TO 8 ACCUSED OF MURDER

TO FIX TRIAL DATE TUESDAY

Justice Ford, In Releasing Defendants, Says Evidence Against Them Is Rather Weak.

Four big touring cars laden with men, women and children, including two infants in their mothers' arms, were lined up yesterday afternoon at the Chambers Street curb in front of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank Building, where Supreme Court Justice Ford's chambers are situated, and their occupants cheered when eight members of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union were released on bail pending their trial on a charge of murdering Hyman Liebowitz, a strikebreaker.

As soon as the eight accused men, who had been in the Tombs prison since May, appeared on the sidewalk, they were recognized by their wives and children, who hurried pellmell out of the machines with outstretched arms. The family of each prisoner overwhelmed him with caresses.

Hardly were the first impulsive greetings over when Abraham Levy, the attorney who argued the habeas corpus writs upon which Justice Ford released the prisoners, appeared in the doorway of the building, than the crowd cheered him.

The eight men were indicted in May for the Liebowitz murder, which took place in 1910 during the general strike of the garment workers in this city. Their indictment followed exposures to the District Attorney by "Dopey Benny" Fein, Liebowitz, who had been a member of the union, returned to work to save his family from starvation. He was said to have been lured into rooms of the union and hit on the head, the assault resulting in his death.

The eight men released are Max Sigman, Secretary of the union; Morris Strupnicker, Solomon Metz, Julius Wulff, John Wedinger, John Auspitz, Max Singer and Louis Holzer. Sigman's bail was fixed at $25,000, Strupnicker's at $20,000, and the others at $15,000 each. The National Surety Company went on their bonds.

Justice Ford's opinion releasing them says in part:

These defendants are all married, have families, and reside in the City of New York. None of them appears to have anything in the nature of a criminal history. The evidence against them, as shown by the minutes of the Grand Jury, is, to say the least, inconclusive as to all, and of questionable probative force as to most of them. I have little doubt that they will appear for trial if bailed.

I adopt the words of Mr. Justice Blanchard in admitting three of them to bail under a former indictment for the same crime: "On the record before me, I deem it my duty to admit the defendants to bail."

The men are to be free at least until next Tuesday, when they are to be taken before Supreme Court Justice Tompkins, an up-State jurist, who is to sit in the case, who will then fix the date of their trial.

40 FIRMS CAUGHT IN FRAUD.

Leon Bamberger and 20 Alleged Confederates Are Indicted.

The Federal Grand Jury unsealed an indictment yesterday against Leon Bamberger and twenty-one others, charged with being his confederates, in using the mails to defraud. The Grand Jury has made an extended investigation of Bamberger's dealings on evidence presented by Frank M. Roosa, United States District Attorney. The indictment charges that the firms defrauded number more than forty and that the aggregate value of the goods involved was $50,000.

According to the postal authorities Bamberger has served terms of imprisonment in England and on Blackwell's Island, and the frauds have been going on since his release from the Penitentiary six years ago. The indictment, describing the scheme to defraud, charges that Bamberger obtained, by advertising, employment as a salesman on commission from merchants with whom he placed orders for printing and various kinds of goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured and dealt in by them. These orders, the indictment charges, directed the sending of the goods to the other twenty-one defendants, who were represented by Bamberger as customers of good financial standing and responsibility and able to pay for the goods forwarded to them.

The indictment further charges that Bamberger, when he sent in the fake orders, knew that the customers were not of good financial standing and responsibility and did not intend to pay for the merchandise, but to realize on it by quick sale and defraud the consignors. Bamberger, the indictment adds, collected a commission on the sales, and also shared in the proceeds of the men to whom he forwarded the goods. Nineteen of the defendants arrested by Post Office Inspectors Barber and Schaeffer are:

Leon Bamberger; Henri P. Alexander, optician; Harry Kramer of Mendes, Birnbaum & Kramer; Charles W. Boye, real estate agent; Frank L. Seaver, connected with Capricorn Chemical Company; Henry W. Probst, proprietor of a pearl button works; Joseph B. Schwartsberg, lawyer, formerly conected with the Century Bond & Mortgage Company; Harry L. Gould, connected with the Equitable Finance Company; Herman Roth, lawyer; Jack Levy, Henry C. Ritzheimer, Dr. Francis E. Smith, Benedict Radus of Crescent Music Company, Achilles Seraphic of the South American Commercial Company, Efstraty Sother, George Horn, Jr., of the Whip Café; Sigmund Weitzenblum, collector, and Harry S. Goldman of the Latin-American Film Company. The names of the three other men indicted, but not yet arrested, are withheld, although it is known that one of them is a lawyer and the other a physician.

Among the firms named as losing by the transactions are: The Marbridge Printing Company, Bernard Kopilk, the National Shirt Company, Neuman Brothers, Evers Brothers, The Tudor Press, Schulco Press, Greenpoint Power Press, Latimer Press, Eagle Chemical Products Company, Anthony Paul, Jacobs & Gilman, Continental Press, Edward L. Murray, Century Printing Company, Jacob Rubin, The Lincoln Printing Company, Francis E. Fitch, Halstead Brush Company, Sempler-Rieger Company, Commercial Despatch Company, Chinese-American Food Company, The Modern Art Printing Company, and Harman Brothers.

1,300 CIVILIANS BEGIN ARMY LIFE TUESDAY

Two Trains of New Yorkers Start Tomorrow for Month's War Work at Plattsburg.

MANY NOTABLE MEN GOING

Regular Army Officers Will Command and Teach Tactics and Demonstrate Duties.

"The Business Men's Military Camp Special" will start from Grand Central Terminal for Plattsburg tomorrow night in two sections, the first at 9:15 and the second ten minutes later. About the same time another special will leave Boston with the contingent from that vicinity.

The camp will be organized on Tuesday morning, and by noon most of the 1,300 recruits will have donned the khaki and campaign hats of the regular army. Captain Halstead Dorey, U. S. A., senior aid to Major General Leonard Wood, Commander of the Eastern Department, will be in command with a corps of subordinates, every one a graduate of West Point selected for unusual fitness. General Wood will spend much time at the camp, as will many other high officers of the army and the National Guard.

Bankers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists, brokers, policemen, and clerks will be there, and among them Dudley Field Malone, Alderman H. H. Curran, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Willard D. Straight, Hamilton Fish, Jr., Raymond Belmont, Police Captain Edward Hughes, Rhinelander Waldo, the Blagden brothers, C. C. Rumsey, J. C. Fargo, and T. W. Carnegie.

Traveling with the New Yorkers will be the Philadelphia and New Jersey contingents. From every State in the Union the recruits are coming, the largest delegations after New York, Boston, and Philadelphia being those from Chicago and Pittsburgh. Nearly every polo player and steeplechase rider in the country will attend, also former stars of the gridiron, among them Percy Haughton, the Harvard coach, and Frank Butterworth, still remembered as the greatest Yale fullback.

The New Yorkers have been preparing for several weeks for the month's tour at Lake Champlain, drilling in the regimental armories, and most of them have read the military books recommended by General Wood.

Two big armored automobiles, each dragging a 3-inch field gun, started for Plattsburg from this city yesterday. The trucks, which are protected with steel armor, are said to be the very last word. Ten other war automobiles will also go to Plattsburg, carrying machine guns, fourteen of which have been procured. Each of the two big trucks can carry 15,000 rounds of machine gun ammunition, 500 one-pound shells, and 900 rounds of 3-inch shrapnel.

Arrangements for the air service are being made and two machines and their pilots will probably be at the camp by the middle of the week.

The food will be the usual fare of the regular army, prepared by army cooks, eaten from unbreakable metal plates. As a regular officer puts it: "This is not going to be an ice cream and cake affair, but real army work." The Thirtieth U. S. Infantry, stationed at Plattsburg Barracks, will take part in the battle exercises that will be featured.

The program of instruction will be along the lines indicated in this memorandum of the Army General Staff:

Physical drill, marching, camping, tent pitching, making and breaking camp, signaling, loading and unloading wagons, camp expedients, field cooking, camp sanitation, first aid to the injured, personal hygiene, and the care of troops in the field will be taught by practice.

Informal talks by selected officers will be given on the following subjects: Use and duties of the different arms and branches of the service. (Infantry, Field Artillery, Cavalry, Engineers, Signal Troops, and the Medical Corps;) field fortifications, including the laying out, construction, and use of trenches; military bridge building; use of explosives; demolitions, the installation and operation of field lines of electrical information and the use of buzzers, field telephones and radiotelegraphic apparatus, signal flags, heliographs and acetylene lanterns, and other apparatus used by Signal Corps organizations in the field; the tactical organization of the military forces of the United States, the reasons therefor, and comparison with that of foreign armies; the supply (food and material) of an army and the problems connected therewith; the psychology of war; the military history of our country—not the illuminated schoolbook versions of our victories merely, but the true versions, as taken from the official records of our failures and defeats, as well as our successes and victories, with reasons therefor; our military policy, past and present, the necessity for some sound, definite military policy and the adoption thereof; and the present scheme of organization of the land forces of the United States.

The schedule of instruction will include a practice march of several days' duration, in which, as nearly as possible, such actual campaign conditions of march, bivouac, and combat, as the assumed situation would exact, will be followed.

With the large number of men it will be possible to organize a regiment at almost war strength. There will probably be twelve companies in addition to a machine gun organization, and each company will be commanded by a regular army officer.

EUGENICS AS BASIS OF NEW ARISTOCRACY

Would Consist of Apollos and Venuses, Says Dr. Kellogg—Sees Race Going to Seed.

URGES STATE REGULATION

Deems Health and Marriage Inspection Imperative—Luther Burbank Supports a Similar Idea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—The world needs a new aristocracy—"a real aristocracy made up of Apollos and Venuses and their fortunate progeny"—said Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich., in an address tonight on "The Eugenics Registry" before the second National Conference on Race Betterment.

"Instead of such an aristocracy," Dr. Kellogg continued, "we are actually building up an aristocracy of lunatics, idiots, paupers, and criminals. These unfit persons already have reached the proportions of a vast multitude—500,000 lunatics, 80,000 criminals, 100,000 paupers, 90,000 idiots, 90,000 epileptics—and we are supporting these defectives in idleness like real aristocrats, at an expense of $100,000,000 a year; and this mighty host of mental and moral cripples is increasing, due to unrestricted marriage and other degenerative influences, at a more rapid rate than the sounder part of the population, so that they are bound in time to constitute the majority unless some check is put upon the increase. Every one of these lunatics possesses the right to vote even in States where women are not given the right of franchise."

Dr. Kellogg proposed a "Scheme for Race Betterment," which he thought should be set in operation as speedily as possibly. This included the establishment of a "health registry" on which should be recorded the results of an annual health inspection of individuals made by a bureau maintained by the State for the purpose; and of a "eugenic registry" to accomplish in behalf of race hygiene "what the health registry would seek to do for personal health."

"The establishment of such a registry will be one of the most effective means of arousing an interest in health as a personal asset," he said, speaking of the first. "Such a registry would be invaluable in connection with the operation of restricted marriage laws. In time, health as an asset will come to be esteemed as more precious than gold. "A eugenics registry would be the beginning of a new and glorified human race which some time, far down in the future, will have so mastered the forces of nature that disease and degeneracy will have been eliminated. Hospitals and prisons will be no longer needed, and the golden age will have been restored."

Another suggestion by Dr. Kellogg was a health survey in every community at least every five years. Other proposals included State dispensaries "with every facility for the most thoroughgoing investigation of morbid conditions"; systematic health inspection of schools and the organization of a thoroughgoing system of health education by the State.

"Physical perfection contests embracing all ages should be inaugurated in every community," he said. "Medals should be awarded to the winners in each grade. By means of lectures, moving pictures and other means the public must be educated to an appreciation of the importance of periodical medical examinations for the purpose of discovering the beginnings of nervous and other disorders."

Only by constant selection of the best can any race be improved, said Luther Burbank, the plant specialist, in an address on "Evolution and Variation with the Fundamental Purpose of Sex." Environment and education alone cannot, he said, make appreciable progress in the improvement of the race. But with favorable surroundings and the selection of the best types, the field for improvement is limitless.

"It is becoming increasingly necessary," he said, "to impress the fact that there are two distinct lines in the improvement of any race—one by favorable environment, which brings individuals up to their best possibilities; the other 10,000 times more important and effective, selection of the best individuals through a series of generations. By this means, and by this only, can any race of plants, animals or man be permanently or radically improved."

VESTRIS QUITS WAR ZONE.

Former Munitions Ship Leaves Here for South America.

The Lamport & Holt steamship Vestris sailed yesterday for Brazil and Argentine ports, after being engaged for nine months in carrying stores and war munitions from New York to Havre for the Allies. She is still painted a war gray, with black funnel, but all her cabin accommodations and saloons have been redecorated in white and gold. She had 250 cabin and 50 third-class passengers.

Just before the liner was due to leave her pier in Brooklyn, Charles J. Carter, a first-cabin passenger booked for Buenos Aires, received a telegram stating that his wife had met with a serious accident. He got his baggage ashore and left for California at 3 o'clock.

The Vestris will bring back a big cargo of chilled beef from Buenos Aires and mutton from the Falkland Islands, which will be embarked at Montevideo.

North Beach to Have Carnival.

North Beach is preparing for its seventh annual carnival, which will last five days, beginning Sept. 7. The Mardi Gras of New Orleans will be taken as a model. There will be a King, Queen, and Mayor of the festival. Fireworks will be displayed on the faterfront every Tuesday and Thursday evening from now until the close of the carnival.

TENNESSEE'S MASCOT BACK.

Warship's Pet on 20,000-Mile Voyage Saw Turkish Port Shelled.

"Jack," alias "Sultan," is as smart a little fox terrier as ever walked on four legs. He is also the pride of the officers and men of the United States armored cruiser Tennessee, of which he is the official mascot.

Jack sailed away from New York on the Tennessee just one year ago, and returned only last week after a voyage on which he traveled more than 20,600 nautical miles. Eight of the months he was away he spent in Turkish waters. He witnessed the shelling of a Turkish port by a French cruiser, barked his approval of the rescue of several thousand refugees in Palestine, mascotted the Tennessee's baseball team to victory in one of the few games of baseball ever played in Turkey, and finally posed for his picture, as shown here, on the Turkish shore near Smyrna.

"JACK,"

In the picture he wears the cap of an enlisted naval musician, and holds in his "port paw," as emblematic of his authority, a "big stick."

MEMORIAL TO VANDERBILT.

Horseman Friends of Lusitania Victim Plan to Erect Fountain.

Friends and admirers of the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt in his capacity as horseman are uniting to raise a fund to erect a memorial to him, which, according to present plans, will be "a drinking fountain for horses and dogs as well as their masters, and shall be in a suitable part of the city." The lead is being taken by the National Horse Show Association, of which Mr. Vanderbilt was President, and subscriptions (limited at present to $100) may be sent to its Secretary, James T. Hyde, at 16 East Twenty-third Street, or to the Harriman National Bank, 527 Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Vanderbilt was one of the leading horsemen of his time. Beginning soon after he was out of school, he was soon whip in the daily runs of the coaching club from New York to Ardsley, and in 1901 joined James Hazen Hyde in the record-breaking drive to Philadelphia and back in a day. Later he took his coaches to England and worked the Brighton road for the rest of his life. In 1900 he went into the breeding of horses on an extensive scale and had more than 100 hackneys at Oakland Farm, near Newport, when he died.

Among the subscribers to date are E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia, the present President of the National Horse Show Association; Robert A. Fairbairn, Alfred B. Maclay, William H. Moore, James T. Hyde, G. L. Boissevain, Harry Content, John McE. Bowman, Walter Webb-Ware, Charles A. Baudouine, F. L. Merriam, E. von de Horst Koch, Sir Adam Beck, J. W. Harriman, J. A. Spoor, Roy C. Gasser, and John R. Townsend.

TUG SINKS FISHING BOAT.

Collision Off Governors Island Caused by Mistake in Signals.

The fishing motor boat Nettie was sunk yesterday off the south end of Governors Island after colliding with the tug Triumph of the Russell Towing Company of Newtown Creek, which was in charge of Captain Andrew Smith. The Nettie had come up to the Battery early in the morning, but as there were no anglers to go out fishing, Captain Wertheim decided to go back to Gravesend Bay.

The collision occurred through the misunderstanding of signals in the thick haze which hung over the water, it was said. The four men on the fishing boat jumped on to the tug as their boat sunk under their feet. She will be raised today by a wrecking tug.

ARREST THREE MEN AS WHITE SLAVERS

Police Accuse Newark Youths of "Selling" and Delivering Three Girls.

PRICE $10 CASH, $30 LATER

Trap Laid by Lieutenant Enright, but Prisoners Say He Was to Get Jobs for Young Women.

Three young men who gave Newark addresses were brought before Magistrate McQuade in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday charged with white slavery, and when they are arraigned again today for further examination it is probable they will be faced with three Newark girls, whom they are accused of "selling" for $40 each—$10 down and $30 in a second instalment.

Police Lieutenant Enright, of Deputy Commissioner Lord's staff, "bought" the girls from the prisoners, according to the police. This is the police story of the events leading up to the arrests: Lieutenant Enright met the three men at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street two weeks ago. They introduced themselves as Michael Perna of 214 Waverly Place, Newark; William Perna, his brother, same address, and Anthony Carninila of 269 Belmont Avenue, Newark. Enright posed as the keeper of a disorderly house, and complained of his inability to obtain pretty girls, whereupon the young men volunteered to supply him with three beauties.

Dickering over prices followed, and finally it was agreed that Enright was to pay the men $10 in cash for each of the three girls, and later $30 apiece. On Friday afternoon the men delivered the hand baggage of the girls to Enright, who took it to Police Headquarters. It was arranged that the girls should be delivered on Friday night, and accordingly Enright, accompanied by a police matron, met the alleged white slavers in the evening at Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, where the three girls were given into their care after Lieutenant Enright had given each of the men a marked $10 bill.

Lieutenant Enright, the matron and the girls entered a taxicab, driven by policeman Finnegan of the Detective Bureau, and went to the Women's Night Court, where the girls were arraigned on charges of vagrancy and committed to the Florence Crittendon Home. They said they were Bella Stephenson, 19 years old, of 57 Boston Street; Lillian Hillman, 19 years old, of same address, and Katherine Farrell, 19 years old, of 447 South Sixteenth Street, all of Newark. Bella Stephenson told the Court that she had married Michael Perna four months ago, and had been compelled by him to sell herself.

After receiving their money, according to the police, the three men walked to Sixth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street, where they were placed under arrest by detectives who had watched them deliver the girls and accept the money from Lieutenant Enright. The police say that one of the marked $10 bills was found on each prisoner, but the men protested that they had not "sold" the girls. They said that Enright had represented himself as an employment agent and that they had attempted to obtain house-work for the girls through him.

NOTABLE MEN FOR FORUM.

Montclair to Hear Timely Topics Discussed.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Aug. 7.—Unity Forum of this town, which brings notable men together annually to discuss public questions, has announced that the opening lecture on "The Problems of Today" will be by Norman Angell, who will have for his subject "America and the World Crisis."

Dr. Angell will speak on Oct. 31. Other speakers already engaged for the course are Major George Haven Putnam and the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, who will talk on National disarmament. An evening will be given to the opportunities of the United States in South America, the speaker on that occasion being John Barrett, head of the Pan-American League. All the lectures are free to the public.

To Protest Against Smoke.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Aug. 7.—Residents along the Palisades are preparing to protest to the State authorities against the black smoke nuisance caused by several factories, and also against an alleged stench nuisance. A Home Protective League is being formed to further the protest.

MAP NEW WAR GAME FOR ATLANTIC FLEET

Navy Again to be Put to Mimic Test of Protecting Coast from Invasion.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 7.—The Atlantic fleet is again to be put to the test of protecting the Eastern seaboard from invasion by a supposed foreign fleet.

Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, its commander, announced tonight that officers of the Naval War College were mapping out the problems of another war game, to take place after the target practice in Narragansett Bay next Fall.

According to Admiral Fletcher, the manoeuvres will be based on lessons derived from the mimic war of last June, when the "enemy" fleet accomplished its purpose in effecting a landing on the shores of Chesapeake Bay. As in the previous war game, it is expected that the Atlantic fleet will be called upon to protect the coast from Eastport, Me., to Hatteras.

DOWNEY FOR CLAIMS BENCH.

President Expected to Transfer Present Controller of Treasury.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Announcement of the selection of George E. Downey of Indiana for appointment as a Judge of the United States Court of Claims is expected to be made in a few days. Mr. Downey is now Controller of the Treasury. The vacancy on the Claims bench was caused by the resignation of ex-Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania. He had been nominated to the judgeship and the Senate had confirmed the nomination, but Mr. Palmer did not qualify.

President Wilson has before him at Cornish the papers of those who aspired to the Court of Claims vacancy. There were many candidates.

Cult's Leader Commits Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Aug. 7.—Hugo Kempff, 60 years old, said to be the founder of the religious sect known as "Government by God," ended his life last night by inhaling illuminating gas at his home in Garden Street, Maywood. The body was found by his son, Arthur. Kempff had tried twice to end his life by hanging, but was discovered in time.

DEFENSE SENTIMENT GROWS

The Navy League reports a sweeping revolution in sentiment in the Middle West on the subject of national defense since the outbreak of the war. The report was made public by Ralph B. Strassburger, the league director in charge of the work.

"The Middle West today is lined up solid for a big navy," said Mr. Strassburger. "In the oldest and most conservative Democratic districts from which the greatest opposition has come in the past the greates revolution has taken place. Headed by Champ Clark the Congressional delegation from Missouri has swung into line for national defense.

"The change in sentiment in Missouri is typical of the change which has taken place all through the Middle West. National defense and the necessity of being prepared to resist aggression is upon every tongue, and the forces of the country are lined up splendidly to demand from Congress adequate measures of preparedness at once. In no section is the patriotism and pride of the nation higher, and no section has done more for its country in wars of the past. No section is more solidly behind the foreign policy of the President at present, and if war should come, no section will give more generously of men and money in the common cause."

"During the past month in the Middle West the Navy League has made an exhaustive canvass of sentiment in favor of better national defenses in many localities. Committees have been organized in every State, and preparations have been made to hold a series of great national defense weeks in all cities of importance."

Monorail Co. Receiver Sues City.

Justice Augustus N. Hand, in an order made yesterday in the Federal District Court, authorized Frederick J. Phillips, the receiver of the Monorail Construction Company, in the suit brought by Amory G. Hodges, to commence and prosecute an action against the City of New York for the recovery of $2,500 in gold exempt corporate stock of the city which was deposited with the City of New York on behalf of the Pelham Park Railroad Company on Aug. 4, 1909. The deposit was made as security on the application of the Pelham Park Railroad Company to the Board of Estimate for permission to change the motor power of its line from horse power to electricity operated by the system known as the American Monorail System.

LAWMAKERS SEEK JUSTICE FOR INDIANS

DIVORCE SYSTEM A MENACE

So-Called Peacemakers' Tribunals of the Tonawandas and Senecas Said to be Unjust to Women.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Aug. 7.—If the Committee on Indian Relations of the Constitutional Convention has its way, the convention will make the communal conditions of the red man in this State its serious concern. There are about six thousand Indians residing on the various reservations in the State of New York and and investigation conducted by the committee has shown to the satisfaction of all of the members that they are a much neglected lot.

The particular friend of the red man among the delegates is James P. Lindsay, a lawyer, who lives in Niagara County. He is Chairman of the Committee on Indian Relations. Mr. Lindsay has presented to the convention two proposals looking toward Indian reforms. The provisions of both have been combined into one proposal which has been favorably reported to that body as a committee measure. The proposal provides for amendments to Section 15 of Article 1. under which the so-called peacemakers' courts of the Tonawanda Nation and the Surrogates' and Peacemakers' Courts of the Seneca Nation, and all other agencies of the Indian tribes and nations exercising judicial functions, would be abolished and their jurisdiction transferred to the courts of the white man. Under the proposal the Indian, except as otherwise provided by the United States statutes, general laws of the State and treaties of this State or of the United States, will for the first time in his history have equality before the law, which will place him on the level in this respect with his white brother.

"Your committe is convinced that the time has come when the Indians of the State of New York should be treated as civilized persons, and not as barbarians," the report says. "The theory of the State and Federal Government for more than a century has been to treat them as dependents, in a state of tutelage, with the ultimate end in view of full citizenship. Although this policy has been pursued through four generations, our method of governing these people, our attitude toward them, and their knowledge of our laws remain practically as they were a half century ago.

"During that period the American negro, at the beginning of the period fully as incapable of self-government as the Indian, has passed from slavery and dense ignorance to good citizenship and comparative intellectuality. Indeed, when the American Indian in this State was an intelligent, independent, and in a measure, self-governing individual, the American negro was much lower in the scale of civilization, and was a slave. The reason for the progress of the negro, and the stagnant condition of the Indian is not hard to find. One associated with the white man, was governed by his laws, later had the benefit of these laws conferred upon him, and was compelled to know and obey them; the other, treated as a child, left to his own devices and government, in doubt as to his allegiance and rights under our laws, has drifted along without an object and without hope as to his future. Ultimate citizenship has been the cry of Presidents and Governors in their recommendations, of Commissioners of the Federal Government, and this State for nearly a century; while the method of government of the Indians in New York during all that time has tended in exactly the opposite direction."

The report goes on to say that on several occasions the Legislature has appointed committees to look into the life of the Indians, but that the recommendations of those bodies invariably have gone unheeded by the lawmakers. The report continues:

"Our present Indian laws are substantially as they were enacted from 1813 to 1849, except that the exclusive power over marriage and divorce was conferred on the peacemakers' courts of the Allegheny and Cattaraugus reservations by Chapter 374, laws of 1859. Very few of these laws are of a general nature applying to all Indians within the State. The Indians on the Tonawanda, Allegheny and Cattaraugus reservations have peacemakers' courts; the two last-named have surrogates' courts and the Tonawandas have not; the peacemakers' courts of the Allegheny and Cattaraugus reservations have exclusive jurisdiction over marriage and divorce and the Tonawandas have not. The Tuscaroras, Onondagas, St. Regis and Shinnecocks have no courts of any kind. The power to contract is conferred upon all Indians, and then nullified in the same section by a provision forbidding any person to sue an Indian of the Tonawanda or Seneca Nation or Onondaga tribe upon any contract, under heavy penalties, leaving the St. Regis, Tuscarora, Oneida and Shinnecock Indians open to such suits. The statute extends the State laws as to marriage and divorce to all Indians, and in the same section excepts those on the Allegheny and Cattaraugus reservations. This report cannot be extended to indicate all these anomalies and contradictions in our present Indian law.

"At the present time in the great State of New York, on the Allegheny and Cattaraugus Reservations, two ignorant Indians, called Peacemakers, may at the request of an Indian, release him from his wife, and set her adrift without provision or remedy, and without any trial, except an informal hearing. She may appeal to the Indian Council, but the evidence shows it seldom acts. She cannot have any relief under our laws or in our courts.

"It is a piece of patchwork, out of date, and its worst features enacted to suit the whims of certain classes of the Indians. The evidence taken by the various commissions, as well as communications from the better class of Indians who desire some relief from present conditions, shows conclusively that the present condition of the laws is fostering shiftlessness, immorality, and crime upon the reservations, and retarding the development of the Indian toward good citizenship.

"Ordinary justice requires that the Indian should be recognized in our Constitution, that he be guaranteed the protection of our laws and the process of our courts to enforce his rights. Experience shows that Legislatures shift the responsibility to committees of investigation or to Congress, and when the Federal Government fails to act, as it has always done, the matter is abandoned and forgotten."

The Committee on Indian Relations has looked into the question of how far the State might go in legislating for the red man, and has reached the conclusion that it can begin where Congress has not assumed to legislate.

"If I should state," said Chairman Lindsay, in discussing the condition of the Indians, "that there were at least 2,500 inhabitants in this State over whom the laws of the State have no jurisdiction as to the question of divorce, marriage, annulment of marriage, and even with regard to what we may characterize as a number of categories of civil crimes, my statement would be doubted. If I should state further that in New York State there was a divorce court which was the most liberal divorce court in the United States, and not only in the United States, but in any civilized nation, you would probably be horrified. And yet that is the exact condition, owing to certain rights the State has conferred on some Indians within its borders.

"The Seneca Indians upon the Allegheny and Cattaraugus Reservations have absolute power over marriage and divorce. Divorces are granted down there, a woman is thrown out upon the world with possibly three or four children, and she has no right of appeal to the courts of this State, and yet this State recognizes that as a legal divorce."

These divorces, it would appear too, are granted without anything approximating an investigation by the court into cases brought before them. A number of documents dealing with such matters show that the application for divorce is made one day and the decree granted the next. In one instance—culled from the records of the Cattaraugus Reservation—the application was made and decree granted on the same day. The latter document here presented is typical of hundreds of such papers Mr. Lindsay has examined:

Jimestown, Cattaraugus County, NY.
June 1, 1886.

On the first day of June before us personally came David Jimeson, Jr, husband of Amanda, described in the within conveyance; the said David Jimeson, being and known to us to be the individual described in and who executed the said conveyance, and he acknowledged, on private examination, that Amanda had two childs who were not belonging to the said David Jimeson, Jr. That he executed the same freely, without any fear or compulsion of her. peacemakers Court.

The committee, at the request of the convention, has made an investigation and report on the lands owned or occupied by Indian tribes in this State. Unlike the Indian lands in the West, the lands in this State have never been held under a title belonging to the Federal Government. The pre-emptive right of the lands was vested either in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts under a grant to the Colony in 1628 or by the State of New York under a grant made to the Duke of York in 1664.

Here is a list of the Indian lands made by the committee: The Oneidas own 400 acres of land, which they hold in severalty. The Cayugas now have no lands in the State. The Shinnecock Indians own 400 acres on Long Island in fee.

The Onondaga Indians have 7,300 acres near Syracuse, the title to which is in the State, and the right of occupancy and possession in the tribe. The Tonawandas have 7,548 acres in the Counties of Erie and Geneseo which they purchased, and the title to which is now in the State Controller. The Seneca Indians have 30,469 acres on the Allegheny Reservation and 21,680 acres on the Cattaraugus Reservation, the title to which is in the Seneca Nation, subject to the pre-emptive right of what is popularly known as the Ogden Company, upon the extinguishment of the Indian title.

The pre-emptive title in these lands for the most part has been extinguished. The lands of the Allegheny, Cattaraugus, and some 2,000 acres of Tuscarora lands form an exception.

The Why and Wherefore of the Mid-Summer Furniture Sale Now in Progress

Observe the word "Sale" carefully—some have gotten into the loose way of using it. It means literally a disposal of goods at a price below their former or present value. When we use the word "Sale" we use it advisedly.

The Mid-Summer Sale of Furniture is the disposal of good Furniture at a price far below what we would usually charge for it. Because of careful planning and thoughtful preparation the mills and workshops are kept busy building Lord & Taylor Furniture during a period when they would otherwise be "Slowed Up." The cost of production is less now than ever before, and so we extend the advantage of

This Price-Saving Opportunity to our friends during the mid-summer in order that our selling staff continue busy and the wheels of business in this grand old-new store be kept turning at their usual speed.

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, AUG. 8, 1915.

WAKING A GIANT.

There ought to be a monument to commemorate the discovery of this country's financial and economic independence in the period between July 31, 1914, and Aug. 1, 1915. It should be dedicated to circumstances. A year ago Wall Street had its shutters up and business was advised to dig itself in and prepare to stand siege. We had the largest stock of idle gold that one country ever had, and yet eminent bankers were so afraid of Europe's power to command it that they desired Wall Street to repudiate its obligation to pay foreign debts in gold on demand. As the only neutral country able industrially and financially to supply Europe with enormous quantities of the goods consumed in war, the United States (everybody afterward could see it) was a good place to have money, perhaps the only safe place in the world to make investments, and yet the New York Stock Exchange and, in its example, all the Exchanges of the country, had closed. The interior Exchanges closed because New York did, and New York did because it feared an avalanche of foreign liquidation. For many weeks this was the great financial bugaboo. The existence in Wall Street vaults of a billion dollars' worth of American securities belonging to foreigners, all anxious to sell out, was asserted and solemnly discussed.

The Government proposed to do a great many things, for example, magically to produce a merchant marine by the enactment of a law—American ships to carry American goods to Europe. That was before international commerce had recovered from the first paralyzing shock. Out of patriotism was formed a pool to raise $100,000,000 at 6 per cent. for New York City. It had a loan coming due abroad and was in a desperate dilemma. Another pool of $100,000,000 was formed to maintain American credit abroad in terms of gold; only $10,000,000 of that fund was ever used. Another pool of $135,000,000 was formed to carry the unsalable cotton crop, (or such of it as Northern patriots were unwilling or unable to carry in their parlors,) but it turned out that no such assistance was necessary.

The cotton crop, with the regular assistance of the banks, carried itself; the foreign exchange situation corrected itself, and the necessity of creating a merchant marine out of credit and desire without recourse to shipyards suddenly disappeared, all because Europe urgently required enormous quantities of the goods we had in surplus and sent ships to carry them in.

On July 30, 1914, the last day of trading before the Stock Exchange closed, United States Steel common, which was then paying 5 per cent., sold at 50½. On July 30, 1915, the same stock, though the dividend had in the meantime been discontinued, sold at 68⅛, not as an investment but as a speculation on the future. In the intervening year our sales of goods to Europe had exceeded our purchases by more than a billion dollars; we had loaned several hundred millions of credit direct to countries in Europe, North and South America, belligerent and neutral; the Stock Exchange, which nobody thought would open during the life of the war, had become the only open market in the whole world for securities; New York City had sold 4½ per cent. securities at a higher price than in 1913, and the problem of how we should pay our obligations in Europe and get along without our customary supplies of European capital had been altogether inverted; it had become a problem of how Europe should pay us for goods contracted for and how much capital we should be justified in exporting to other countries.

A more astonishing discovery has never been made in the world. The United States, always a borrowing nation, always dependent on European finance, transacting its foreign business in pounds sterling instead of dollars, hardly out of its swaddling clothes, is all at once the only country in the world that has capital and credit and goods to lend; and the amount it is able to lend is potentially so great that it cannot even be safely estimated. A Wall Street man has lately been heard to say: "I would be much more sanguine as to the future but for something I fear. It is that when the war is over we shall have so much of the world's gold and so many of the world's unredeemed promises to pay in gold that our position will not be safe. The envy of Europe might unite against us."

But only a year ago Wall Street talked wildly of a European raid upon American gold, and some of its wise men favored stopping gold payments abroad. The pessimism was overdone. Our feeling of national helplessness at the beginning of the war was ludicrous. It is possible also to overdo optimism; indeed, that is a sin much more common in this country than the other, but it is the sin of a giant in adolescence, whose boasts belittle his powers.

BEGINNING WORK IN EARNEST.

It is to be hoped, if not presumed, that the Constitutional Convention, heeding Mr. ROOT's warning and exhortation to the delegates Friday, will get down to business on Monday. With three sessions a day and no week-end vacations, it will have trouble enough to finish its work creditably by Sept. 11, the latest possible date of adjournment. The rage for amendment, which has spared only about a tenth of the 153 sections of the State Constitution, the airing of changes made for the sake of change, or to impress on the public the proposer's wealth of wisdom, is a necessary evil of constitutional conventions, at least in this time, when a multitude of persons wants to make a Constitution a sort of higher statute book, and will not distinguish between the fundamental-indispensable and a clutter of surplusage.

The less the bulk of amendments submitted to the people, the clearer their understanding of what they are to vote for or against. A multiplicity of propositions confuses. It even disgusts. Under the best circumstances it is hard to get the body of the electorate interested in constitutional amendments.

Responsible American, in place of "Venezuelan," State Government; a budget initiated by the Governor; the co-ordination of the departments—there is the essential nucleus of amendment. There is the irreducible minimum.

GENERAL TRACY'S LAST YEARS.

If General TRACY had written a book just before he died, what an interesting book it would have been! Not a book of reminiscences, though a life of eighty-five years, half a century of which was spent amid the making of events, would have made it a good one. But the last fifteen years of his life were the years of a wise spectator, who had spent most of the preceding seventy behind the scenes, sometimes in the leading rôle. Any man can be a spectator, and many men can draw conclusions from what they see, though not all can do so. But General TRACY was no ordinary spectator. Few public men have been in the thick of things so long and so continuously. He became a District Attorney at 23, and he was nominated for the first Mayor of Greater New York at 67. There was a span of forty-four years, and he spent them at the front, most of them in high command. After his race for the Mayoralty he was still active in public affairs for a few years, and his public service covered a good half century.

Such a story may not be unique, but it is very hard to match it. In those fifty years he had been a soldier and a General, a Judge of the Court of Appeals, Secretary of the Navy, one of the three Republican bosses of what was then the third city in the Union—the word boss being used in no offensive sense, for TRACY'S probity was that which CAESAR desired in his wife. He held many offices not so near the front, but he was always in the thick of events. He knew how events were made, for he had helped to make them for more years than most men live, and he knew the streams of tendency, for he had stood at the source of many and watched them broaden into rivers of movement in his lifetime.

So here was a critic of events who knew how to criticise them because he had lived with them. The last years he spent in watching them with the eyes of long experience and forecasting their course and their good or evil possibilities. It would be worth something to have a record of what he saw, but he was chary of speech about it. When, well past eighty, he did give some hint of what he saw in the future, his face would become intent and his steady blue eye fixed on the thing he saw, as he talked, so that sometimes the person to whom he was talking would have very strong upon him the impression that the thing itself was actually present in the room and that the old General was seeing it with the eye not of imagination but of sense. It was not usual with him to say much, but said in such a way the few words he uttered weighed heavily.

He had thought much on the tendencies of these last years and the river into which the stream was broadening, and his conclusions were not such as he would have liked to have them. Once he was asked what he thought of the outlook for Socialism. The reply he made has never been printed, but there can be no impropriety in printing it now. He said:

Within twenty-five years the Government of the United States will be so changed that we would not recognize it. The furious speed with which we are rushing into new conditions will revolutionize our system before we know it. Every tendency of the time is toward the obliteration of individualism, on which our Government was founded and which is the theory of our system, and toward the supervision of the whole business of life, down to small details, by the Government. That tendency will not be checked. The Government will have to accommodate itself to it. The American system is passing.

He said, too, not as an opinion but as a matter of almost accomplished fact, that woman suffrage was sure to come; but instead of stopping there he looked forward beyond it to the changes it would make in our national life, and speculated in his own mind about them, though all he would say was, "But what they will do with it, and what the end will be, I don't believe there is any man living with foresight enough to see."

In such matters and many others there was a calm pessimism about General TRACY'S vision of the future. He believed that he did foresee what was to come, and that it would have been short of the truth to say that he only guessed it. He saw the close of his long life coming with the change of an era in American history. It is unfortunate that he never wrote down his observations and conclusions. Prophecy is dangerous, even by men as well fitted to prophesy as he, for national tendencies are erratic in their movement and have a power of shooting off at an angle or doubling on their tracks to the confusion of the prophet. America twenty-five years from now may be very different from what General TRACY saw it; for instance, for all we can tell, the remaking of the world by the war may produce strange new tendencies beyond our present vision. Still, he thought he saw; and the cooling of life with age made him able to look at it with a pessimism that was not a black pessimism, as it would have been when he was younger, but with a pessimism that was tranquil and undismayed. He had lived long enough to know by observation as well as theory that nations never descend into extravagances from which they cannot emerge and rise.

GERMANY AS HELLAS.

As MALEBRANCHE "saw everything in GOD," so Dr. C. J. HEXAMER, President of the National German-American Alliance, sees everything in Germany. He tells the faithful on "German Day" at the Panama-Pacific Exposition that "what Greece was to "Rome, that Germany in the widest "sense is to our beloved land. * * * "In our educational system German "influence has been paramount from "the kindergarten to the university."

Freedom, education, culture, what is best, is bestowed by Germany upon the rude Romans of this country. The bright, clear intellect, the sense of form and proportion, the "nothing too much" of Hellas, Athens, who but the Hexamerians and the Cimmerians would have looked for them among cloudy metaphysics and the Gothic letters?

Ever delicately marching
Through most pellucid air,

The intellectual obligations of America to Germany have been great from the time of BANCROFT and other early students at German universities and the gradual popularizing of German literature here, from the arrival of exiles like BECK and FOLLEN and LIEBER. But our painters and sculptors are mainly taught by France. Our law is largely an inheritance from English common and customary law. Our culture and literature are English, affected, of course, by many streams of thought, of which German is by no means the greatest. The illustrious and the secondary authors of France, from RABELAIS, MONTAIGNE, MOLIERE, to ANATOLE FRANCE and PIERRE LOTI, have had more influence and authority here than all the German authors. We don't forget the immortals of romantic and disunited Germany, GOETHE and SCHILLER and HEINE, dawned in the Fatherland; the bilious SCHOPENHAUER with his "fourfold root of the principle of sufficient reason," the brilliant rhetorician-sophist NIETZSCHE, a temporary god of some of the young; many venerable names, of which few are Prussian and all born of a very different Germany than the marvelously "efficient" military Germany of today.

American culture is the heir of the ancient and mediaeval culture. The Greeks and Latins, the long line of English poets, DANTE, the French poets, especially of recent years, have influenced our poets more than GOETHE and the German Romantics. French prose, clear, measured, logical, may be said to be the Greek of modern "Roman" Americans. Indeed, our debt to France is only second, in some important respects not second, to that to Great Britain. CERVANTES and his book, in translation read by millions of Americans; Spanish culture, Spanish art, notably VELASQUEZ, have done much for the occidental Romans.

Leave out music and science, the weighty German contributions to which have been amply discussed since the war began. The kindergarten is taken for granted. The "paramount" German influence in education, in our universities, where is it? Too much minute erudition is had from Germany, which is rich in scholars, specialists, collectors of knowledge, who too often write like pedants. Thence the too bountiful crop of feeders on the husks of learning. Thence the pompous, unintelligible terminology of some of our educators. But our universities are chiefly of English model, adapted to American use.

The Germans are wonderful in many ways. If they knew how to "spare the conquered" we might consent to see a Roman quality in them. As Greeks, teaching the dull, unlettered Romans of America, they must tickle the sense of humor of all but the Hexamerians.

THE SING SING SITUATION.

Current statements as to what has happened in Sing Sing since THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE became its Warden are conflicting—almost as conflicting as are the prophecies, based, as usual, oftener on hope than on information, as to what is going to happen there. We hear, on the one hand, that discipline has entirely disappeared from the prison and that the convicts are not only running its affairs to suit themselves, but are running them as would be expected from a lot of criminals. Others tell us that Sing Sing is already a changed place, with order maintained as never before and the atmosphere turned from resentment and despair to friendliness and hope. As for the prophets, some are sure that Mr. OSBORNE is to go, and soon, and others that there is no thought of his removal.

In the midst of these uncertainties there stand a few unquestionable facts, among them these: Sing Sing, if changed at all, must be changed for the better, since in its former state it illustrated every evil of the old penology—the penology that professed to have three ends in view, to punish, to deter, and to reform, but failed miserably in all of them except the first. It is true that Mr. OSBORNE did not begin the work of reform, but he believed in its practicability more enthusiastically than had even the best of his predecessors, and he carried to their logical conclusion the theories which he had accepted, not invented, as to the potential responsiveness of convicts to confidence and kindness. Nobody really charges him with anything except going too fast and too far in the right direction. His best friends do not deny that he has made mistakes and by excess of zeal occasionally supplied with ammunition both those who honestly think that prison life should be very distinctly unpleasant and those who have found the new management detrimental to their political or financial interests.

It would seem to be fair to judge Mr. OSBORNE, not by petty details of his conduct of the prison but by the effect which that conduct is having and will have on the characters and the futures of the prisoners. The critics who have given attention to that phase of the situation are practically unanimous in expressions of satisfaction and hopefulness. The Governor, in whose power it lies to remove or to retain Mr. OSBORNE, should not forget that in him he has a man whose absolute honesty of intention is unquestioned in any quarter—a man who is working with complete disinterestedness, directly for the benefit of the prison's inmates and indirectly for the general good. Such faults as he has are apparently those of tact and caution. Whether remediable or not, they are as far as possible from being those that have marked too many Wardens in the past. Corruption is as little to be feared from him as cruelty.

It is neither needful nor sensible that men like the Governor, Supt. RILEY, and Mr. OSBORNE should be at odds. They proclaim the same purposes, and the public believes all three of them. Let them prove the sincerity of their professions by getting together and talking together, each making to the others those proper and permissible concessions by which purposes are attained. A man who gives his time to a public work for the love of it is not lightly to be parted with. Mr. OSBORNE is not a politician. And politicians ought not to be allowed to pass judgment on his work.

KITCHEN COMPANY.

All my life—and I've come to a good time o' day—
Has been lived 'tween a kitchen's four walls, you might say.
First at home, till the brothers and sisters was grown,
Then as livin'-out girl for the folk o' the town.
'Tis a good place to live in, without any doubt,
As long as there's children to run in and out.

Why, a crib by the hearth seems as natural, still,
As the stocks by our gate, or the lambs on the hill,
Long ago; so I manage by hook or by crook
To have comp'ny around while I scour or cook.
It's no diff that the house had no children before—
They just comes o' themselves when I open the door!

Oh, there's some that has kitchens as neat as a pin,
That will never give leave for a child to step in,
That's for chasin' 'em out with the stick o' the broom—
Well, I'm thinkin' good luck is swept out o' that room!
Let them reap their reward when the time comes to die
With a' the kettles and pots for to bid them good-bye.

Though it's other folks' children is all that I've had—
(There is one of 'em now, 'tis the cobbler's small lad
With a baby—I'm sayin', the time runs so fast!
There was eight in that house when I counted 'em last)—
Yet I'll pray while I've strength to put coals in the hod
There'll be always a child in my kitchen, please God!

ANNE W. YOUNG.

THE HAUNTING DOGGEREL.

Further Involuntary Discussion of the "Punch Brothers" Rhyme.

From The New Bedford Morning Mercury.

It is extraordinary how many people know things that aren't so. In the silly Summer season it is a habit to give over newspaper space to discussions over trivial subjects. This year THE NEW YORK TIMES has been printing variant versions of the Reilly lyric of the eighties until the other day, when an inquiry appeared concerning the authorship of that haunting doggerel, "Punch in the presence of the passenjare." Some one started trouble by inquiring into the authorship, and a score of contributors hastened to say—"Mark Twain."

Mark Twain wrote a number of metrical compositions, but, in spite of general assumption, he was not the author of the "Punch" lines. Those verses were the joint composition of Isaac Bromley, Noah Brooks, W. C. Wyckoff, and Moses W. Handy. Mark Twain read the verses in a newspaper and gave them currency in a skit in which he pictured their tantalizing sway.

To correct misinformation upon the important subject of the authorship of the classic lines, we quote the true story as told by Albert Bigelow Paine in his biography of Mark Twain. A certain car line, writes Mr. Paine, had recently adopted the "punch system" and posted in its cars for the information of passengers and conductor this placard:

A Blue Trip Slip for an 8 Cents Fare.
A Buff Trip Slip for a 6 Cents Fare.
A Pink Trip Slip for a 3 Cents Fare.
For Coupon and Transfer, Punch the Tickets.

Noah Brooks and Isaac Bromley were riding downtown one evening on the Fourth Avenue line, when Bromley said: "Brooks, it's poetry. By George, it's poetry!" Brooks followed the direction of Bromley's finger and read the card of instructions. They began perfecting the poetic character of the notice, giving it still more of a rhythmic twist and jingle and, arriving at The Tribune office, W. C. Wyckoff, scientific editor, and Moses P. Handy lent intellectual and poetic assistance with this result:

Conductor, when you receive a fare,
Punch in the presence of the passenjare!
A blue trip slip for an eight-cent fare,
A buff trip slip for a six-cent fare,
A pink trip slip for a three-cent fare,
Punch in the presence of the passenjare!

Chorus.

Punch brothers! Punch with care!
Punch in the presence of the passenjare.

It was printed, and street car poetry at once became popular. "Clemens discovered the lines," writes Mr. Paine, "and on one of their walks recited them to Twitchell. 'A Literary Nightmare' was written a few days later. In it Mark tells how the jingle took instant and entire possession of him and went waltzing through his brain; how, when he had finished his breakfast he couldn't tell whether he had eaten anything or not, and how, when he went to finish the novel he was writing, and took up his pen, he could only get it to say: 'Punch in the presence of the passenjare.' He found relief at last in telling it to his reverend friend, Twitchell, upon whom he unloaded it with sad results." The skit was published in the Atlantic. Howells, it is related, going to dine at Ernest Longfellow's the day following its appearance, heard his host and Tom Appleton urging each other to "Punch with care." "The Longfellow ladies had it by heart. Boston was devastated by it. At home Howells's children recited it to him in chorus. The streets were full of it; in Harvard it became an epidemic."

It was transformed into other tongues. Swinburne did a French version for the "Revue des Deux Mondes," entitled "Le Chant du Conducteur," commencing:

Ayant ete paye, le conducteur,
Percera en pleine vue du voyageur,
Quand il recoit trois sous un coupon vert.
&c.

Pungite, fratres, pungite,
Pungite, cum amore,
Pungite pro vectore,
Diligentissime pungite.

In view of the history of this haunting ditty and the fact that it has been deemed worth while to revive the lines after thirty years or more, it is worth while to set the new generation straight as to the authorship.

The Sudden Limelight.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been in a more or less comatose condition since reading the recent contribution to your "Reilly" memorial, signed P. W. H. Never before has a shy little pansy blossom like myself been so rudely dragged into the limelight and rechristened "Georgy." Permit me to press forward a little tremolo inquiry, just to satisfy an inward suspicion. Please hold the wire:

Is this Docther Hewins,
Creatin' these doin's,
Is this Docther Hewins
That's raisin' this—well!

It is Docther Hewins,
Creatin' these doin's,
Upon me soul, "Paddy,"
You're lookin' d——d well!

But I decline to be "smoked out." Come inside and smoke with me. Then I will tell you the third stanza of "Hold the Fort, the Proctor's Coming," and also whisper one or two other things that while not connected with either Reilly or hotel management will nevertheless add a trifle to the gayety of nations. But personally I emulate the groundhog—I have seen my shadow, and—good night! GEORGE W. HILLS.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am greatly surprised to find that your accomplished commentator on the "Pass of Balmaha" seems never to have made the acquaintance of "The Lady of the Lake," a charming young person, to whom I beg to have the honor of presenting him. If he will glance at her story, he will find, in Canto Fourth, an account of the m x-white bull who was captured by the Clan Alpin raiders and whose resentment of his capture was so strenuous that he Kept their stoutest kernes in awe,

Even at the Pass of Beal'maha.

The exact situation of the pass is not stated in the poem, but it must be somewhere in the neighborhood of Loch Katrine, where the scene of the poem is laid. B.

The Sentiment of Norway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nothing could have surprised me more than the short letter on "Pro-Germanism in Norway" in today's issue of your paper. A year after the European war broke out the present Royal Commissioner of Norway to the Panama-Pacific Exposition told me that nineteen out of twenty Norwegians were pro-Allies. Mr. Gade had then been living in Norway for four consecutive years, had been in all parts of the country, and talked with all sorts and conditions of men and women. I have every reason to believe that anti-German sentiment has increased since the wanton sinking of so many Norwegian ships and the jeering manner in which Die Kolnische Zeitung has referred to it. H. R. GADE.

Mr. Bryan's Desk?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in THE TIMES that Mr. Bryan has taken from the State Department the desk that has been used by our former Secretaries of State for the last fifty years, and I am writing as a citizen of this country and as one who has paid her taxes for over forty years to object. I feel as part owner of that desk that I have a right to demand its return to our Government and either be placed in the office of the Secretary of State or in the National Museum. I would like to ask Mr. Bryan, if one of his clerks were to carry off the desk he had been using while in the Government's employ, what he would call him. LAURA B. BELL.

A GALLANT WORK OF MERCY.

New York, Aug. 6, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to inclose for publication a portion of a letter written by Dr. Robert B. Greenough of Boston, one of the volunteer surgeons at the American Hospital at Neuilly, near Paris, which gives an interesting account of the American Volunteer Motor Ambulance Corps, which has been maintained by American donors of money and cars, is composed chiefly of young American college graduates, and has done fine and brave work for the wounded since the very beginning of the war. ELIOT NORTON.

Paris, June 28, 1915.

I was so fortunate as to see Richard Norton at Amiens on Sunday, June 13, and to go with him to Baizieux to the chateau where his American Volunteer Corps of Ambulances is billeted. I am sure you will be interested to know of the splendid work that this corps is doing and has been doing since the beginning of the war. Baizieux is a chateau about twenty kilometers from Amiens toward the northwest and about half that distance from the front. The corps of twenty-five ambulances which Mr. Norton has organized is quartered here by the French War Department and is an integral portion of the Second French Army. The chateau is used for sleeping and living rooms by the ambulance's staff, and they get their meals, which are the regular rations of the French Army, supplied to them in an adjoining building. At the time I visited them a vigorous offensive had been conducted by the French on the line Hebuterne, Mailly-Mallet, for about four days. This attack had succeeded in driving back the German line for a distance of about three kilometers at its greatest depth and had resulted in a great increase in the number of wounded at the front line dressing stations. For four nights Mr. Norton's ambulances had been in constant requisition carrying wounded from the Poste de Secours, or dressing station, at Hebuterne to the hospital at Acheux. The Poste de Secours at Hebuterne was an expansion of the communication trench, or "boyau," leading to the front trenches; it was about 7 feet wide and 7 feet deep and about 20 feet long, with a six-foot roof of timbers and earth.

I went with Mr. Norton for the night's work on Sunday. From time to time wounded soldiers would come straggling from the communication trench into the Poste de Secours or would be brought on litters by the French stretcher bearers. Many of the wounds had been dressed at the regimental first aid stations, but many of them needed medical attention, which was supplied by the French surgeon in charge of the poste. As soon as enough soldiers had collected to fill an ambulance we started over the road to Acheux. We were obliged to drive without lights, and the road was already fully occupied by trains of artillery, supply wagons, and commissary traveling kitchens. For about one mile the road was exposed to shell fire from the German batteries, and in consequence practically all communications had to be carried on at night. During the night the three ambulances at Hebuterne and at the two corresponding stations immediately below that point made about twelve trips and carried sixty-seven wounded. On one of the previous days, Norton tells me, they carried 528.

At about 1:30 o'clock on Monday morning an unsuccessful attempt was made by the Germans to recapture the lost trenches, which brought about a great activity of machine guns, rifles, and artillery. Shells passed over the Poste de Secours almost continuously, both from the German batteries and the French batteries, which were concealed behind us. We were fortunate enough not to have any shells burst in close proximity to us that night, but two nights later, I am told, the Poste de Secours was dismantled and an ambulance standing on the road beside it was shattered by a German shell. We worked all night until we were relieved, at 8 o'clock the following morning, by one of the regular French military ambulances. It was impossible to get any sleep during the night, both on account of the noise and the constantly recurring call for ambulance service. I came away strongly convinced that the people at home have very little notion of the splendid work these ambulance men are doing; in fact, their service is so necessary to the French at present that when it was proposed to withdraw Mr. Norton's corps from the French lines for service with the English a serious curtailment of the French Hospital service was threatened, and only by the equipment and organization of another corps of twenty-five ambulances could the deficiency be made good. If men like Richard Norton, who have the ability and enthusiasm to organize and operate ambulance corps such as this, can be found ready to volunteer for the work, it would seem that there should be no difficulty in raising the funds to support this splendid work from those at home who are unable to contribute otherwise of their services toward so good a cause.

Germany's Claim to Shakespeare.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was much interested in reading a letter in THE TIMES in regard to Shakespeare in Germany. The subject matter brought back most vividly a repeated experience which I, as a student in a German university town, had back in the seventies.

To call Shakespeare an Englishman at that time was to arouse irritability and resentment among my fellow-students of German birth and speech. The more fair-minded of them would verbally allow that he was "in England geboren," but that he was "wirklich Welt Poet," being far too great for the claim of any one nation. I also heard a lecturer on literature characterize him in this way and argue, in addition, that as Shakespeare was far better understood and appreciated in Germany than in England, he therefore belonged more to Germany. As far as my knowledge goes, Shakespeare is read as well as staged in Germany in the German tongue. One of my English-speaking fellows once attempted, in lieu of going on with a somewhat rancorous argument as to nationality, to put forth some equivalent claim as to Goethe, based especially on his philosophical breadth, but this point of view was even rudely repulsed. Goethe was a "real German," any other view being simply ridiculous as well as unfair. C. L. BURRIS.

Mustaches.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Women who wear a blob of hair drawn down over each ear, or even those who apply powder or paint in public places, will probably be capable of voting when their time comes as intelligently as that part of our male population who prune down, lop off, and otherwise abbreviate their mustaches until they look like a dab of soot. In both instances visible evidences of a strong mentality seem lacking, and there is little enough to choose between blobs of hair over the ears and the cute little triangles of hair under the nose, but that little is all in the ladies' favor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Kindly announce in your next edition that the Walter C. Kelly who was arrested in New York as a purse snatcher, and mentioned in your columns of Aug. 5, has no connection whatever with Walter C. Kelly, the vaudeville star, who is appearing at Keith's Garden Pier this week.

A Woman First Society.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The growing tendency to disregard gallantry, found in our public conveyances and elsewhere, suggests a society called "Woman First" as a companion to "Safety First." Every male who deports himself with proper consideration toward a female is eligible. No other qualification necessary.

THE GERMANY NOW ALMOST FORGOTTEN.

An American Woman Who Lived in it for Many Years Replies to Gertrude Atherton—Some Things Done Better There Than Here.

By ALICE LANE MEREDITH.

Boston, Aug. 4, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As another American woman, who made her home in Germany, not for seven years, as Gertrude Atherton did, but for seventeen years, may I also be permitted to write of Germany as I found it, and show how widely our views differ?

When reading letters like Mrs. Atherton's, I am always reminded of the thoroughly sensible advice given to me by my oldest brother, (who had traveled extensively in Europe,) as I was about to sail from America for the first time, to spend many years in Germany.

With his peculiar, whimsical smile he said, "Now, sister, do not try to make Germany over to suit your American ideas, but try rather to adapt yourself to conditions there; for the Germans have already learned many lessons, which we are only now beginning to learn over here." It has seemed to me many times during this past year as though a great many Americans have the fixed idea that, if only Germany could be made to adopt our form of government, our methods, and our manners and customs, the German people would be very much happier. Americans who hold such views have either not lived long enough in Germany to understand the people, or else they belong to the blissfully conceited type who can always be found as tourists in every country, bragging of the way that things are done at home and explaining how they think everything should be done in Europe.

As an illustration of this class, commend me to the genuine old "Yankee" whom I once overheard arguing on a Rhine steamer with a sturdy old Hollander, and trying to convince the latter that the Dutch did not know how to build windmills! Is it not one of our national traits to boast of everything, from our particular form of government to our particularly small feet? Surely that is the opinion which most Europeans hold regarding us, and I do not wonder at it.

Ever since this war began the Germans have been pictured to us as almost slaves, because they have an Emperor at the head of their nation, instead of a President, and we have been constantly told that the German people have suffered from militarism during all these forty years of peace; yet, in my seventeen years there, I saw no sign of all this, nor did I ever hear Germans oppose the system of military training. Full well they knew how their beloved land had been laid waste, more than once, by their enemies because they had been unprepared, and, when this war came, not only those young men of Germany who were called out answered the call, but also more than a million volunteers within a few days! Compare this state of things with that in England, where, as Mrs. Atherton has said, "the very poor have never fought for England unless coerced. It is not their England, but the England of the gentleman class."

Poverty, such as is seen in England and in America, is not to be found in Germany, and a happier and more contented people than the Germans were, before this war began, never existed.

Many newspaper writers have made the statement that our German-American citizens left their own country because they were unhappy and oppressed there. Broadly speaking, I do not believe that this has been the case for more than a generation. Did it never occur to these writers that Germany's large annual surplus population, (an excess of 750,000 per annum,) has driven hundreds of thousands to seek a livelihood in America and England and her colonies, where the thorough and efficient training which they obtained in the German schools finds better compensation than in their own land, overcrowded with men equally competent?

While Mrs. Atherton is most enthusiastic regarding the beautiful and admirably governed German cities, and acknowledges that she liked Germany better than any other country in Europe, she claims that surroundings so artistic, and so perfected, encourage indolence and dreaming rather than energetic work. It would seem that the effect has been somewhat different upon the German people, for indolence and a lack of energetic action have been about the only two failings of which the German soldier has not, as yet, been accused.

In the German city which became my home there was an American colony of about sixty families and many students. Many of the problems which the "housekeeper" of the family here must meet were not found in Germany, and we had time, therefore, to take up our music or painting, to study the foreign languages, and to enjoy the best theatres, operas, and lectures. We found on every hand the incentive to learn more of art, of music, and of literature, and to complete as far as possible our superficial education along these lines.

We sent our children to the German schools, and found them admirable, nor did I once have occasion to complain of severity in discipline. On the contrary, I shall always feel deeply grateful to those who inculcated in my children a love for learning, and gave them a firm formation to build upon. It might, perhaps, be added that upon our return to America my oldest son was able to enter one of our highest universities as a junior at the age of 18, and this result was accomplished without so much home work as required by many of our schools here.

Mrs. Atherton evidently saw little of home life in Germany, or she would not speak of "the permanent subjection of woman" there. During my seventeen years in that country I had exceptional opportunities for making German friends, not only in my own city, but in nearly every other province, and I found the German women holding an enviable position and enjoying many privileges not accorded to the women of other countries. All universities are open to women, and many women professors may be found in them, while a visit to the clubrooms of any of the societies of German women will show how many of their number hold high positions in their chosen professions.

The German husband appreciates his wife's devotion to him and to their children, and he is ready to give her every comfort and pleasure that he can afford. Every Sunday and holiday one may see hundreds of these happy couples, usually with their children, enjoying their outing together, and many Americans have envied them their ability to find so much enjoyment in the most simple and inexpensive pleasures.

I once heard a young American girl say: "If I could be sure that, after ten years of married life, my husband would be as devoted to me as that German husband is to his wife, after all these years, I would marry, too, but so many American husbands do not 'wear well.'"

Another American woman said pathetically, to her German friend: "I would give anything that I possess if I could hear my husband speaking of 'my wife' in the tone of pride that your husband has."

Mrs. Atherton makes the unqualified statement that "our country stands for the only true progress in the world today." True progress in any country certainly should mean that the people of that country are cared for, educated, and governed in the best possible manner. Let us compare our own progress in these respects with that which Germany can show, for instance, for it seems to me that the duty of the State to its citizens is more keenly realized and more conscientiously fulfilled in Germany than in any other country. There no child is allowed to grow up in ignorance, and no child may be employed when too young, nor for too long hours, nor where his surroundings are such as to endanger health or morals. When these children are old enough to secure permanent positions, they find many hundreds of co-operative employment bureaus ready to help them. The workingman's insurance, which has been in operation in Germany for thirty years, is only during the past few years being adopted here, as are most of the other regulations for child welfare mentioned above. I have never known a sweatshop to exist in Germany, nor would the filthy tenements of our cities be permitted to remain there for a day. Neither have I ever known of factories burning, where no adequate provisions were made for the escape of the employes; nor of excursion steamers like the Eastland and the Slocum being allowed to carry passengers. There is no Blackwell's Island in Germany, where two men are kept in a cell not large enough for one, with no window for ventilation. Careless drivers are not allowed to kill hundreds of innocent victims on the streets of Germany, nor would such a driver escape punishment. We are always boasting of our freedom. Is it not to be deplored that this freedom permits such sins against the weak and helpless to be committed?

FREE DENTAL CLINICS.

They Offer to the Rich an Almost Untouched Field for Charity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note with extreme pleasure the announcement in THE TIMES of the proposed free dental clinic for the City of Rochester, the gift of Mr. Eastman of the Eastman Kodak Company of that city.

This is the second great institution of its kind to be founded and dedicated to the service of our people. I refer to the Forsyth Dental Infirmary, which was dedicated Nov. 24, 1914, by the Forsyth Brothers in the City of Boston. On the occasion of that event, Dr. Rodrigues Ortolengui, a world-renowned member of the dental profession, writing in the Items of Interest, said: "It is to be hoped that the example set by the Forsyths will be followed by the generous rich of other cities, and that similar institutions will become fairly common throughout the land." All honor, then, to Mr. Eastman, who has been the first to hear this call, and who responds with the donation of a building to cost upward of $1,000,000.

With all our medical hospitals and our splendid facilities for the treatment and care of our sick, not until now have the people had a place to go for dental treatment. Of course, when surgical cases present, the medical practitioner is well fitted to perform the duties required, but dentistry presents such a broad field of possibilities, and embraces so much of service to benefit the human race, that it seems strange that society has not these many years felt the call for a dental hospital. European countries, considered far behind America in the development of dental science, have been blessed with hospitals specially fitted for the dental infirm.

COLONY CLUB BUILDS AN ELABORATE HOME

WILL OPEN IN DECEMBER

Building Contains Gymnasium, Turkish Baths, Squash Courts, and Sleeping Rooms.

The new Colony Club building at Sixty-second Street and Park Avenue, which will be completed for occupancy at a cost of approximately $1,000,000, and will be, it is said, the finest women's clubhouse in the world, is now ready for the elaborate interior finishing designed for it. The masons, carpenters, and steel workers have practically accomplished their work of construction.

The architects are Delano & Aldrich of 4 East Thirty-ninth Street, and the interior decorators are Miss Alice Nicholas and Mrs. Hughes, whose studio is in the Carlton Chambers, Madison Avenue and Forty-seventh Street. Mrs. Hughes is a member of the club.

The building is in the Georgian style. Its exterior is of white Vermont marble and dark red brick, the marble running solid from the sidewalk to the top of the ground floor, and being used above as trimming in the pilasters, window borders, and cornice. The façade presents a view of a building of four stories surmounted by a mansard roof, though in fact there are twelve floor levels, including the two basement and three mezzanine floors. On the outside, the building is 100 feet by 125 feet at its base, and stands 130 feet above the street level.

One of the attractions of the exterior view will be rows of imported Oriental plane trees next to the curbs on both the Park Avenue and Sixty-second Street sides of the building. In conceiving the outside appearance of the clubhouse the architects included these trees.

Equipped With Turkish Baths.

Turkish baths of improved style and a swimming pool 20 by 60 feet, finished in white tile and marble, occupy more than half the space of the main basement. Other baths, shower, tub, needle, &c., are on this floor.

As one enters the building through the vestibule it is inside the main or Park Avenue entrance. To the right, opposite a taxicab starter's booth, is a dog room, where the members of the Colony Club may check their pets. Passing through the vestibule, one is received in a circular entrance hall from which there are exits to adjacent reception and guest rooms.

The main room of this floor is the ball room, upon which architects and decorators spent much time in designing. Its dancing space is 60 by 40 feet and the ceiling is two stories above the polished floor, a musicians' gallery being suspended halfway up. The ball room is to be finished in pure Georgian style with coral-colored hanging and furnishings. A drawing room, also on the ground floor, will be finished in antique green. For these, as for many other rooms in the building, the decorators have ordered furniture abroad especially manufactured hanging and furniture.

A lounge is to be another attractive room on the second floor. Its walls will be of paneled butternut to the ceiling and old blue hangings and coverings will be arranged by the decorators. Adjoining the lounge will be the library, of paneled oak from floor to ceiling, flanked by card rooms, sitting rooms, and private dining rooms.

The loggia, on the third floor, represents the highest interest of all concerned in the artistic finishing of the clubhouse. It is 125 by 75 feet in size and its interior will be finished to give the effect of outdoors to one sitting in it. Its roof, two stories high, is of groined vaults, and its mural and ceiling decorations will be painted by Robert Winthrop Chanler, the artist. In the centre will be a fountain done by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, which, it is said, is among the best pieces from her hand. The floor of the room will be of quarried tile and the furniture of a design to suggest the out-of-doors tea garden. It is in this room that the members are expected to congregate for afternoon tea and light refreshments.

On the same floor are members' and guests' dining rooms, each of original interior treatment. The kitchen, two stories in height with many windows, adjoins the dining rooms. The specifications call for as complete and modern equipment for the kitchen as can be found in any of the city's hotels.

Wallpaper Made in Europe.

The fourth and fifth floors are given largely to bedrooms, of which there are twenty in the club. The decorators have planned to give each bedroom an individual character. The wallpaper for these rooms has been ordered from abroad. Also on the fifth floor is the gymnasium, from which special elevators run down to the baths in the basement. The gymnasium is to be equipped with every desirable device. Across a hall from it is space for hairdressing rooms, where specialists will always be in attendance.

Servants' quarters occupy most of the sixth floor. There are bedrooms, bathrooms, and sitting rooms for the maid attendants. On the seventh floor there are two squash courts, lit through skylights in the roof. A spectators' gallery is suspended over each court. The floor space of this story is less than that at the ground level, the perpendicular of the walls being built back from the perpendicular of the main base. This gives space on the roof of the sixth floor, outside the walls of the seventh, for an open-air roof garden or promenade.

The equipment of the club throughout is after the fashion of the most modern hotels and clubs, the refrigerating and incinerating plants being unusually large. Also, much of the new furniture to be used in the building is being manufactured especially, it being the boast of the interior decorators that nearly everything in the building, save what is taken from the old clubhouse at Madison Avenue and Thirtieth Street, will be original and unique.

The club will be opened the first week in December with a grand ball, but no definite date for the opening has been fixed, nor has the date for the removal from the old clubhouse been announced.

The Colony Club was organized in 1903, but it assumed its present character in 1907 under the leadership of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who has been its President since the beginning. Miss Anne Morgan is the Vice President, and Miss Ruth V. Twombly the Secretary. The club has always had an Advisory Board of men, of which, until his death, J. Pierpont Morgan was a member. The board is now composed of Corporation Counsel Frank L. Polk and R. H. Williams.

The building at Madison Avenue and Thirtieth Street was opened early in 1907, and was considered a wonder of art and comfort. Miss Elsie de Wolfe executed most of the interior decorating, and it has been noted that the best of her work will be removed to the new clubhouse. When the present quarters were opened, the club attracted much attention, both because of the prominence in society and art of the women included in its membership and because of the fact that the club, though distinctly social, was so exclusively designed for women. Except for a few more or less public rooms, men have been forbidden even entrance into the clubhouse, and the same strictness will be observed in the new building.

In December, 1913, the club found that it had outgrown its Madison Avenue home, and it was decided to move to new quarters. It was then that the idea of the present clubhouse was developed. The Finance Committee, of which Mrs. Frank Gray Griswold is the Chairman, made the plans for the sale of the old home and the purchase of a site for the new.

The membership limit of the club, 600, has been reached and there is a long waiting list. There are about 400 non-resident members.

Alderman Unites Him to Miss Weil at Municipal Building.

The friends of Isaac L. Rice, Jr., and Miss Beatrice Weil of 202 Riverside Drive were surprised yesterday when they learned the young couple had been married quietly by an Alderman in the Municipal Building on Monday. They are now speeding westward to spend their honeymoon on Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies.

Isaac L. Rice, Sr., lives at the Ansonia and is wealthy. His wife is the President of the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises. Miss Weil is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Weil.

Young Mr. Rice and Miss Weil are reported to have been engaged for three years, but it was only recently that they announced it to their friends. No date was set for the marriage, and it was believed it would be many months before the formal announcement would be made. So there was much surprise when it became known that they had quietly motored to the Municipal Building on Monday afternoon, had taken out a license, and then been married before leaving the building.

Only near relatives were present. These included Mr. and Mrs. Weil and Mrs. Rice. Immediately after they were married Mr. and Mrs. Rice started for the Canadian Northwest, but their return they will live in New York.

ROCKEFELLER BOARD SAILS.

Medical Men Leave San Francisco on Way to China.

Dr. Simon Flexner, Director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and a member of the China Medical Board, a subsidiary of the Rockefeller Foundation, sailed yesterday, with other medical scientists, from San Francisco for China. The commission is on its way to launch the actual work of the China Medical Board, and will remain in the republic until next December.

Those in the party, besides Dr. Flexner, are Dr. Wallace Buttrick, Director of the China Medical Board; Dr. William H. Welch, head of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, and Dr. Frederick Gates, son of Frederick T. Gates, Chairman of the Rockefeller General Education Board. Mrs. Flexner and Mrs. Buttrick are also on board the ship.

The immediate purpose of the commission in going to China is to put the work anticipated by the China Medical Board on a sure footing, so that it can be prosecuted efficiently and extensively for the betterment of the public health of the republic. As one of its first steps, it is expected the commission will take over the Union Medical College in Peking and reorganize it as a centre of medical instruction for the Chinese in China. Other educational work will be undertaken and a beginning will be made for the sanitary improvement of the larger Chinese cities.

MISS L. B. KINNEY WEDS.

Bride of Tomas Carlos Leon Will Live in Argentina.

Miss Linda Beatrice Kinney, daughter of Augustine J. Kinney of 126 East Thirty-sixth Street, was married yesterday to Tomas Carlos Leon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alberto Leon of Mexico at the Church of Our Lady of Hope, Riverside Drive and 156th Street. Mr. Kinney gave his daughter in marriage.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Nona Coridon and Helen E. Kinney, a sister of the bride. William Leon, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Frank J. Kinney, Aubrey Kinney Abrahall, Richard V. Bradley, and Cornelius Burnham Savage.

Mr. Leon is a graduate of Columbia University, class of 1912, and a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Leon sailed for Buenos Aires, Argentina, yesterday afternoon, where Mr. Leon is in business.

COSTUME BALL FOR CHARITY

Society on the south side of Long Island is making plans for the costume ball, which is to be held at the Argyle Park Casino, Babylon, L. I., on Sept. 3, for the benefit of the Southside Hospital, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Many attractive features are being arranged by the entertainment committee which consists of Mrs. Webster C. Estes, Mrs. Spencer W. Aldrich, Mrs R. D Little, Mrs. William May, Mrs J. Gerard Benkard, Mrs. W. S. Jenkins Mrs. J. Ives Plumb, Mrs. Harold Sutton and Mrs. William B. Savage. Among the patronesses are Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., Mrs. Orme Wilson, Jr., Mrs. Bayard C. SUFFRAGE ORATOR TELLS OF CAMPAIGN

ADDRESS IN A MOVIE SHOW

Finds It Easier to Address Men Than Women, but Holds a "Punch" in Reserve for Antis.

Long Island suffragists have found an unusual and forceful speaker in Mrs. Jeanne Marion Doane of Oceanside. So successful has she been that the Empire State Campaign Committee plans to send her all over the State. Mrs. Doane being a lawyer, talks convincingly and readily. Her main topic, the child labor issue, is one she discusses from the heart, for at one time she was a child laborer and so she speaks feelingly of that evil.

From child laborer to member of the bar is a long step, and Mrs. Doane's career, now being rounded out by her plea for the ballot, is most unusual. When still in short skirts she studied stenography, and became so proficient that she was employed in the Standard Oil offices as confidential stenographer to John D. Archbold. Thence she went as stenographer to the United States District Court in Brooklyn, the first woman to hold such a position. She studied law off and on and in 1908 was admitted to practice. The late Mayor Gaynor dictated many of his famous and humorous letters to Mrs. Doane, for she was employed in the City Hall as his confidential stenographer.

An early marriage brought her a son —her only child—and he manages her farm at Oceanside, just back of Long Beach. Mrs. Doane takes keen delight in country life when not campaigning, and enjoys her home duties.

Was Once a Child Laborer.

Talking of her work, Mrs. Doane said:

"Speaking seems to come natural to me, as I suppose it does to any woman, if the men are to be believed. It must be said, however, that in spite of many years' association with public men, in spite of reporting stenographically a great many political meetings, it was with a great deal of trepidation that I faced my first audience, a little more than three months ago. Having been in public life practically all of my business career made me feel more at home among men than women, and my first audience consisted of women only, so you can understand that I was a little more nervous than I might have been had my hearers been of both sexes.

"I had heard a woman—one of those fortunate ones whose life had been sheltered—express herself in favor of child labor. And so, like an inspiration, it occurred to me to discuss that subject. One need not be ashamed of having been compelled to work as a child, and I did, and the memory of a little popcorn factory on the lower west side of New York City, where I literally slaved from dawn until dusk in a dark rear tenement room, seldom seeing the sun even, had always been with me. For could I ever forget the dreadful hours with which my brother and sisters and myself hurried to complete gross after gross of little silk balls to adorn the lambrequins that were so much in vogue in those days. And my arms ache yet at the thought of the bundles of flannel bathing suits that I carried from the contractor's shop to our tenement home and back again.

"With all these thoughts so vividly present, it wasn't hard to tell those kindly women who had invited me to speak something about child labor and what equal suffrage might do to ameliorate such conditions.

Kissed the Orator.

"After my first talk to the women on the child labor topic they crowded around me and shook my hand, and one dear old lady kissed me on the cheek, while a rather sciduous woman in the rear of the room wiped her eyes. The woman running the meeting was most enthusiastic and it was her encouragement that led me to continue to talk for suffrage. Since that day there are more demands for talks than I ever imagined there could be. It seems as though every one in the districts surrounding Oceanside, my home, wants to hear at first hand how it feels to be a child laborer.

"That issue I consider the most important and one of the strongest the suffragists can make. If my health holds out I intend to speak until election Day, and I believe sincerely that if we win then the child labor evil will be speedily corrected.

"At my second speech in a nearby village I was heartily discouraged. They asked me to talk in a moving picture place, between reels. It was a small audience, friendly enough, perhaps, but being a movie house the place was in semi-darkness and I couldn't tell from looking at the people how the speech was going. I had journeyed from the city in a pouring rain, was afraid of being late, and had no supper, and as the village was noted for the prominence of the antis, the moment I began to speak a dozen or so noisily shuffled out. I perservered with the talk, though, and the local committee afterwards said I had made a hit, but I didn't think so.

"In spite of all the worry there is a lot of fun in the work. You meet so many different people, and when you can sway an audience it is a genuine delight. It didn't take me long to learn that you have to put 'the punch' right at your audience to get its attention. In telling of the fate of the National Child Labor bill in the last Congress I explained the procedure and my audience applauded when I said, 'Yes, it was Senator Overman, not Superman, who refused unanimous consent and prevented the bill coming to a vote.'

Talked Chickens to Farmers.

"An audience of farmers did not seem much interested in child labor until I asked them, 'Did you ever see baby chicks scratching for the mother hen?' That brought the question home to them as nothing else could have done, it seemed.

"People seem to sit up and take notice when I say: 'We stand appalled at the great war, but in this country we have 2,000,000 children on the industrial fighting line, with almost as great a mortality, and females as well as males are in the front rank.' Old people seem to like references to the civil war, and they nod their heads when I say: 'Not since anti-slavery days has there been a greater moral issue than equal suffrage.'

"In my campaigning throughout Long Island I have been generally treated with attention, though at one place—Quogue or East Quogue—when a speech was being made outdoors, some one threw a baseball at my head and missed me by a few inches. This was offset, however, by the indignation of the men in the crowd, though they weren't able to catch the riotous person.

"Every suffrage speaker will tell you that women are harder to convince than men. But when I see an antagonistic audience of women I do not hesitate to ring in a little slap that makes them sit up, saying: 'Any woman who cannot spare thirty minutes a year to vote is not worth the protection of our flag.'"

ACTRESS RECOVERS CHILD.

Gets a Court Order on Her Husband, William Smythe.

Justice Ford in the Supreme Court yesterday ordered that William Smythe, actor, surrender his daughter, Kathleen, 5 years old, to her mother, Mrs. Marie Nevins Smythe, who is known on the stage as Marie Hartman.

Mrs. Smythe has started a divorce suit, naming Toby Claude, the actress, as co-respondent. She stated that Smythe was living at 110 West Thirty-ninth Street, which also was Miss Claude's place of residence, with the little girl.

The actor said that the girl was in the country and that there was no need of the mother having gone to court to get her.

COLLISION CAUSES ANOTHER

Girl Companion Thrown Over Motor Cyclist's Head Into Auto.

When Frank McCluskey of 4 Brenton Court, Jamaica, L. I., turned for an instant yesterday afternoon to gaze at the wrecks of two automobiles that had collided at Merrick Road and Locust Avenue, Springfield, L. I., he and his motor cycle ran into a third automobile.

Miss Lillian Hagan of Fulton Street and Bergen Avenue, Jamaica, who was riding behind McCluskey, was hurled over his head and into the lap of Mrs. C. J. Hauslein, who was riding in an automobile with her husband, of 46 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn.

McCluskey was thrown head foremost through the glass windshield of the Hauslein car. Mrs. Hauslein was badly cut by flying glass on the right leg and arm.

Miss Hagan suffered a possible fracture of the skull and abrasions of the left knee and ankle, besides a bad scalp wound. McCluskey's wrists were cut by glass and his face and scalp were lacerated.

McCluskey, Mrs. Hauslein and Miss Hagan were attended in a hotel by Ambulance Surgeon Backus of the Jamaica Hospital. Miss Hagan was in such a serious condition that she was put to bed in the hotel.

The two big wrecked automobiles ran together five minutes previously. One was owned and driven by Joseph D. Junkins of Pelham Manor, N. Y., who was accompanied by August A. Herdon of 60 Madison Avenue, Manhattan. The other was driven by Edward J. Waller of 228 Twelfth Street, Brooklyn, and owned by the Rev. Dr. Emil S. Harper, rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, of 792 Carroll Street, Brooklyn. Besides the chauffeur, it contained four young women, one a niece of Dr. Harper. No one was hurt.

AUTO MAIMS LITTLE BOY.

Miss Ballou Carries Injured Lad to the Hospital in Her Arms.

Maturin N. Ballou, author of books of travel, was driving his automobile through Forty-third Street late last evening when four-year-old Samuel Collett of 574 Eleventh Avenue tried to cross in front of it between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues. Notwithstanding all Mr. Ballou could do the boy was hit.

Miss Corinne Ballou, Mr. Ballou's niece, who was riding with him to his home, 55 Powers Place, Yonkers, picked the boy up and held him in her arms while her uncle drove to Polyclinic Hospital. There it was said the youngster's skull was probably fractured, and he probably would die. Mr. Ballou was not arrested, as witnesses exonerated him of blame.

NAVAL ARCHITECT INJURED.

H. J. Gielow Thrown Out of Auto Which Is Driven by Wife.

Henry J. Gielow, a naval architect, who lives at the Hotel Bossert, Hicks and Montague Streets, Brooklyn, was injured yesterday afternoon when his automobile, driven by Mrs. Gielow, ran into a milk wagon on Surf Avenue, near West Twelfth Street, Coney Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Gielow were on their way to dinner at the Atlantic Yacht Club at Sea Gate. The automobile was damaged, and they went home in another car after a physician had dressed Mr. Gielow's injuries, lacerations of the scalp and severe bruises over the right eye.

TRY TO WRECK FAST TRAIN.

BUFFALO, Aug. 7.—Operating officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad were at Stafford, near Batavia, today investigating a reported attempt to wreck the Black Diamond Express. It was found that a pile of tools and scrap iron had been put on the rails a short distance from Stafford Station. The engineer saw the obstruction in time to slow down.

The material was scattered about, but the engine did not leave the rails. No arrest has been made.

OKUMA INCLINED TO STAY.

Japanese Premier Yielding to Pressure by the Elder Statesmen.

TOKIO, Aug. 7.—Owing to the persistent pressure which has been exerted by the Elder Statesmen on Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier now is inclined to remain in office. The Count on July 30 presented to the Emperor the resignation of the entire ministry, in consequence of charges directed against certain of the ministers in connection with the method of conducting the parliamentary elections last March.

Takaaki Kato, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Vice Admiral Rokuro Yashiro, the Minister of Marine, still prefer to retire, it being their express belief that the ministry will have difficulty in continuing in power.

Conferences between the Elder Statesmen and the ministers, looking to a solution of the cabinet crisis, continue. Viscount Sutemi Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, and Baron Ichiro Motono, Ambassador at Petrograd, are being prominently mentioned for the post of Foreign Minister in succession of M. Kato.

Miss Inez Rogers Engaged.

The engagement is announced of Miss Inez Dudley Rogers, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cogswell Rogers of Dudley Manor, Cummington, Mass., to William John Hazel, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hazel of Homer, Mich. No date has been set for the wedding, but it is planned for the early Autumn. Miss Rogers, who has spent much time in New York, is a direct descendant of the Rev. Dr. John Rogers, President of Harvard College in 1685, and of Thomas Dudley, the first Governor of Massachusetts.

Miss Stott to Wed A. J. Picard.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Stott of 132 West Ninety-third Street, anounce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Catharine Oakley Stott, to Arthur Jacques Picard of this city. No date has been set for the wedding.

SUFFRAGIST TORCH ILLUMINES JERSEY

Passed Along by New York Women on a Tug in the Middle of the Hudson River.

SPEECH BY MRS. HAVEMEYER

Accepted by Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, and After a Tour of the State Will Go to Pennsylvania.

The suffragists' Torch of Victory, which began its New York tour at Montauk Point, L. I., early in June and was carried by Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch and Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer to Buffalo, was transferred yesterday to the New Jersey suffrage organization. The transfer was not without its hitches and temporary embarrassments, but the suffragists said that its final success was a symbol of the hitches and temporary embarrassments attending their ultimate victory at the polls in November.

The transfer took place in the middle of the Hudson River. The officials of the Women's Political Union, accompanied by several guests, including Dr. Henry Moskowitz, the President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, left Pier A, North River, at 11:45 on the tug W. S. Holbrook, offered to the suffragists by W. S. Holbrook, the President of the Holbrook Towing Line. It was due to leave at 11:30, but waited fifteen minutes for several belated reporters and photographers. These, however, made their appearance on the pier after the tug departed and fruitlessly beckoned to the departing vessel, gay in purple and white bunting and flags, the colors of the Union.

Arriving in midstream a little above Cortlandt Street, the Holbrook waited patiently for a half hour. At last a dinghy was espied approaching from the New Jersey shore. Drawing nearer, the name "De Gink" was deciphered, and a huge man, known as Fat Willie, drew his 360 pounds erect and megaphoning through his hands informed the restless New York delegates that the Jersey Inspectors would not allow the New Jersey women to board their tug, the A. W. Smith, which was not licensed to carry passengers. Fat Willie generously offered to take the "lamp," as he termed the torch, to the Jersey women.

A brief consultation was held with Mrs. Havemeyer, and W. S. Holbrook, who was on the New York tug, descended into the dinghy and was conveyed by its weighty occupant to the New Jersey pier, where he convinced the officials that it would be quite safe to permit the New Jersey women to carry out their program. With their spirits restored, the Jersey women proceeded to midstream, and the ceremony of transferring the torch took place.

Mrs. Havemeyer made the presentation speech, and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch could not be present owing to the recent death of her husband. Mrs. Havemeyer said that she had stepped up from the ranks to take Mrs. Blatch's place. One of the things, she said, that had pleased her most on the trip to Buffalo, which was welcomed all along the way, was the fact that the women were interested in the torch itself, as a symbol of their progress, and not in its bearers.

The torch was accepted by Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, the head of the New Jersey Women's Political Union, in a little speech. Dr. Moskowitz made a short address approving the efforts of the suffragists to secure political equality. Mrs. Annie Delony Martin recited a poem by Percy Mackeye on suffrage.

The New Jersey women will pass the torch on to those of Pennsylvania in due time.

The tug returned to Pier A shortly after 1 o'clock, accompanied by the Jersey tug, and the suffragists expressed their joy that just as the torch was passed over the sun broke through the gray bank of clouds. They said it was another omen of victory.

The ceremony of transferring the torch is to be seen in moving pictures, and numerous photographers were aboard to make snapshots.

Among those on board the New York tug were Miss Elizabeth Hill, Executive Secretary of the Women's Political Union, who arranged the ceremony; Miss Portia Willis, Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Joseph G. Dean, Mrs. Calvin Tomkins and Miss Tomkins.

After the Jersey tug turned to its home port a suffrage meeting was held in Jersey City. The torch is to tour the State, and Mrs. Havemeyer is going over on Monday to take an active part in the campaign there.

The torch was carried through a part of New Jersey in the afternoon and evening. It passed through Rahway and Perth Amboy to Keyport, whence Mrs. Vadin Curtis took it to Keansburg, and it was presented to Mrs. Henry Wesenman. It was taken later to Atlantic Highlands, where Mrs. Benjamin Price received it at a street meeting. Thence it passed to Monmouth County suffragists, represented by Miss Alyse Gregory. It is to go to Long Branch, where Mrs. Havemeyer will arrive on Monday. She will take it to Asbury Park, where a celebration week is to be held, and will make an address on Monday evening.

WIFE TO JOIN MANCHESTER.

Duchess Sails for Europe and Reconciliation Is Rumored.

Much to the surprise of her relatives and friends in this country, the Duchess of Manchester sailed yesterday for Liverpool on the American liner St. Louis. It was reported that she had gone to rejoin her husband, from whom she has been living apart for a long time.

When the Duke of Manchester sailed for England shortly after the war started he was heavily in debt in the United States and Canada owing to the failure of his million-dollar scheme for providing "pious pictures for poor people." He lived in a bungalow at New Rochelle for a time with Captain Pierre Drouillard and Blair Frazer as his chief advisers and acquired notoriety owing to suits brought against him by creditors.

A friend of the family said yesterday that the Duke and Duchess, while they were not temperamentally sympathetic, were going to try to get along with as little friction as possible.

The Duchess of Manchester came to New York alone on the death of her father, Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, and remained to settle up his estate. Mr. Zimmerman had been very much annoyed by the confusion into which his ducal son-in-law's affairs had been thrown, and when told that the Duke had gone to the front expressed a fervent hope that Lord Kitchener had given him a prominent place.

Princess Engalitcheff, who is suing for divorce, was booked to sail for Bordeaux yesterday on the French liner Espagne. Shortly before the steamer was due to leave she sent word from the Hotel Vanderbilt to cancel the booking. Her husband, Prince Engalitcheff, who was at one time the Russian Vice-Consul at Chicago, is at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

TRACY FUNERAL TOMORROW.

Army and Navy Will Be Represented at Trinity Church.

The funeral of General Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy under President Harrison, who died on Friday afternoon at his home, 14 East Sixtieth Street, will take place tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock from Trinity Church. Full military and naval honors will be paid.

A detachment of sailors and several companies of Coast Artillery from Fort Hamilton will guard the cortege and form the escort to Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn, where the burial will take place.

Among the honorary pallbearers will be Major General Leonard Wood and Colonel John B. Bellinger, representing the army; Rear Admiral Usher, Commandant of the New York Navy Yard, and Captain Thomas S. Rogers of the New York, representing the navy; Chief Justice Willard Bartlett, former Chief Justice Charles Andrews, Paul Fuller, Frank H. Platt, and George Foster Peabody.

Dr. Arthur T. Hills.

Dr. Arthur T. Hills of Bretton Hall, Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street, died yesterday at the Summer home of his brother, Dr. Alfred K. Hills, at Nashua, N. H., in his sixty-third year. He was born in Hudson, N. Y., and was a son of the late Alden and Mrs. Nancy Currier Hills. Dr. Hills practiced in this city for thirty-five years. He was a member of the Republican, Lotos, and Mendelssohn Glee Club. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Anna Bulkeley, and by one daughter.

MACHADO IS ELECTED PORTUGAL'S PRESIDENT

Veteran Statesman Chosen by Two-Thirds Vote of Congress on the Third Ballot.

LISBON, Aug. 7, (via Paris.)—Bernardino Machado was elected by Congress President of the Republic of Portugal yesterday.

Senhor Machado, who was supported by the two principal parties, was elected on the third ballot by a two-thirds vote of the 879 members present.

Senhor Machado has been prominent for years in the public life of Portugal, having served his country as Premier, Provisional Minister of Foreign Affairs, Minister of the Interior, and Minister to Brazil. He has been considered the foremost man in the Republican Party, and before the overthrow of the monarchy was regarded as the logical choice of that party for the Presidency. In January, 1908, he was accused of conspiracy against the Crown, but the charges never were proved.

When King Manuel II. was dethroned and the republic proclaimed on Oct. 5, 1910, after a short revolution, Senhor Machado was appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet formed by the provisional government. The following year he was a candidate for the Presidency, but notwithstanding his prominence, was defeated by Dr. Manuel Arriaga whom he now will succeed. Four months after his defeat he was appointed Minister to Brazil. In February, 1914, he was asked to form a new Cabinet and was successful in his efforts, but he and his Ministers resigned ten months later.

The new President, who is 65 years old, formerly was Professor of Philosophy in Combre University, but was ousted from his chair because he joined the anti-clerical movement. He is an excellent speaker and during his public career has been regarded as strongly pro-British.

One of the interesting stories regarding Senhor Machado is that he served as Portuguese Minister to Washington in 1900 and 1901, under the name of Marquis de Santo Thyrso, but was recalled because he made a premature announcement to his country of President McKinley's death which resulted in Lisbon sending messages of condolence four or five days before the President died. After his recall, according to the story, he dropped the title which was of Papal origin and resumed his family name.

The President of the Republic of Portugal is elected by joint vote of both chambers of Parliament for a term of four years and cannot be re-elected.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

MISSING PAYMASTER WAS SEEN ON A TRAIN

Booth & Flinn Hear That Man Who Robbed Them of $21,645 May Be in Philadelphia.

GRAND JURY INDICTS HIM

Employers Seize Kindred's Automobiles and the Valuables Left In His Apartment.

The big touring car in which Edward C. Kindred, who was paymaster for the Booth & Flinn Corporation, disappeared on Wednesday with the firm's payroll of $22,119.70, and which the police found four hours later at the curb at Centre and Worth Streets, was attached yesterday by the Sheriff's Office, following an indictment returned by the Grand Jury charging grand larceny against the missing man. The Sheriff also seized on a Supreme Court writ all the effects left by Kindred in his apartment at 560 West 163d Street, and attached the smaller automobile found in a Washington Heights garage.

The $4,000 worth of property left here by Kindred will be applied as part payment of the firm's loss. Should the full value be realized the loss to the firm would be reduced to $17,635, as $474.70, in silver coin, was left in the gray automobile. In addition his account in the Bank of Washington Heights, where he had deposited more than $9,000 within twenty months, although he was in receipt of a monthly salary of not more than $150, shows a cash balance of $104.

According to information reaching the police yesterday through Graham Caldicott, cashier and office manager for Booth & Flinn, Kindred had been seen on a train near Philadelphia. Caldicott told Captain William J. Deevy of the First Branch Detective Bureau that a man telephoned to him at his home, 1,533 St. Nicholas Avenue, on Friday night, and gave this statement concerning his belief that Kindred was on a New York and Philadelphia train.

"I left here on the 7 A. M. train for Philadelphia on Thursday morning," Caldicott's informant told him over the telephone. "I was reading the story in the newspapers about Kindred, and noticed a man in the same car who so closely resembled the published description of the missing man that I watched him. The man who looked like Kindred seemed to be accompanied by another man. At least, he occupied a seat with another man, and there were several vacant seats in the car. At the Broad Street Station I hurried from the car to find a policeman, being thoroughly convinced that he was the man wanted. But when I returned to the train with a policeman we could not find the man I had seen."

The man giving this information is in business here. He requested Caldicott and Captain Deevy to withhold his name from publication. After he had seen a picture of Kindred, which was shown to him at the Detective Bureau on his return here, he was sure it was the picture of the man he had seen on the train. The Philadelphia authorities were notified to work on this clue.

The Pinkerton Detective Agency, which has been engaged by Kindred's employers, is working in co-operation with the police and conducting an independent investigation. The San Francisco office of the agency finds that Kindred's father, who was supposed to have practiced law in San Francisco, was never heard of there. No one could be found there or in Oakland who had ever known the younger Kindred.

Inspector Faurot said there was a "hint of a woman" in the case, but of such slight importance that it was not regarded of any particular value. The woman was heard of through a telephone message to some one at the office of Booth & Flinn, offering to furnish a picture of the missing paymaster.

Captain Deevy denied that Kindred had been swindled out of $1,300 by a woman, to whom he had made payment by check. None of the bank vouchers disclose such a check, and it has been made certain that Kindred did not have any other bank account than that of the Bank of Washington Heights.

Detectives yesterday found that Kindred, who was regarded as a model man, who never was seen to drink, smoke, or gamble, who shunned the gay resorts, and had no intimate friends, was known to some of the uptown hand bookmakers, but whether he bet money on the horses to any extent is not known. Race track losses would account for the large amounts of cash withdrawn from his bank, it was suggested.

Although William A. Flinn, manager of the Booth & Flinn Corporation, and Cashier Caldicott, are said to have appeared before the Grand Jury, they still believe that Kindred may have been the victim of sudden illness, as he had complained of the heat and illness several days previous to the loss of the money. At the request of Mr. Flinn the police ordered a search of the hospitals and morgues.

The pistol permit carried by Kindred was issued by Inspector James Dillon in 1913. It is not known whether he had it renewed, which he might have done through a Magistrate, but the police say he had his revolver with him on the day he went to the bank. He was known as a crack shot. Several hunting guns and fishing tackle were found in his apartment.

"Kindred could live a year or more in the woods, as he is a good cook, and knows how to take care of himself in the wilds," said Captain Deevy.

STOPS RUNAWAY IN PARK.

Policeman Twice Halts Horse and Saves Woman and Children.

Policeman Ernst Sharer of the Prospect Park Station was hurt in rescuing Mrs. Rebecca Kaplan and her three children of 19 Cook Street, Brooklyn, when the horse drawing a two-seated surrey in which they were riding ran away on the crowded east drive in Prospect Park yesterday afternoon. Isador Kaplan, who had been driving, stopped the horse at the entrance at Flatbush Avenue and Malbone Street, and was examining the harness when the animal bolted, leaving Kaplan in the roadway.

A quarter of a mile down the drive Policeman Sharer tried to get the bridle of the runaway, and then grasped the rear seat of the vehicle as the animal raced by, climbed in the wagon, and pulled on the reins until he threw the horse. But the animal dropped so suddenly that Sharer was pitched out into the roadway. Before he could get to his feet the horse drew the wheels of the wagon over his legs and was running again.

Max Schwartz, who is in business at 11 South William Street, Manhattan, was following in the automobile, and picked the policeman up. They caught the runaway a half mile further down the drive and stopped him by getting him between the car and the park wall. The woman and children were unharmed. Sharer went to his home after a physician had dressed his bruises and lacerations at the station house.

WILSON'S NEIGHBORS HURT.

Chauffeur of Party Killed in Vermont Accident.

CORNISH, N. H., Aug. 7.—Several neighbors and friends of President Wilson in the Cornish Summer colony were in an automobile accident today at South Royalton, Vt., near here.

A machine carrying Mrs. C. A. Platt, wife of a New York architect; Miss Ellen Shipman, daughter of Louis Evan Shipman, the novelist, and William Platt, Mrs. Platt's son, turned over, killing Charles Sherwin, the chauffeur, and bruising the other occupants of the car.

BABY ZEBRA IS BORN HERE.

The population of the Central Park Zoo has been increased by one. Louis Seibold, watchman of the Arsenal Police Station, making his rounds of inspection last night, saw in the cage devoted to the zebras a new zebra, two and a half feet tall and three feet long.

The animal stumbled about the cage on unsteady legs, while the mother, from time to time, stuck out her tongue and kissed her offspring. The baby is the first zebra born in the Central Park menagerie.

Much interest preceded the arrival over the question whether the baby's coat would be striped or plain, and there was much discussion on the point. The little zebra is almost perfectly striped. The stripes are black. They ring around the body vertically and extend down the legs, each stripe being about two inches wide.

MONITOR FOR SHELL TEST.

Puritan to be Target for Isham's New Missile Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 7.—All details were completed today at the Navy Yard for what the officers in charge consider as the most important test yet made of the new Isham shell. The test will be made at the mouth of the Potomac next Monday morning, and the old monitor Puritan, with modern armor plate supplementing the strength of her protective plates on the side to be attacked, will be the target.

The inventor of the new explosive is confident that the monitor will be sent to the bottom by the first shell to hit the target squarely. Naval officers said such a result, with the added protection given the Puritan, would demonstrate that the shell was the best of its kind in the world.

WORRIED OVER INJUSTICE.

Old Sentence for Murder Causes Judge Freeman to Quit Bench.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Friends of Judge Henry Freeman, who today sent his resignation from the Superior Court of Cook County to Governor Dunne, said that the ill-health which was given as the immediate reason for the resignation came as the result of worry over a sentence imposed on two men twenty years ago.

Two years after Judge Freeman was elected to the Superior Court Charles Kurth and Thomas McNally were convicted before him of murder. The Judge sentenced them to life imprisonment, according to the jury's verdict. It was said that Judge Freeman six years later became convinced that the men were victims of a "frame up," but it was only a few weeks ago that he obtained their release on parole.

PARIS LIKES OUR BEEF.

Refrigerated Kind Put on Sale There for the First Time.

PARIS, Sunday, Aug. 8.—American refrigerated beef was placed on sale in the markets of Paris yesterday for the first time.

The innovation met with great success. The average price of this meat was 13 cents a pound.

It is expected that a few days' trial will demonstrate whether the refrigerated beef is practicable for permanent use.

POSED AS A DRUG FIEND.

Government Employe Raids Store of Third Avenue Pharmacist.

William D. Allen, Jr., a special employe of the Internal Revenue Collector's office, appeared before United States Commissioner Clarence S. Houghton yesterday and said that, posing as a confirmed drug fiend, he had succeeded last Friday night in getting evidence that the Harrison law was being violated at a drug store on Third Avenue near Eighty-ninth Street. Allen swore to a complaint charging four men connected with the drug store with illegally trafficking in morphine, cocaine, heroin and codeine. At the request of Assistant United States District Attorney Emilio Yasselli warrants were issued.

Aaron Segulnwitz, brother-in-law of the druggist, and Nathan Glaser, a drug clerk, were later arested charged with violating the Harrison law, and when arraigned before Commissioner Houghton were held in $1,000 bail each for examination. They furnished security and were released.

Assistant United States District Attorney Yasselli said that after the close of business each night confirmed drug fiends, possessing the password, were supplied with their favorite drug kept in Segulnwitz's apartments above the drug store. He said that Allen, having the right signal, was able to pass Glaser, who was outside sentinel, and another man acting as inner guard, and get into the dimly lighted store, where, at midnight, the drugs were retailed to patrons. The proprietor of the store is said to be in San Francisco.

FIRE KILLS TWO CHILDREN.

Baby Girls Found in Bed Burned to Death and Mother Away.

Tenants in a five-story tenement house at 141 West 138th Street, near Seventh Avenue, were aroused by the odor of smoke shortly after 11 o'clock last night. In a few minutes the occupants, rushing down the stairs and fire escapes, found that smoke was pouring out of the apartment in the basement. Policeman Mauberer of the West 135th Street Station, who turned in a fire alarm, and several residents in the building attempted to rush into the basement apartment, where it was known that a colored family was living, but they were driven back by the flames. After a stream of water had been turned into the basement, firemen entered it.

They found two negro children in a bed burned to death. They were Mary Pickering, 4 years old, and her sister, Freda, 2 years old. Their mother, Mrs. Jennie Pickering, was out at work during the evening, according to neighbors, and had not returned at midnight. The fire did no damage, except to the apartment in the basement.

ROW OVER BURIAL OF BOY

Tony Studo, who was 8 years old and lived at 455 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, went down to the Gowanus Canal at Second Street yesterday afternoon and, with some other boys of his own age, amused himself throwing paving stones into the canal. He pried loose a large stone and succeeded in carrying it to the bank. The effort of throwing it in caused him to lose his balance and he fell in with it. His companions ran and spread the alarm. Some of the laborers on a brick barge near by at once commenced diving for the body.

In the meantime word of what had happened spread through the neighborhood, and a crowd began to gather along shore. In it were the distracted parents of the Studo boy. There also came John Romanelli, an undertaker of Third Avenue and President Street, who is sometimes known as the Mayor of Brooklyn's Little Italy, and Gaetano Mangino, who is also an undertaker and in business at 673 Union Street. They were hovering near when Tony Naparano of 437 Carroll Street recovered the body. The boy's parents gave the body to Mangino, which is said to have angered Romanelli.

Romanelli gathered a considerable following last night, the police say, and went out to look for Mangino. He did not have to go further than President Street and Third Avenue, where his shop is located. Mangino, the police report, was told that his rival was threatening to do him harm, and, gathering his helpers and friends about him, started out to force the fighting.

The clans met near the corner, and a volley of shots aroused the thickly populated neighborhood. The Italian residents flocked to the street in thousands. They kept at a respectful distance, but their numbers were such that they blocked the street. The police figured out after the battle that at least 150 men were engaged in it. More than 100 shots were fired.

When the reserves from the Bergen Street Station arrived they found the fight still in progress, but many of the fighters had retired behind doors and posts, from which shelter they sniped as opportunity offered. About the scene there was closely packed such a crowd that the policemen had to force their way through. It took them most of an hour before peace was restored. In the gutter they found Mangino. He had been shot in the stomach and in the side and had been stabbed twice. Near by was his rival, suffering from a glancing bullet wound in the side. Both were taken to the Holy Family Hospital. Mangino is not expected to live.

When he recovers Romanelli will have to answer a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. The police made one prisoner. He is Vincent Gianella of 153 Sackett Street, who is employed by Mangino. He is charged with having shot Romanelli.

STANLEY WINS IN KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 7.—Ex-Congressman A. O. Stanley, Democrat; E. F. Morrow, Republican, and Fred J. Drexler, Progressive, were nominated for Governor in the State-wide primary held in Kentucky today. Stanley's majority is estimated at 20,000. Morrow had virtually no opposition and Drexler was unopposed.

Mr. Stanley was nominated over Lieutenant Governor Edward J. McDermott and H. V. McChesney. His victory is regarded as a virtual defeat of State-wide prohibition. Mr. McChesney was running on a platform demanding a constitutional amendment to substitute State-wide prohibition for local option. McDermott also favored the county unit law.

KILLS HIMSELF IN PRISON.

Carpenter Found Strangled in a Cell in Yorkville Jail.

Godfried Bischoff, a carpenter, of 330 East Fifty-fourth Street, committed suicide in a cell in Yorkville Prison last night by twisting a handkerchief around his throat.

Bischoff was committed to the prison by Magistrate Krotel yesterday to await trial in General Sessions on a charge of felonious assault. Prison Keeper Fletcher, making his rounds just before 10 o'clock, heard a groan from his cell. He found that Bischoff had tried to hang himself with his handkerchief, but, finding it too short to attach to a cell bar, twisted it around his throat until he strangled.

To Naturalize Aliens at Night.

County Clerk William F. Schneider has announced that hereafter the Naturalization Bureau will be open Monday and Tuesday nights from 7 to 10 o'clock to receive declarations of intention. This follows an agitation of the League of Foreign Born Citizens. Charles W. Weiser, Deputy Clerk of the United States District Court, has also written that the Naturalization Bureau of that Court will be opened another evening of the week during the same hours.

Swimmer Drowned at Rockaway.

Bernard Brown, 50 years old, a foreman for M. J. Crosby at 240 Spring Street, was drowned at Rockaway Beach yesterday while swimming far out from the foot of Hammels Avenue. From the beach Brown's wife and son, Edward, saw him in distress and appealed for aid. Edward Rudinsky brought Brown ashore, where Dr. Victor of the Rockaway Beach Hospital tried to revive him. Brown had recently bought the house at 47 South Hammels Avenue for a permanent home
